William Richer and Charles LaChappell, both 18, of this city, were charged with the theft of an automobile owned by Ralph Beeman of Indiana. Both pleaded guilty. Richer was sentenced to the Cheshire reformatory and LaChappell was given six months' suspended jail sentence, with a warning that he had better adopt a better mode of living. Richer was named as the instigator of the theft by Attorney Bradford. The car was stolen in New London and the young men were taken into custody upon their arrival in this city March 13.

Joseph G. O'Connell of Troy, N. Y., and Harry A. Fiske of Albany, N. Y., both pleaded guilty to a charge of transporting liquor. They gave their ages as 24 years of age and said they came from respectable families. The men were recently bound over from the Killingly borough court, under heavy bonds. Judge Nickerson fined each $200 and imposed 30 day jail sentences.

Mrs. Dwinda Richards of Putnam entered a plea of nolo, to a charge of selling liquor to Oliver Piche. There were five counts against her. It was stated to the court that the woman had a crippled husband and a large family and that the family would be in real hardship if she was committed to jail. Judge Nickerson accepted the recommendation of Attorney Bradford and imposed a fine of $100 on the first count and a suspended jail sentence of thirty days on each of the four other counts.

John Nawcargi of Putnam pleaded guilty to the first two counts of a charge of assault, reckless driving and resisting an officer. A fine of $25 with costs was imposed for reckless driving and $5 and costs for assault.

How a West Virginia woman found a new kind of washday

THIS story was overheard in a Huntington, W. Va., grocery by one of our salesmen, who took it down word for word:

Mrs. T. entered smiling.

"Mr. C.," she said to the grocer, "that Chipso you sold me is the greatest thing I have ever tried in washing clothes. I used to dread my wash days, but now I just put the clothes in a tub of water, and soak them overnight with Chipso. With a little churning around in the morning, and a good rinse, my clothes are clean.

"I wish every woman in the country who has to do her washing could know what a comfort and labor saver Chipso is."

Have you tried a Chipso wash day yet? However you wash, Chipso and water are all you need.

She glories in the smooth and splendid power of the Pikes Peak Motor.

She delights in the sharp but velvety action of Chandler 4-wheel brakes—and takes comfort in the dependability that time has linked with the Chandler name.

But most of all she prefers her Chandler because she knows that the Traffic Transmission enables her to drive anywhere with serene self confidence.

She knows she can never clash gears—never fail to engage the proper gear with expert smoothness whether on hills or in heavy traffic.

She knows that her car is always under perfect control and that she can readily change from high to second or low at any speed!

And so she drives her Chandler when and where she will, with never a care.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

PALACE THEATRE

At the Palace Thurs., Fri., and Sat. will be Whitey Kaufman and his original Pennsylvania Entertainers (Victor Record Artists,) also a big surrounding bill.

Fate, fear and love is the strange compound from which House Peters latest starring vehicle "Head Winds," the Universal Jewel feature coming to the Palace theatre, commencing Thursday, is composed.

It was an innocent trick of fate that made John Peter Rosslyn, as portrayed by Peters, a wealthy yachtsman, and a regular man among men, fall head over heels in love with the petite, though headstrong Patricia Van Pelt, as played by Patsy Ruth Miller. The manner in which the hearty seaman did his wooing, however, was more than just blind luck but rather a sense of judgment coupled with a rare sense of humor and, of course, toleration.

Peters, in his latest role, is in the full sense of the word, a brawny man of the sea, endowed with a sense of the beautiful. In his wooing he did not resort to the usual methods of the cave man of legend.

At the Strand

Brining Up Father by George McManus, is undoubtedly the most successful and best circulated cartoon creation that has ever been known to the Newspaper World. Millions of readers laugh over the funny antics of Jiggs and Maggie daily and twice over on Sunday. The children look forward to the Funny Page as an event that would be tragedy to miss. How many readers have thought just how much funnier the characters would be in real life.

The Strand theater will offer them in real life on Monday, April ... an engagement of one night. They'll all be there. Jiggs, Maggie, Dinty Moore and the lovely Daughter. All in a singy, dancy conglomeration of hilarious comedy. All of the funny things you have seen in the newspaper, and a hundred more that the newspaper has never printed, will be seen in Bringing Up Father In Ireland at the Strand. Don't miss it and don't fail to take the children.

Elman's First Great Success

In October, 1904, Mischa Elman, the famous violinist, was in Petrograd, the star pupil of Leopold Auer, whose reputation as a teacher is now world wide. It happened that a much advertised young virtuoso was to give a concert and Prof. Auer was asked for his opinion upon the artist's ability. "I have a pupil only twelve years old who is far superior," said Auer. This, naturally, was taken as a wild statement by all who heard it, and the news spread broadcast. Auer determined to back up his remarks, and designed an opportunity for Mischa Elman to appear at the opening concert of the Deutsche Liedertafel—the most important musical society of the city.

Auer was to play, but at the last moment he sent word that he was too ill to appear, but that his youngest pupil would take his place. Consequently, Elman, a lad of twelve, played the Mendelssohn concerto, Paganini's "Motto Perpetuo" and a Chopin "Nocturne" with such terrific success that the audience refused to let him leave the stage until he had played a half dozen encores. The following day, the name of Mischa Elman was on everyone's tongue, and from that important appearance the young virtuoso went from one city to another, and today he has played in practically every city on the globe.

This year Elman is again in America, booked for concerts from the Atlantic to the Pacific. His list of engagements includes one in this city to take place at The Palace Theatre, under the auspices of the Norwich Hebrew Institute on Sunday afternoon, April 19.

Broadway Theater

There is no question but what the N. U. A. week program that is at the Broadway theater the first half of this week is one of the best ever seen in the city. Today is the last day and we advise you not to miss it.

For the last half of this week the management announces another big N. U. A. week program that is certain to meet with your approval and will prove as big a hit, if not bigger than the show today.

All the romance—all the thrills of the U. S. government air mail service, has been caught for the screen Irvin Willat production, which comes to the Broadway theater on Thursday, Warner Baxter, Billie Dove, Mary Brian and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., are featured in the leading roles of the production, written especially for the screen by Byron Morgan, author of Code of the Sea and others.

Baxter plays the role of a clever crook who becomes an air postman solely for the purpose of robbing the mails. Living up to the code of service, "Nor wind, nor snow, nor rain, nor night, can stay the pilot in his flight," results in the death of one of the service's most capable men. On "carry on" and it is the beginning of the regeneration of the thief.

The Air Mail is a thrill-filled romantic drama that should prove one of the most entertaining pictures you've seen in months.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

In his annual report as warden of Danielson during 1924, Frank E. Kennedy says that a reference to the budget for the coming year will show that unless there are additional expenditures a tax of nine mills will be sufficient to again enable the borough to make a slight reduction in its debt, and in turn, a reduction in the amount of interest charges, which are estimated at $2,500 for the coming borough year.

This is good news to the taxpayers and indicates careful administration of the borough's affairs. The reduction of the debt by $4,214.55 during the past year brings the indebtedness as of April 1, 1925, to $37,740.96.

A special expense this year will be a sum not to exceed $2,500 for the construction of an additional filtering bed of the sewer system on the borough farm. This expenditure is made necessary by order of the state board of health and is required in order that sewage may not be allowed to escape from the present beds to pollute the waters of the Quinebaug river nearby. This is in line with an effort being made throughout Connecticut to save rivers from sewer pollution.

Representative E. L. Darbie called the attention of the citizens in the annual borough meeting to the fact that a bill now pending in the legislature and likely to be enacted into law provides for the raising of a water commission that will have supervision of all such problems as now confronts Danielson and vested with instructions and authority to free the streams of the state from pollution by sewage and other causes.

Mr. Darbie suggested that in view of the likelihood of the new water commission being created, it might be well for Danielson to build only one filter bed for the present, at a cost not to exceed $2,500, instead of carrying out an optional plan under which the borough's expenditure would be probably $13,000 to $15,000 for a more elaborate disposal system, such as the state board of health would like to see built here. The single new bed proposed will likely take care of the sewage for several years to come, will be a part of work that would be done in any event in carrying out the larger plan and would not obligate the borough for a large sum prior to learning what the proposed water commission might require the borough to do three or four years hence. This also was explained by Borough Engineer W. K. Pike.

Dance in Brooklyn Town Hall Tonight.—adv.

Milo Elwell, ill-starred rum-runner who claims Corinth, N. Y., as his home, came within an ace of being captured here Monday evening, for the second time within 36 hours, instead of falling into the hands of the police at Willimantic.

It was due to State Officer Comstock of the Danielson barracks that he was apprehended at all Monday evening, and there hangs a strange tale, suggesting the old adage about a guilty one returning to the scene of his crime.

Officer Comstock, in civilian attire and in the center of Danielson's business section about 9 o'clock Monday evening was, to put it mildly, a bit surprised when he spied Elwell snooping around and apparently sizing up the situation as it was for the moment. When Elwell started north along Main street Officer Comstock trailed along and followed his quarry into Academy street. The route led through that thoroughfare to a point near the Baptist church, where the Hudson coach had figured in Sunday's seizure here was parked, but now carrying Rhode Island markers instead of the New York registration it had on Sunday. It had been washed and polished, too, since Sunday.

Satisfied that Elwell had another load of liquor in the car, it was Officer Comstock's plan to await the starting of the machine and then to jump on the running board and seize Elwell, to make sure that a charge of transportation against him would hold. Elwell must have recognized the officer, for he had seen him at the barracks Sunday. He was off like a shot out of a gun, tearing around the corner of Academy into Broad street and heading south.

Officer Comstock hurried down town looking for a fast car with which to give chase, but none being at hand had to resort to his Ford roadster for the pursuit. Two miles out on the Brooklyn road the officer decided that he must be ahead of Elwell and stopped to await his coming. He had guessed right, for in a short time Elwell came tearing along like a tornado and easily outdistanced the officers in the race that followed. A telephone message to Willimantic served to get Elwell.

Orpheum theatre, tonight. In Chancery, with a cast of Killingly High school players.—adv.

Secretary John H. Corbett of the Windham county Y. M. C. A. expressed his delight while here Tuesday morning over the fact that the Woodstock Hi-Y team won the state County Y. M. C. A. championship at Meriden Monday evening, defeating the New Canaan Hi-Y team, representing Fairfield county, by a score of 51 to 2, a decisive victory.

The Woodstock team began its climb toward the distinction it has achieved for this county by winning in the elimination tournament for Windham county teams held at Putnam recently. On Wednesday of last week it stepped a notch nearer its goal by winning over the elimination tournament victor representing Tolland county. In the semi-finals at Meriden Monday afternoon, it won from the Essex team representing Middlesex county, 39 to 26, and rounded out its rush to the top in the evening when the Fairfield county team went down before it.

The Meriden games were played in the gymnasium of the Methodist Episcopal church in that city, because the gymnasium at the Y. M. C. A. was not available for the day.

Tuesday morning, the funeral of Mrs. Mary Bailey was held from her home in Attawaugan with services at St. Joseph's church in Dayville, Rev. James McCarthy, M. S., of St. James' church Danielson being celebrant of the high mass of requiem. Burial was in Waterville, Me. The bearers were Moses Berthiaume, Sr., Moses Berthiaume, Jr., Joseph Berthiaume, relatives, Alexander Baribeau, Alphia Bailey and Frank Sromski. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements.

An offer to take court action against anyone guilty of helping maintain what he characterizes as an everlasting nuisance, is made by Dr. W. H. Judson in his annual report as health officer of the borough, if proper witnesses of dumping refuse at the West end of the Riverview footbridge will come to court and testify against the offenders. This dumping recently has resulted in a complaint from the Paco Manufacturing company, whose supply of water for power is interfered with by the blocking of their canal grates with this refuse. Dr. Judson points out that it is impossible for him to maintain a constant watch of the dump for evidence against those responsible, but he is willing to take action if the necessary evidence is forthcoming.

The public library continues to be very much appreciated by the people of this community. This is shown in the 33rd annual report of its activities by Attorney Harry E. Back, librarian. There are 5,000 library cards in use and there was a total circulation of 29,110 books in 1924, giving an average daily circulation of 95. As most of the cards are used for books that go into families, Attorney Back says, it is certain that over 5,000 people are benefitted by using the library. A branch of the library has been continued in East Killingly under the care and direction of Mrs. Lydia A. Barlett. Mrs. Barlett has asked for pay for her services, the report says, but no funds are available with which to pay her. The appropriation from the town of Killingly is so small that it does not wholly reimburse the borough for the wear on the books and for the service which is given outside the borough of Danielson. If the custodian of the branch in East Killingly ever is to be compensated, the pay should come from the town of Killingly, either directly or through the borough of Danielson.

The circulation of books through the schools has continued. This is a requirement made by the state of Connecticut and it is necessary that the boxes of books be distributed among the schools in order that the borough may have the state grant.

By this service, too, probably the wear on the books circulated is greater than the amount of books for the library by the state; but of course here, as in the case of circulation in parts of the town of Killingly, outside the borough of Danielson, the financial side is not the important consideration, but the amount of benefit that is received by citizens in education and in wholesome recreation and entertainment is the principal object sought.

Chief A. P. Woodward wants a borough ordinance that will prohibit automobiles drivers from getting in the way of fire apparatus when responding to an alarm, as this not only delays the department, but may result in serious accidents. This speeding of motorists to fires ahead of apparatus of the department has been a cause of complaint for several years. It is a nuisance and a handicap and wholly unnecessary, the danger not even considered. Chief Woodward is anxious that borough officials make some ruling against it, with a penalty included that will discourage all of the useless stunt.

Mrs. Nellie Virginia Couch, wife of George W. Couch, died Tuesday morning after an illness that has endured since December. The family, which came here from Bridgeport nine years ago, is resident in what formerly was known as the Simeon Danielson farm, on the route leading from Danielson to Goodyear, via Maple street. Mrs. Couch was 52 years of age on February 23. She was a native of Virginia, born at Richmond, a daughter of James and Carrie Cline. She leaves her husband and four children, George, Irving, Charles and Nellie, all resident at home.

The battered old state highway between the northern line of the borough and Elmville has been given a top dressing of gravel and oil and made much better to travel over than it has been for months. This is a section of road that will be replaced eventually with concrete.

Mrs. Ellen H. Codding injured her leg and was otherwise badly shaken up when she fell at her home here.

This is the week of the Easter vacation for the several hundred pupils of St. James' school.

Manager Henry Johnsen of the Orpheum theatre has been at New Haven attending a meeting of motion picture exhibitors.

PUTNAM

The report of the treasurer of the Catholic Women's Welfare council shows the amount of relief and welfare work the council has been doing in Putnam. They have assisted twenty-one families by gifts and clothing and eighty-nine children have been benefited. There have also been donations to the Children's home, the town farm and the hospital. Several members have entertained speakers and the social service and relief committees have been very active. The membership is 123 and the income for the year has been $464.75 which was derived from membership dues, whist parties, rummage sales fool sales, etc. Generous sums have been spent on relief work of different kinds, and there is now a comfortable bank balance. The closing of the First National bank tied up more than $100 of the council's funds.

A county oratorical contest, preliminary to state and national contests, will be held at the High school auditorium on the afternoon of Friday, April 17th. Miss Lois Ransom of Pomfret, a member of the junior class at the Putnam High school, has been selected to represent the school in the competition. The exercises are public.

Roads leading from Providence to the Connecticut line are very much traveled by bootleggers, as evidenced by the arrests made by state policemen, which of course covers only a small part of the traffic. The latest violators to come before the city court were William O'Neill and Fred Trobell, both of Albany, N. Y. When the machine was stopped by State Policeman Arthur Williams Monday there were twenty-one cases of liquor found in the automobile. Officer Williams was stationed on the Providence pike awaiting the Albany car. After he stopped the car and discovered the cargo of liquor, he ordered the men to drive to the Putnam police station, where they were held until later in the day when they were given a hearing. Judge Geissler found both guilty of transportation of liquor and with keeping liquor with the intent of selling. On the transportation count the fine was $200 each, and on the charge of keeping with intent to sell, court assessed them $250 each. The two men were kept at the police station until a check was received from Albany for the full amount.

Public schools opened Monday morning after ten days' vacation and will now run continuously until the third week in June.

Miss Ethel Bennett of Elliott, a student at the Putnam High school, is at the Day Kimball hospital where she recently underwent an operation for appendicitis.

The first post-Lenten social affair, the annual ball of Cargill Council, No. 64, Knights of Columbus of Putnam, attracted one of the largest assemblages that has ever attended their affairs since the first, given thirty-one years ago. The dance was held Easter Monday evening at the large pavilion at Wildwood Park.

The floor of this pavilion is considered one of the best in Eastern Connecticut and this is the first time a large ball has been held there The celebrated "Peachy and His Orchestra" of Milford, Mass., furnished music and this also helped to draw the crowd.

A concert was given before the dance from 8 to 9 o'clock. The programme follows: March, "On the Mall," Goldman; selection, "Manteaux Noirs," Bucaloin; vocal solo, James Cerrone; Orchestra Suite, (a) Conne Briste, (b) Prayer at Eventide, Elle; piano solo, Ben Lanin, Jr.; violin solo, N. P. Casasante; march, "Finale."

An extra attraction this year with Peachy's Orchestra was James Carrone and his singing of popular songs. In the orchestra were three saxophones and Tub Machi sang some of Broadway's latest hits.

About 11 o'clock a light lunch was served.

The general committees in charge of the affair were: Michael White, chairman; Edgar Lucier, secretary; Edmund Keane, treasurer; Ulrick Baker, James J. Charron, Armand Bellerose, Alfred Maynard, A. J. Cavanaugh, Dayville; James Mahar, Pomfret.

Floor director, Alfred Maynard, assistants, Ulric Baker, George Lejeunesse, reception committee, Armand J. Montville, chairman and eight past grand knights.

COUNTRY CLUB PRO. GROOMING FOR LONG BEACH

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Putnam, April 14—Clarence Booth, professional at the Country Club, is practising for entrance in the qualifying rounds at Long Beach, N. Y. Those qualifying will be entrants at the championship match to be played later at Worcester, Mass. Booth has already made the nine holes at the Putnam Country Club in 23 and as this is only one more than the course record of 32, it looks as if he was going to have a good season. If Booth ever gets control of his approach and putting shots that he is after there will be a new star in the present constellation of the golf firmament.

Arthur Cordjer of Putnam, charged with intoxication, assault and resisting an officer, in May of last year pleaded guilty to the first two charges. Attorney Bradford recounted to the court additional complaints against Cordjer for intoxication, being a common drunkard and resisting an officer March 12 last. He was given sentences of one month in jail for intoxication and three months for breach of the peace which were suspended and he was placed on probation. He was given some sound advice by Judge Nickerson. Public Defender Torrey appeared for the accused.

Fred L'Heureux, who was charged with violation of the automobile law pleaded not guilty and elected to have his case heard by the court.

Eddy John of this city, charged with violation of the liquor law February 14th last pleaded not guilty and chose to have the court hear his case.

Walter Nowak, of this city was charged on four counts with breaking and entering a railroad car December 13 last, and the theft of a portion of the contents. He pleaded guilty to the third count and was given a year's suspended jail sentence and placed on probation for that period of time. The suspension was made on the strength of the fact that Nowak was a young man with a family. Judge Nickerson gave him a severe reprimand.

Cases assigned for court hearing next Tuesday: Frank Leone, charged with assault, and state vs Giovanna Landi and Petro Landi, transportation of intexicating liquors and bribery. The assignments for next Wednesday are: state vs Fred L'Heureux, violation of motor vehicle law; Abraham Krug and Mollie Krug, failure to heat leased premises; Wilfred Breault, indecent assault and state vs Eddie John, violation of liquor law.

$1,500,000 WATER BONDS

scheduled for today at Hartford is the hearing upon the petition which seeks the permission of the city of Norwich to issue bonds to the extent of $1,500,000, the proceeds to be used for the purpose of increasing the water supply of this city.

This is the result of an abnormally dry year, the failure of the reservoirs to fill and the large amount of wastage that goes on in connection with the use of city water.

Norwich has as yet taken no action looking to the increasing of its water supply beyond the raising of the dams at the Stony Brook reservoir and the establishment of a pumping station to meet emergency conditions. There have been surveys made of the surrounding territory with the view to determining the most available location for obtaining an additional water supply in case it is decided to take such a step, but no more appears to have been made to cover the entire city with a view to stopping the waste. Norwich at the present time is only about 40 per cent metered.

Then the petition to the general assembly is in anticipation of possible developments. Authority by the legislature to issue a million and a half of bonds does not force it upon the city until such action has been authorized by the city. It is necessary, however, to have authority from the legislature before there can be any such bond issue, and it is this legal step that is being taken at this time.

While the hearing concerns something that must be regarded as a preliminary it is nevertheless of much importance. The legislative committee should be made to clearly understand the situation. Perhaps it will manifest as keen an interest concerning such a large issue of bonds as those representing the community will and perhaps it will require. In case it authorizes the issue, that Norwich must pay the bonds off year by year as it goes along instead of letting them stand forever and the full amount be paid over and over again in the shape of interest.

FIGHTING THE FLY

Perhaps you have noticed the advance guard of the pestiferous house fly. If you have, or when you do, it is time to start your fly swatting campaign. Every fly that is annihilated now will prevent the propagation of millions later on. It is much easier to dispose of the few than of the many, and it can well be said with safety that a blow in time saves nine.

Fighting the house fly is by no means confined to the person with the swatter. There is such a thing as striking at the root of the evil as well as at the evil itself. It is advisable to keep down the number of flies but an effective blow can also be struck by clearing away and removing those things which draw and feed the flies. The housefly breeds in dirt and filth. It will be found in unclean places and it is because it goes from such spots to the home to the distribution of such germs as it accumulates that it becomes such a menace to humanity.

By first tackling the places that serve as an attraction to the flies, by screening the windows and doors to deny entrance to such visitors and by freely applying the swatter to those that get within the restricted area here is furnished a resistance that will mean less flies and more sanitary households.

It is by starting early that the best results are obtained. It doesn't pay to wait until there are thousands before making an offensive. There may be a greater casualty list in a shorter time under such conditions, but one of the best opportunities of keeping down the numbers has been lost. The breeders have been given their chance and they work unceasingly.

Protection should not be overlooked in dealing with the flies. Early swatting is a valuable preventive and so is cleanliness. They make life miserable for the fly but they provide that protection which means so much in the interest of good health.

USING THE HIGHWAYS

The bureau of public roads of the department of agriculture has been making a study of the manner in which motorists make use of the highways. It sought to learn what part of the road the average driver prefers, or at least uses, whether there is a refusal to yield on the part of trucks and whether there is a disposition among all drivers to get onto his part of the highway in showing respect to the rights of others.

As might be expected the condition of the highway plays an important part in the portion of the road used by the average driver. Enough has been established, however, to show that there is no desire to drive close to the edge of the pavement. There is no eagerness to take any chance of being ditched and no desire apparently to get off the hard surfaced area, even though the willingness to sacrifice clearance doesn't fully command itself. Perhaps this represents an unwillingness to yield to any crowding by the other fellow.

One thing that was established, and considered good fundamentals appeal-ed to most everyone, was that the white lines in the center of the road were very effective in keeping traffic in its proper channel.

Perhaps all will not agree with the bureau's report when it says truck drivers "were observed to drive a foot closer to the edge of the pave-under all circumstances they adhered ment than drivers of motor cars and more closely to the side of the road. "Considering their size that is the place where the trucks belong and the width in many instances requires them to be fully on their own side in order to give the other fellow a proper chance.

No doubt proper shoulder conditions would encourage drivers to keep their cars closer to the edge of the pavement, and shoulder conditions are deserving of much more attention than they are getting in many instances. This is true of the tar bound roads as well as the cement highways and particularly those which were laid some years ago with a high crown, none too wide for two cars and with the sides broken and gullied.

OUR NATIONAL PARKS

When the statement is made that already 40,000 reservations have been made by those who are to spend some time in the Yellowstone reservation this summer, it is evident that the spirit of "See America First" is still abroad in the land. This is accentuated by the fact that these reservations are made more than two months in advance of the official opening of the park, and serve as a basis for the estimate that there will be fully 100,000 who will visit the national park the coming season.

Those who have visited Yellowstone are not backward in singing its praises or extolling its beauties. It is one of those great, natural beauty spots of the country and has been made more available and more attractive by the construction of hotels goods roads and transportation facilities. It has been the object of the government, and particularly the bureau which has direct charge of the national parks to get the people better acquainted with them and to bring them to understand the real attractions that exist therein and which have been preserved for he benefit of the public. The increased reservations and the indicated plans of 100,000 or more to spend much time at Yellowstone this coming summer attests the fruits of such labors. And what is true of Yellowstone is likewise true of other national parks, though in less measure.

These great wonder places furnish plenty of attractions for the tourists and the sightseers, and those who have seen them before or after a foreign visit know that trips abroad in search of such charms are entirely unnecessary.

UNIFORM LAWS

Time and again there are situations which disclose the need of uniformity in the laws of neighboring states in regard to common problems. It is not a new idea by any means, for it has long been shown that those who would not be tolerated under the laws of one state quietly cross the boundary into that commonwealth where he can get the benefit of more lenient legislation.

When it comes to the regulating motor vehicles there has been a great puzzle before the person driving a machine through several states to know what to do and what not to do in an effort to conform with the law. What is right in one may be wrong in another, and what is strictly enforced in one may get little or no attention elsewhere.

Auto drivers should understand that Massachusetts has adopted a law making a jail sentence obligatory for the second conviction for driving a car while drunk. A bill that would fix speed limits in that state has been urged upon the legislature. Connecticut drivers contemplating visits into the state may not be disposed to violate either of the laws, in case the speed limit bill becomes a law, but it is only another illustration of the need which exists today of devoting much time to the study of such regulations of other states because there is such a difference in the manner in which the various states undertake to deal with the various problems.

The difficulties in the way of getting uniformity are by no means slight, but the advantage of it can by no means be ignored. Perhaps the merits will overcome the handicaps in time.

PASSING A MILESTONE

"Lemme wear 'em home," William begged in strangled tones. It was the first time he had spoken since his mother had said in a horribly clear voice, just as though she did not care who overhead her, "I wish to look at some long trousers for my little boy—er—for my son, something durable."

Would she never realize that he was no longer a child? It appeared not.

They found a pair that fitted, "Don't you think they are pretty?" his mother asked. The clerk smiled briefly and his mother smiled back. "They are his first pair," she had remarked in that awfully clear voice of hers.

"Oh, I see!" the clerk had said, much too genially, being a middle-aged man, one of the hateful crowd of folks who were always smiling about something not visible to anybody else. "Of course than, he'll want to get into 'em as quickly as possible! Right this way, sir!"

The "sir" had partially taken off the curse but William's ears tingled and his face was flushed when he emerged from the dressing room, where he had taken the briefest sort of glance at his reflections.

If only he had had a chance to sort of practice a bit before being thrust out into the world this way with absolutely no shelter! A large square pillar appearing in his pathway he slid around to its farthest side and leaned against it breathing hard. He thrust his hands into his pockets and then he took them out, recrossing his feet as he did so.

"Oh, here you are!" his mother suddenly said coming around the pillar. "What are you waiting for? Come out in the light so I can see how you look in your new long—"

"Oh, gee mother!" William cried deadeningly. "Aw, come on, let's go! They're all right!"

"Well!" said his mother as they descended in the elevator. "After all the fuss you made begging me to buy you some it does seem to me you haven't much interest in your long tr—"

"Gee, mother!" William almost wailed stepping all over her.

"I never!" his mother said to herself.

In the train going home William sat very stiffly and quietly, wearing a slight scowl as he read the ads up above. A little excitement stirred down deep within him. Maybe now some of those big bruisers at school would quit calling him Willie just because he was slightly built. Maybe Millicent—his eartips grew pink—Millicent was the prettiest girl he had ever seen and she was friendly enough, but she did not look at him the way he had seen her gazing at Tom or Chuck or Goofy, the bruiser trio who thought they ran things in the crowd just because they looked older than they were. Why, he himself was only nine months younger than Goofy! Now that he had 'em wouldn't it be possible that Chuck and Tom would sort of take him in as one of them instead of passing him with that sickening "Hello, Willie!"

However, it was still quite light when the station drew up to meet their train as he dutifully stood exposed to view on the platform, assisting his mother down the steps. Just as though there was somebody back of him getting ready to stick daggers into him. Golly, what a lot of people in the streets and there was that prune of a Mrs. Menthle eying him and grinning! As though it was funny, a normal, casual occurrence—heavens, Millicent!

Perforce he kept walking toward Millicent and she toward him and when she saw him he broke out into a relieved, though cold, perspiration because after her first start of surprise she looked just as though nothing had happened. "Hello!" she had said, with the same arch glance she used toward the bruisers. Heart thumping, William and his mother turned the corner and ran into the bruisers themselves. There was an awful instant in which William's heart stopped beating. If they called him Willie before his parent!

The three big fellows saw his new array all right. They came abreast. "Hello, Bill!" they said severally.

"Say!" William gulped to his mother as they went up their own steps, too contented with life to be remote and reserved. "Say, why, I feel just as though I'd worn long trousers forever 'n ever! Say, it's dead easy!"—Chicago News.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Be Kind to Animals.

Mr. Editor: This being Be Kind to Animals week, I wish to pay homage to the memory of one of the greatest of Irishmen, who dared to stand before the house of commons, and raise his voice against cruelty to animals. His name is Richard Martin, M. P., of Galway. Mr. Martin is generally known as Humanity Martin, or Humanity Dick. He was born in Doublin, 1754, and died in 1834. In 1820 Richard Martin, M. P., for Galway, introduced into parliament the first bill for the prevention of cruelty to animals. The bill was enacted in 1822, but no one was appointed to enforce the act. Humanity Martin and a few humanitarians founded the first society for the prevention of cruelty in 1824. Previous to Humanity Martin's plea in the house of commons Lord Erskine, an Englishman, I believe, made a similar plea, but failed. Great credit is due Lord Erskine for making the attempt. Statesmen ridiculed the idea of animals having any rights. Many scoffers were there, who jeered, gave catcalls and dog barks, but Humanity Martin stood there undaunted by this rodyism, pleading for the speechless, preaching the Gospel according to Proverbs 31st, chapter 8th verse: Open thy mouth for the dumb, and speak in the cause of all such as are appointed for destruction.

If there was a clergyman in parliament at the time, he certainly must have felt humiliated, to see and hear an Irish barrister, doing the work all clergymen should do, but which they sadly neglected.

Humanity Martin's name and merciful act, will live eternally, and the Irish people have much cause to be elated when they refer to Humanity Martin, as the founder of the first society for the prevention of cruelty to animals. At one of the sessions in parliament, when Humanity Martin was denouncing the vivisection and a noted vivisector, many of the people gathered there became faint, some had to leave the chambers, at his vivid discription of a grayhound being vivisected. I hope to live to see the day, when a day shall be set apart from all others, when humans and sub-humans will pay homage, to the memory of Humanity Martin, one of Ireland's greatest men.

Yours truly,
GUSTAVE A. STRYKER.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Frank J. Marshall, who will represent the United States in the international chess masters' tournament opening today at Baden-Baden, is the American champion and a veteran of the game, so far as experience is concerned. Born in 1877, he has been playing chess since he was 13 and for a quarter of a century has been recognised as one of the masters of the game. In 1897 he won the junior championship of the New York State Chess Association. The following year he added the Brooklyn championship to his laurels and in 1899 went to London to compete in the minor tournament of the international congress, having been denied admission to the masters' events. He won the first prize, losing only one game. In 1900 he went to Paris and began his international career in earnest. His debut in the French capital electrified the chess world. He was the only one to win a game from Champion Lasker. Since then Mr. Marshall has been a competitor in more than a score of international tournaments.

Drain, the One-armed Father of Four

When, with four children to support, James A. Drain lost his right arm and hand, his future looked blue and the dreams made while he was a boy seemed shattered.

Born on a farm in Warren county, Illinois, he had attended country school, then Western Normal school at Shenandoah, Iowa, but quit his studies at sixteen to go to work. He obtained a position as clerk in a bank at Lincoln, Neb., and was married at twenty.

Going to Spokane, Wash., he tried to sell insurance and tried other tasks. At 29 he was made county clerk and clerk of the superior court of Spokane County, and began the study of law.

While hunting alone he tripped, his gun was discharged and his arm and hand were shattered. He walked two miles to a farm house and rode six miles to a doctor. After two months of suffering he left the hospital, ten days before his term as clerk of the court would expire, minus an arm, with little funds and with a wife and four little ones to care for.

Determined to show his family that he was not "done for," he obtained a commission to rehabilitate the National Guard in Washington. His effective work won for him the opportunity to reorganize the national body.

Admitted to the bar three years after his accident, he worked in a railroad office and then published a magazine while getting his start in the law. He became a successful lawyer in Washington, D. C., accumulated a comfortable fortune, was captain of the American rifle team that won the championship at Bisley, England, played golf and drove his own car.

On the day the United States entered the World war, Drain at 47, volunteered, was commissioned a major of ordnance, and went to France, where he became so enthusiastic in putting over his plant to increase the number of tank, that he was reprimanded for exceeding his authority.

Returning home a brigadier-general wearing decorations of three countries, he soon earned a reputation for helping veterans, and now at 54 is national commander in chief of the American Legion.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

FINDER OF LEPER CURE BESEIGED BY BANDITS

Within a few days after the U. S. public health service announced the release of lepers as "cured" by a treatment which included the use of chaulmoogra oil, word came from Joseph F. Rock, who located the chaulmoogra tree in Burma, telling of his narrow escape from Chinese bandits.

Mr. Rock was leader of the National Geographic Society expedition to Yunnan Province, China, which found blight-resisting chestnut trees for transplantation in the United States. After a few months in this country he returned to Yunnan to seek plant specimens for the Arnold Arboretum, at Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Mr. Rock spent one night in a dilapidated village temple, full of coffins. His native guard deserted him; outside the town the heads of native victims, captured some days before, were hanging from poles.

"From Tungchwan to Chaotung is five days' journey, and two days out of Tungchwan I had the most terrible experience of my life," Mr. Rock writes.

"With much misgivings I left Tungchwan. The first day passed without incident, but the second had much in store for us. After lunch under an old walnut tree we made our way over the mountains with my 12 Nashi men, 26 mules, 40 soldiers, and all the followers who took advantage of my going and joined on for the sake of protection which the soldiers gave.

"We had not gone very far when my head muleteer came and said that robbers were behind the caravan. I waited for the mules to catch up with us, and as they came in sight I rode on, but not for long, as my boys yelled 'Robbers are coming,' and at that moment they opened fire on us. My native soldiers behaved rather bravely, I must admit, climbed to the ridge and opened fire on the brigands, but we soon found that the brigands outnumbered us considerably and that the battle was to be a one-sided affair.

"We pushed on under fire as best we could through a pine covered slope while the soldiers engaged the brigands, the latter pursued us, and we retreated, all of us, soldiers included, under the fire of the brigands down a deep ravine which we had to cross and up the other side over a most terrible rocky trail. The firing continued the rest of the afternoon. Thanks to the bad aiming of the brigands we lost only one soldier. We reached the small plain of Yichesun, on the edge of it being a small hamlet called Panpiengai. As we reached the plain, I thought, 'Thank God, now we were safe,' but, alas, the brigands followed us, they looted the small hamlet, captured three soldiers with their guns, and while they were busy there we reached the village of Yichesun, where we had to stop for the night.

"Just as I arrived and passed through the dilapidated old gate (but no wall) there also arrived 35 soldier guards sent to us from Chaotung. As I was talking with their officer one of the Tungchwan soldiers came running into the village to tell me that 200 robbers were only 1-2 miles from this village and that they could not hold them back. I sent the Chaotung soldiers to help the Tungchwan soldiers, but soon they all returned with the robbers at their heels.

"I was quartered in a miserable old temple full of coffins in the center of the village. The brigands came to within one half a mile of the hamlet where there was a large temple and of this they took possession. Darkness came on. I never spent such a terrible night in all my life. At midnight the officers of the soldiers came and announced that the brigands were outside and that they could not hold the place and that they could not protect me. I had opened my trunks and distributed $600 in silver among my men, wrapped up some extra warm underwear, a towel, condensed milk and some chocolate, besides ammunition for my two 45 Colts. I sat fully clad waiting for the turn of events. Every minute I expected the firing to start. The soldiers said that they could protect me but not my boxes, and that the best thing would be to retreat and hide if the brigands rushed into the place. The people of the village began burying their few valuables and great excitement ruled the hamlet. It was a terrible wait and a long night.

"Outside of the hamlet were hanging from poles heads of brigands that had been captured some days before. I was informed that 600 bandits were outside the village and that capture was irresistible. I cannot tell you how I felt. However, at 4 a. m. they were still outside and no shot had been fired. At dawn there was no one to be seen. They had vanished."

Stories That Recall Others

The Home Run.

Dick recently moved into a new apartment. His rooms are on the third floor and he is having the time of his life adjusting himself to his new home. A few evenings ago he stepped out to a drug store and returning boldly opened the door of his apartment. The astonished remarks of two women there quickly told him he had entered apartments directly below his on the second floor.

The next night with thoughts of business weighing heavily on his mind, he went to the fourth floor and entered apartments there. Now his friends have brought him a ball of string with instructions to fasten the string on his bed post and follow it up on his return.

A Salute.

Bill works in an office with several others. He has a habit when yawning of indulging in a good stretch which brings the arms above the head in a wave-like motion.

He was visibly embarrassed a few days ago when a business caller at another desk in the office noticed the wave-like motion of the arms, and thinking the salute was intended for him, responded with a similar salute.

The stranger, leaving the building, asked who the man was who waved at him.

"I never saw him in my life, but he evidently knew me."

FELL OR LEAPED 22 STORIES FROM HOTEL IN NEW YORK

New York, April 14—While thousands of persons thronged the vicinity of Grand Central terminal this afternoon, Miss Angelica Morales, a purchasing agent of this city, either fell or leaped twenty-two stories from a room in the Hotel Commodore where she had registered scarcely an hour before.

Her body crashed through the canopy of a one-horse delivery truck standing in a narrow alley between the hotel and the terminal. John Doyle, driver of the truck, leaped from his seat just before the body struck, when a taxicab driver shouted a warning.

Miss Morales, who was forty years old, registered under her own name and that of her mother, Mrs. Frances Morales, giving Boston, Mass., as her residence. Her correct address in this city was found in a card in her pocket. Mrs. Morales, who later identified the body at the 51st street police station, was unable to explain the tragedy.

She said her daughter had been ill and despondent for some time but had not spoken of suicide. Today they went shopping and the daughter, who complained of illness, suggested that they meet at the Commodore for luncheon. Mrs. Morales completed her shopping and returned to their home at 68 West 91st street, where she found notification of the accident from the police.

No one saw the woman fall and it was not definitely determined whether or not she committed suicide.

Finale ..... Entire Company

High lights in the production were provided by a clever dancing ensemble of twelve girls in The Rehearsal and Miss Taft made a pretty picture and danced gracefully in the scene, Eunice and Her Boy Friends. As prima donna of the evening, Miss Taft, was a most acceptable choice and her sweet voice was heard with fine effect in her numerous appearances.

Another one of the dancing hits was the novelty vaudeville number, The Frock Sisters, by Polly Benton, Ruth Eaton and Dorothy Campbell, who were recalled for encores, while The Rolls Royce chorus, in costumes of blue, with Arline Fillmore, in the typical Rolls Royce figure, as the solo dancer for the number, gave a professional touch to the scene, which had to be repeated.

Thumm's Hill Top Casino orchestra in a jazz band programme was one of the hits of the evening and won triple encores for their popular playing.

Harold Bowers and Jack Evans as masculine modistes and Frank Crowell and William Mitchell as mannequins were screamingly funny and the latter two scored another comedy in their tone poem dance from "The Storm."

Mrs. Lyle Fillmore and Ruth Loring in their Golliwog dance, which began and ended with a rolling somersault brought down the house, and another clever dance number was the wooden shoe dance by the Old Dutch Cleansers.

The grand opera number, phrased upon "We have No Bananas," was given with splendid spirit that won a deserved encore and made it one of the features of the evening.

Beautiful bouquets went over the footlights during the evening for Miss Taft, Mrs. Buckingham, Mrs. Myra Frink Ward and Mrs. Lyle Fillmore.

Home made candy was sold between the acts by Mrs. Adelbert Maynard, Mrs. Gertrude Amburn, Miss Gwendolyn Jones, Mrs. Benjamin Mellor, Mrs. Alice MacConnell, Mrs. Eunice Bernard, Mrs. Annie Abel, Miss Emma Headon, Miss Hazel Evarts, Miss Eleanor Fenton, Miss Mabel Erickson and Miss Marion Gibbs.

The Ritz Revue is a Harrington Adams, Inc., production for which Torrey T. McKenney and F. Stephen Wilkinson have been the directors. Mrs. Olive Roberts is the pianist for the production and the Grotto show committee comprised: Louis Brown, general chairman; R. C. Brittin, tickets; James Jones, publicity, Fred G. Prothero, talent, Robert Gray, detail.

DOUBLE WEDDING IS SOLEMNIZED AT ST. PATRICK'S

At St. Patrick's church Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock, a pretty double wedding was solemnized when Miss Margaret A. Cochran was united in marriage with Edwin J. Williamson, both of this city, and Miss Madeline Louise LaRochelle of this city was married to Joseph J. Wargo of East Lyme.

Mr. Williamson and Miss Cochran enjoyed the distinction of being the first couple united in marriage by Monsignor May since his elevation to the dignity of domestic prelate, and the two couples acted as attendants for each other during the wedding service, which was attended by a large number of their relatives and friends. The music was in charge of Prof. Frank L. Farrell, church organist, and Gound's mass and the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin were played. The church was tastefully decorated in floral effects.

Mrs. Williamson was prettily gowned in blonde satin face crepe with hat and shoes to match and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses. Mrs. Wargo was gowned in blue georgette with hat to match and carried a bouquet of tea roses.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Williamson, with relatives and friends, repaired to the home of the bride's parents at 28 Fountain street where a wedding breakfast was served. Mr. and Mrs. Wargo and relatives and friends enjoyed a wedding breakfast served at the home of the bride's parents, 66 Myers avenue.

Mr. Williamson is the son of Edwin O. and Julia Slattery Williamson and has resided with his parents at 30 Penobscot street. He is employed as a chauffeur in this city.

Mrs. Williamson is the daughter of Capt. Archibald Cochran, of Engine 6, Thamesville, and Sarah Campbell Cochran and has resided with her parents at 28 Fountain street.

Mr. Wargo is the son of George S. Wargo of East Lyme and is employed as an electrician. His wife is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William LaRochelle of 66 Myers avenue and has lived at home.

Both couples left Norwich later in the day for a wedding trip to New York, Boston and other places. Mrs. Williamson's travelling suit was an attarose ensemble suit while that of Mrs. Wargo was of the latest style.

After June 1st Mr. and Mrs. Williamson will be at home in their newly furnished apartment at 28 Fountain street. Mr. and Mrs. Wargo will reside in Niantic in a newly furnished apartment and will be at home after May 1st.

Both brides received many beautiful gifts of silverware, cut glass, checks, purses of money and electrical appliances.

AIMING NEW BILL AT STATE'S ATTORNEYS' EXPENSES

One more move in the legislative programme aimed at state's attorneys by the regular republican organization, according to the Hartford Times, was made last week when a bill requiring these prosecuting officials to file quarterly itemized accounts with the state comptroller was favorably reported from the judiciary committee without a hearing and passed at once by both the house and the senate under suspension of rules. The bill was reported by House Leader Benjamin W. Alling, of New Britain, and with a few words of explanation by him passed without other debate.

The measure requires that upon demand from the state board of control, the clerk of the superior courts, the common pleas courts and the district court of Waterbury shall file with the comptroller at the end of the fiscal quarter a detailed list of the expenses connected with any criminal prosecution. Such an accounting would show amounts paid to witnesses, detectives, special investigators, agents, or experts in the investigation of the particular case.

It is no secret, says the Times, that since State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn began his prosecution of liquor law violations in this county, and especially since he identified himself with the movement on behalf of the so-called Wheeler enforcement bill, he has been criticised by stalwart political braves belonging to the dominant faction within his own party. Since the trial of the Chapman case began this hostility has probably increased.

For the past few weeks there have been frequent rumors that a bill would be introduced in the legislature establishing a financial limit beyond which a prosecuting attorney could not go in the preparation of his cases for trial and evidently the measure which has now been passed by the Connecticut general assembly is the outcome of this movement. It has been reported that Governor John H. Trumbull has been critical of the expense features of the Chapman case and that he will sign the present bill.

Alcorn Not Opposed

State's Attorney Alcorn declared last week that if the proposed bill would provide for any improvement in the system of accounting, he should welcome it.

"I did not know there was any such bill pending," said Mr. Alcorn, "and I know of no criticism of the methods of taxing costs in Hartford county. I have followed the methods used by my predecessor, Judge Eggleston. Every item of the taxed costs is scrutinized by the presiding judge and must be approved by him. But if the bill provides a better method of accounting I shall welcome it. I knew of no such bill."

Wheeler's Position

Chief Justice George W. Wheeler of the supreme court also said, according to the Times, that he was unaware that such a bill was being considered in the general assembly. He also said that he was not opposed to itemized accounts and that he thought the method now in practice in Fairfield county, which was cited by House Leader Alling, as being the only instance where itemized accounts were rendered, was a very good one though a little more elaborate than necessary. Chief Justice Wheeler said that he thought no method of accounting ought to be prescribed which would call for such details "as to interfere with the reasonable discretion of the state's attorney and the essential secrecy of certain phases of the administration of criminal prosecution."

Justice Wheeler pointed out that there were certain cases, notably those having to do with the enforcement of the liquor laws, where it would be fatal to justice to force the state's attorneys to disclose the expenditure of certain items in their total costs.

The chief justice has made a close study of accounting systems for prosecuting attorneys and other court officials and has met with the clerks of the superior courts, the judges and the attorneys in an effort to bring the court accountings as closely in accord with the standardized methods prescribed for other state departments as possible.

State's Attorney Arnon A. Alling of New Haven county said that he had no objection to the proposed bill so far as he understood it.

State's Attorney William H. Comley of Fairfield county said that he thought the prosecuting officials ought to be permitted some freedom in the expenditure of money as there were many cases where it was difficult enough to get witnesses without having the added burden of publicity as to how much they were to receive.

Ernest A. Inglis, state's attorney for Middlesex county, said that he thought there could be no objection to itemizing most accounts for the board of control but that he thought the state's attorneys ought to have the right to keep confidential sums paid out to specific detective work. He thought there is now sufficient check on the expenditure of funds to insure the accuracy of the ultimate account.

Several of the state's attorneys pointed out that if a quarterly report should be demanded by the board of control, it might require the giving of information in the middle of a case where it would be decidedly inconvenient to do so.

Other Hostile Bills

Besides this bill regarding the filing of expense accounts the committee on the judiciary recently held a hearing on a bill which would take the appointing of state's attorneys away from the judges of the superior court and place that power in the hands of the governor. No one appeared before the committee to advocate this bill but opposition to it by Attorney John H. Buck of Hartford, who said his knowledge of the situation was confined to this county, met with sharp counter questions by members of the committee, notably Representative Ernest L. Averill of Branford and Chairman Alling of New Britain.

Another bill has been heard by the judiciary committee which would prevent the state's attorneys from practicing before juries in civil cases.

Salary bills, including one providing for an increase of $1,500 in the salary of the state's attorney for New Haven county and one providing for a $3,000 increase in the salary of State's Attorney Alcorn were also heard last week in the judiciary committee.

MANY THRILLS FEATURE START OF MAJOR LEAGUE TEAMS IN RACE FOR PENNANTS

Chicago, April 14.—(By The A. P.)—All the thrills of an entire season were crammed into the opening struggles today of the annual baseball campaign, before a quarter of a million fans.

The king of swat was sick abed but his mates shelled the fences with fourteen home runs.

The Boston Red Sox pushed the Athletics into an extra inning before acknowledging defeat.

The Cleveland Indians made twelve runs in one inning, but their St. Louis hosts were only slightly less expert with the war clubs.

Pete Donohue of the Cincinnati Reds put over the first shutout of the season, the St. Louis Cardinals being victims.

All the National League contests except the Chicago-Pittsburgh game backed the thrill of a home run, but each American League game had one or more, the Athletics and Boston registering five.

The National League Parks elaborated their opening ceremonies in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the circuit.

President Heydler of the National League attended the Giants-Braves game at Boston, President Johnson of the American League attended the opening contest at Detroit, and commissioner Landis at the Chicago Cubs.

Walter "Rabbit" Maranville, one of the long list of players disabled by training trip casualties, hobbled to the plate today at the Chicago-Pittsburgh game to receive a floral crutch. Discarding one of his regular crutches, he wrapped his bandaged leg around the floral support and hobbled to the dugout with the assistance of the white haired baseball commissioner.

The slugger's roll of honor for the day includes Charley Jamieson, of Cleveland, who made the first home run of the season in point of time, in the first inning at St. Louis; Earl Sheely of Chicago White Sox, Miller, Poole and Welch of the Philadelphia Athletics, Flagstead and Harris of the Boston Red Sox, Myatt and McNulty of Cleveland, Pashal, and Meusel, of the New York Yankees, Ken Williams, of St. Louis Browns, and Alexander and Hartnett the Chicago Cubs battery, who scored the only four base blows of the National League for the day.

The Boston, Brooklyn and Cincinnati National League fans had to be content with two and three baggers and not so many of them.

The Yankees, with the world's champion Washington team as attraction, drew the largest throng of the day, close to fifty thousand. Chicago Nationals were next with their second largest crowd in history, 35,000. Detroit was close behind with nearly 25,000 and the other crowds ranged from maximum capacity down to 15,000 at Boston.

Home games will be played on the playground diamond off High street which it is hoped in another year can be placed in better shape for baseball playing. It was last year that a number of interested alumni fans got together and purchased a number of portable bleacher seats for the diamond. It is possible that the first scheduled game of the season will be played on Friday next with the South Kingston High school nine from Wakefield.

INTERCLASS LEAGUE AT BULKELEY IS PLANNED

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, April 14—Plans for an inter-class baseball league are being seriously considered by the Bulkeley High management. If plans are carried through as present indications point toward this accomplishment, it will mean that the league will get under way shortly. The Varsity ruling is to be adhered to in this league and all Varsity players will not be allowed to participate in any of the league contests. This means that the seniors who have eight players on the Varsity nine will not be allowed to participate. It will be a handicap under which the seniors will have to struggle with. The other classes will benefit by this arrangement, for no other class is hit as hard as the seniors.

A silver loving cup which has been donated by Head Master Homer K. Underwood, as an incentive to be given the class winning the most games. However if this plan is carried through it will interfere with the practice work of the varsity nine which uses Morgan park for its sessions each day. There is no other field in the immediate vicinity on which these games can be arranged to be played.

DWYER MAKES IMPRESSIVE SHOWING AGAINST COLUMBIA

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, April 14—Johnny Dwyer's easy victory over Columbia University yesterday was a source of pleasure to his many friends in this city. In the annual battle for the Metropolitan title among the college nines, Fordham seems to have the edge over its other opponents. New York University was defeated by Columbia by almost the same score by which Fordham won Monday. With the overwhelming victory scored over Columbia by Dwyer for Fordham it gives this team early honors for leadership in the three cornered battle for the championship of the big city.

It was Dwyer's second start this season, and in the game yesterday he allowed but six hits, four less than at New Haven against the Yale batters on the 4th of this month. Reports emanating from the big city had connected Frankie Frisch the former Fordham flash, and now captain of the New York Giants, who was present during the contest was there for the expressed purpose of looking the former Whaling City athlete over and to make a report to his chief John J. McGraw. Dwyer's efforts against Columbia were marked by a total of ten strike outs and other fine pitching accomplishments. His work is being steadily watched by New Londoners. His next pitching effort will be directed against Georgetown University in the southern trip which is being planned by the Fordham team.

RECORD CROWD SEES CUBS BEAT PIRATES

Chicago, April 14—The largest crowd which ever attended a National league opening here—more than 38,000—saw the Chicago Cubs defeat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 8 to 3, today. It was the second largest crowd that was ever in the Cubs park, and fringed about the outfield, making a hit into this overflow good for two bases.

The Cubs won the game by bunching their hits, one of which was a home run drive over the bleacher wall by Hartnett with two mates on base. Grover Alexander, who pitched in mid-season form kept the visitors' hits well scattered, and smashed out the first homer here of the season. Both the Pirates' runs were helped across by errors.

"PRO" GOLF TOURNEY TO BE PLAYED AT CHICAGO

Chicago, April 14—(By the A. P.)—The professional golfers' championship will be played on the four courses of the Olympia Fields Country Club, Chicago, September 21-26, it was announced today by President George Sargent.

President Sargent of the Professional Golfers' Association said that Walter Hagen expected to defend his title, won last year at French Lick Springs, where he defeated Jim Barnes of New York in the final rounds.

Elimination rounds in various golf centers will reduce the eligibles to about 80 professionals prior to the championship tournament. Those players will qualify the best 32 by medal play and then the matches at 36 holes will cut down the field until the finals settle the title.

The P. G. A. meet is the only national golf event to be played in Chicago this year, and it will serve as a dedication of the new million dollar club house which has floor space of more than four acres. The building stands as a hub to the four championship links, which have been pronounced by leading professionals as among the most severe tests of golf in the country.

ATHLETICS BEAT RED SOX IN 10-INNING BATTLE

Philadelphia, April 14—The Philadelphia Athletics opened the home season before a crowd of approximately 22,000 today and by a game, uphill battle overcame a six run lead that Boston enjoyed for seven innings and won out in the tenth by the score of 9 to 8.

Four pitchers saw service for the visitors, while Connie Mack used five. Ferguson, who started on the mound for Boston, held the opposition safe until successive home runs by Miller and Poole in the 7th and another by Pinch-Hitter Welch with two on in the eighth sent him to the showers.

Circuit drives by Flagstead and Harris in the 8th and 9th innings kept the visitors in the lead but the Athletics tied the score in the 9th and in the tenth found Rudy Kallion, former coast leaguer, for three hits that settled the contest. The score:

The visitors did not get a runner to third base and only two as far as second. Haines lasted five innings, and all four of the Cincinnati runs were made off his delivery. Sensational outfielding by Holm and Mueller kept down the Reds' score. Hargrave was robbed of three triples by wonderful catches by these two gardners. Hornsby, champion hitter of the league, failed to get one safe hit in four times up. A crowd of 32,000 witnessed the opening game. The score:

CONNECTICUT BOXER WINS AN AMATEUR TITLE

Boston, April 14—While the semi-final bouts of the Amateur Athletic Union boxing tournament here tonight took heavy toll among the contenders of some districts, the finalists selected were representative of nearly every section of the country.

Los Angeles led with three men. New York and Buffalo had three bouts each but qualified two other representatives each for the finals. Two fighters from St. Louis and Milwaukee stayed. Boston was represented by two neighbor cities but her own four competitors had dropped out. Dartmouth, Washington and Connecticut, each had one man in the finals.

Alfred Rollinson of Shelton, Conn., was the first man to win a championship. Although his height and reach were shorter than those of James McCulle of Buffalo, his opponent in the 112 pound class, he won a decisive victory by his fast clean lefts to the head and body.

Thomas Lawn of New York entered the finals in the 135 pound class by winning a close decision over Joe Conley of Boston. He will meet Jim McGonigle of Weymouth, as the result of the default of Ray Dodd of Indianapolis. Dodd refused to fight because of the condition of his hands, although physicians had pronounced him fit.

VANCE WINS OPENING BATTLE FOR BROOKLYN

Brooklyn, April 14—Brooklyn opened its season at Ebbets Field today by defeating Philadelphia 3 to 1, in a pitcher's battle between Vance and Carlson. The Dodgers went to the front for good in the second inning when a pass to Johnson, Stock's single, an error by Huber and a double steal scored two runs. Fournier counted in the sixth on his long triple and Johnston's sacrifice fly.

Twenty-two thousand fans witnessed the game, which was opened with the usual parade of players, the raising of "Old Glory" and the throwing out of the first ball by Borough President Joseph Guider of Brooklyn. The score:

BRAVES RALLY IN THIRD AND BEAT OUT GIANTS

Boston, April 14—A third inning rally in which Boston scored four runs enabled them to defeat the New York champions 5 to 4 in the opening game of the league here today in the ninth. Meusel, pinch-hitter, scored Wilson on a triple but Walker, running for Meusel, was tagged at the plate and the tying run was blocked. Burrus was outstanding in the fielding game. CHAPMAN TECH PLAYS SCORELESS GAME AGAINST ALUMNI TEAM AT NEW LONDON

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, April 14—Chapman Tech battled with the Alumni for six innings this afternoon, but the best either team could get was a scoreless draw. The hitting of the two teams was sparse, neither team gaining any decided advantage through their batting ability.

Gero, speed ball king of the local school nine, easily had things his own way and allowed but two hits during the abbreviated contest which was called off at the end of the sixth inning due to darkness. Opposed to Gero was Cruise of the last season's Tech nine, and like his rival he held the opposition well in check by his hitting. All Cruise allowed was two hits.

Both teams went out with a clock-like regularity and only in the opening stanza did either team really threaten to score, and that was Chapman Tech. Courbois led off with a hit and pushed second and third but lack of cooperation from his mates left him there stranded. It was a fast played game with the two sides losing little time in extinguishing the other.

The men included in the Alumni ranks are in the majority all college men who spent the holidays in this city. The score:

SHORT SESSIONS YESTERDAY IN BOTH BRANCHES OF STATE LEGISLATURE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Hartford, April 14.—Both branches of the legislature rushed business at today's sessions to make room for the hearing on the Wheeler enforcement bill. Several bills relative to the fish and game laws were passed after discussion.

SENATE.

The senate was called to order at 11.25 by Lieutenant-Governor Brainard. Chaplain Ayres offered prayer.

Unfavorable reports were received from the committees on citoies and boroughs on the following bills relating to the city of Bridgeport: Senate bill 349, requiring that notices relating to the municipal government of Bridgeport shall be published in each newspaper in the city; senate bill 165, relating to the police force; senate bill No. 16, giving the common council power to establish lines on land adjoining highways; senate bill No. 15, defining the executive authority of the mayor relating to the enforcement of law. The reports were accepted and the bills were rejected.

An unfavorable report was received from the committee on cities and boroughs on the bill introduced by Senator Challenger to prevent the disposal of garbage within the limits of any city or town except by incineration. The bill was rejected.

The committee on incorporation reported unfavorably on the bill incorporating the General Trading company of Hartford. The bill was rejected.

A favorable report was received from the committee on appropriations on a bill which provides that the salary of the highway commissioner shall be not less than $5,000 nor more than $8,000, the amount to be determined by the board of control. So much of section 2,312 of the general statutes and chapter 296 of the public acts of 1919 as is inconsistent with the provisions of the act is repealed. The bill was tabled for calendar and printing. This bill does not provide for an increase in the salary of the commissioner and merely clarifies the statute relating to his compensation.

House bill No. 543, providing for the submission of a budget by local school boards to town meetings, was taken from the table and passed in concurrence.

The use of the senate chamber was ceded to the committee on cities and boroughs.

Calendar.

Page 4—House bill No. 407, relating to the practice optometry in concurrence with the house, authorizing the Eastern Light and Power company to [illegible] Essex Light and Power company.

The senate adjourned to Wednesday forenoon at 11.15.

THE HOUSE.

The house was called to order at 11.30 by Speaker Darbie. Prayer was made by Rev. Arthur F. Lewis, house chaplain. Acts passed by the senate were received in the house and were placed on the calendar. The resolution providing an amendment to the constitution, that will give each town at least one representative was taken up and was placed at the foot of the calendar. The eact amending the report of the present fish and game laws was explained by Representative Wheeler, chairman of the committee on fish and game. The principal changes are providing for a chief warden who shall have supervision of all warden matters. An increase is made in the license fees.

The for hunting and fishing are each increased one dollar. A provision is made for a combination license permitting both angling and hunting for which the fee will be three dollars and fifty cents. The law concerning the killing of deer is amended to permit the owners or lessees of land to use a rifle to kill deer found doing damage.

Hunters and anglers must have their license with them when hunting or fishing. It also provides for the acquisition of streams by the state. On this stream women must have a license but children under sixteen must have a permit which can be secured without cost. The legal length of perch has been made seven inches and the number that may be caught is limited to thirty. The bill also contained a new feature as it provides protection for the blue crab. Mr. Wheeler said that commercial enterprises were using such devices as would soon exterminate the species if they were not checked. The bill does not affect any one taking them with line, or scoop. No license fee is added.

Representative Bell of Salisbury said as the boys under sixteen had been taken care of, he had no objections to the bill. Mr. Turnhill of Brookfield approved of the bill on the whole but objected to the increase of the license fee.

Mr. Hungerford of Watertown said that he appreciated the consideration shown the opponents of the bill as first presented and was now in favor of the passage.

Mr. Bugbee of Old Lyme was opposed to the increase in license fee as it would affect some of the old residents in his town who wanted to catch a mess of eels. He wanted something done in this matter and Representative Hill of Shelton said that he too wanted something done and moved the previous question. The bill was then passed with a hardly discernable negative. The substitute for H. B. 258 revising the charter of the city of New Haven on motion of Chairman Lynch of the cities and boroughs committee was recommitted to the committee for further hearing. H. B. 171, concerning instruction on the use of the flag in public and parochial schools was taken from table and on recommendation of the committee on education was rejected. The judiciary committee reported unfavorably on the bill introduced by Mr. Brinsmore of Washington, a former member of the civil service board, that provided for civil service provisions in filling offices in the state. The report of the committee was supported at some length by Bell of Salisbury. He contended that the bill was one of high ideals but there was no need for it. The action of the government of this state had been exceptional and had had the general approval of the state. Mr. Brinsmore supported the bill and hoped that the report of the committee might be rejected and the bill passed. Rep. Clark of Haddam endorsed the rejection of the bill. He cited the constitution of the office of internal revenue in this state. President Wilson removed an efficient officer and appointed one who held the office for eight years and at the end of that time but two of the original employees remained. "Civil service had worked well" Minority Leader Brandfield of Portland deplored making this a political question. Mr. Mullhris of Seymour moved the previous question which was ordered by a vote of 108 yeas and 24 nays after the vote had been doubted.

The report of the committee was adopted and the bill rejected.

Bills on the calendar passed were: No. 774. An act repealing an act authorizing the town of Trumbull to issue bonds. Substitute for H. B. No. 971. An act amending tan act revising and codifying the fish and game laws. Substitute for No. 548. An act authorizing the city of Waterbury to issue sewerage bonds. Substitute for No. 782. An act authorizing the town of Newington to issue bonds. Favorable report of the committee on finance. Substitute for No. 790. An act concerning the taking of shad. Favorable report of the committee on fish and game. Substitute for No. 916. An act providing for reimbursement of the town of Newington for the construction of a state aid road. No. 872. An act amending an act concerning the power of the town of Bloomfield over the construction of buildings. Substitute for No. 93. An act concerning appraisal of real estate and regulation of loans to corporations and societies by building and loan associations. Substitute for No. 528. An act amending an act revising the charter of the city of New Haven. No. 974. An act concerning commitment of insane persons.

House adjourned at 1 p. m., until Wednesday at 11:30.

An Old-fashioned suggestion for NEW-FASHIONED housekeeping

Ivory is 46 years old!

Yet it is as modern and up to date as —well, as sterling silver.

Ivory has outlived a thousand fads and imitations and is still the fashion, because, like solid silver, it is genuine, it is pure, it serves every modern purpose, better than anything else you can buy.

One PURE soap for everything!

Millions of the most up-to-date housekeepers use but one kind of soap in their homes—not laundry soap, not shampoo soap, not mysterious "special" soaps, not fancy perfumed soaps, but IVORY Soap—so pure and mild that it will safely cleanse the tenderest skin or the most delicate fabric, and yet so rich in cleansing suds that it may be used for any soap-and-water task.

Use Ivory for your laundry work, for instance, and you will probably so prolong the life of your clothes that the saving in this way alone will more than pay the cost of the soap. Wash your lovely china and glass and silver in a big pan of warm frothy Ivory suds, and you will wonder why you have ever let your hands endure soaps less pure and gentle.

Grateful hands!

Oh, how grateful your hands will be for the kindly Ivory suds, whatever your cleansing task! You cannot expect to cure the soreness caused by many immersions in hot, harsh soapsuds, by washing your hands two or three times a day with Ivory Soap in the washbowl! You must begin with Ivory, every day.

Remember, Ivory is made in four forms, for every soap-and-water task, and it is as fine as soap can be, regardless of price or promises.

IVORY Flakes for shampooing

For a wonderful, sudsy, quick-rinsing shampoo, nothing is finer than Ivory Flakes. Pure, rich suds that remove oil and dust thoroughly, without irritating the scalp, and then rinse out completely, leaving the scalp soothed and the hair light and fluffy.

Here is a fine, simple treatment for your complexion

Wash your face once or twice daily with warm water and Ivory Soap. Rinse in warm water and follow with a dash of cold. Dry thoroughly by patting with a soft towel. If your skin needs it, rub in a little pure cold cream. This simple method insures perfect cleanliness and that lovely softness every woman wants.

EARLY DRIVE AT NEW LONDON MEANS TROUBLE FOR SUB. BASE SAILOR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 14—Carl Angale, a sailor at the submarine base, evidently took a chance of operating an automobile without a license last night for he was found in his Ford coupe driving at 4 o'clock this morning, on Atlantic street. Angale's license was suspended on the 13th of March for reckless driving. The suspension was for a period of 30 days so that he would have had his permission to operate next Saturday. He did not wait for that, however, but started out last night and thus fell into the clutches of the police as a law violator. His defense was that he was accompanied by a marine and that the latter was the operator of the car, but that contention was denied as Officer Sloan saw Angale at the wheel of the car on State street, just before the arrest was made. Angale was fined $10 and had the money to pay.

Better halves and bitter halves

(On Matrimony and My Lady Nicotine)

It makes a great hit with your better half to renounce your bitter halves. You know; those cigars that get pungent or acid-smelling when the fire creeps past the middle.

But now let's talk about Blackstone! You see there isn't a bitter half in a thousand Blackstones. Every leaf of Havana used for Blackstone's fragrant 100% Havana filler is individually examined for mildness and perfect burning before it is rolled into Blackstone Cigars.

That's one reason why nearly half of all Blackstones are bought in pocket packages of 5 or 10 cigars. You open your own box of foil-wrapped, factory-fresh cigars when you buy a pocket package.

Blackstone was a fine cigar 52 years ago. It was even finer 10 years ago. It is at its very finest in this year of 1925!

POETRY

Wanderlust

Beyond the East the sunrise, beyond the West the sea,
And East and West the wanderlust that will not let me be;
It works in me like madness, dear, to bid me say goodby!
For the seas call and the stars call, and oh, the call of the sky!

I know not where the white road runs, nor what the blue hills are.
But man can have the sun for friend and for his guide a star;
And there's no end of voyaging when once the voice is heard,
For the river calls and the road calls, and oh, the call of a bird!

Yonder the long horizon lies, and there by night and day
The old ships draw to home again, the young ships sail away;
And come I may, but go I must, and if men ask you why,
You may put the blame on the stars and the sun and the white road and the sky!

—Gerald Gould.

The Evening Cloud

A cloud lay cradled near the setting sun,
A gleam of crimson tinged its braided snow;
Long had I watched the glory moving on
O'er the still radiance of the lake below.

Tranquil its spirit seemed, and floated slow!
Even in its very motion there was rest;
While every breath of eve that chanced to blow
Wafted the traveler to the beauteous west.

Emblem, methought of the departed soul!
To those white robe the gleam of bliss is given,
And by the breath of mercy made to roll
Right onwards to the golden gates of heaven,

Where to the eye of faith it peaceful lies,
And tells to men his glorious destinies.
—John Wilson.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 15c and 30c.

Hobart, superintendent of the Groton and Stonington Traction company whereby the door on the sidewalk side of the 345 p. m. school car for Stonington would be the one opened, there being danger from passing automobiles if the other door was used.

A letter missent to Charles S. Hammond as Secretary of the Westerly Chamber of Commerce was reported as received by Secretary Hawke too late for consideration by the Westerly chamber relative to cooperation in obtaining a 24 hour service by the Western Union telegraph office which is now opened from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m.

"You are entering Pawcatuck" was the sign voted placed on the highways from Stonington to Pawcatuck, also from Norwich to Pawcatuck.

That a traffic officer be stationed at the junction of Liberty and West Broad streets during June, July, August and September was the recommendation to the selectmen, adopted; also to them was referred the placing of a white line in the highway at the corner of Mechanic and West Broad streets, to prevent the cutting of the dummy cop. A recommendation that the Mechanic street side of the gas filling station on the corner be used for an entrance and the West Broad street side for exit only was to be followed up.

Howard M. Barber, Judge William A. Wilcox, Frank L. Furniss, William S. Crandall and Andrew W. Bell were named as a committee, Henry A. Stahle and L. C. Purtill having declined nomination, to take up with the New Haven railroad authorities the widening of the underpass of the railroad on West Broad street by lengthening the bridge at least 20 feet; arrangements are to be made for the New Haven engineers to go over this proposition with the committee, Town Solicitor George R. McKenna said that "Nothing more important could be taken up by the Pawcatuck board."

A. W. Burnham presented a petition signed by sixteen merchants protesting the parking of automobiles in the business section of Pawcatuck for more than 30 minutes. He said his observation had shown him that most of these automobiles bore Rhode Island license plates and he said "they accomodate themselves by discommoding us." L. C. Purtill thought that parking legislation along these lines would tend to drive away business. The protest of Arthur N. Nash for the discontinuance of a parking privilege on the Pawcatuck bridge was rferred to Selotman Babcock, along with the previous petition.

Charles Devaney requested that the board assist him in having the town accept Mystic avenue in Lower Pawcatuck as a town highway and it was recommended that he proceed by drawing up the proper petition to submit to the selectmen.

RECOVERY IN MARKET

New York, April 14—Stock prices bounded upward under the leadership of the rail and motor shares. The demand for stocks was broader than at any time since the culmination of the drastic reaction two weeks ago, due largely to the resumption of pool operations, which were facilitated by relatively easy money rates.

The revival of interest in the rail group was based on reports of progress in the negotiations for the consolidation of some of the southwestern carriers. The recent changes in the directorates of some of these roads has been widely construed as a preliminary step in this connection. Missouri Pacific common and preferred, "Katy" common and preferred, Kansas City Southern and Chicago and Alton common and preferred were bid up 1 2-2 to 2 1-2 points.

Ann Arbor preferred continued to respond to rumors of early dividend action, climbing more than three points to a new 1925 high at 54 3-4. Nearly a score other rails showed net gains of a point or more, the list including Atlantic Coast Line, Omaha preferred, Lackawanna, Great Western preferred, Lehigh Valley, Northern Pacific, Texas and Pacific and Union Pacific. Texas and Northwestern common was hammered down to 47 1-2, the lowest price since 1925, and then rallied to 5 where it was up 1 1-2 on the day. The preferred touched a new low at 101 3-4 and then rallied a point for a small fractional net gain.

The automotive issues gave another impressive demonstration of strength, Motor issues standing out with a gain of more than 7 points at 145 3-8, Maxwell B soared more than 5 points to a new top at 32 and Willys Overland preferred established a new peak at 93. Jordan, White, Pierce Arrow preferred, Studebaker, Warner, Stromberg carburetor, Bosch magneto and Nash moved 1 to 5 points higher.

Steady accumulation of United States Steel common, which touched a new high on the current movement at 137 and then eased to 136 3-4, up 1 5-8, stimulated the buying of other industrials. American Can advanced 3 3-8 to 98 and General Electric, Dupont, International Paper, Texas Gulf Sulphur, United States cast iron pipe, American Chemical, American Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit, Commercial Solvents issue, Coca Cola, Fruit, Gold Dust, Loose Wiles, Republic Steel, United Fruit, Utah securities and Worthington Pump all showed gains of 2 to 7 points.

The oil shares failed to participate in the advance, being held in check by reports of increased production and rumors of further cuts in crude prices.

Call money held steady at 3 1-2 per cent all day. Time funds were more plentiful with a few loans arranged at 3 3-4 per cent for the shorter maturities. Prime commercial paper also eased somewhat being quoted at 3 3-4 to 4 per cent. instead of a flat four per cent.

Reports of French francs, which dropped about four points to 5.13 1-2 on the failure of Briand to form a new French ministry, was the feature of the irregular foreign exchange market. Demand sterling held firm around $4.78 Norwegian kroner touched a new high at 16.00 cents while Japanese yen recorded a new top at 42 cents.

BOND MARKET

New York, April 14—A revival of investment buying stimulated trading in bond market and lifted prices moderately higher. The change in sentiment, which contrasted sharply with yesterday's flagging interest, was probably based on indications of easier credit conditions. It was reflected in the establishment of several 1925 high records in the liberty bond list, the recovery of French obligations and active bidding for the high grade railroad liens.

The plentiful supply of time funds which were available as low as 3 3-4 per cent. contributed to the strength of United States government issues. Three of the liberty bonds, the first, second and fourth 4 1-4S scaled new peak prices for the year.

Despite the delay in settling the French ministerial crisis, selling pressure against French bonds relaxed and most of them scored small net gains. Announcement was made that a five per cent. redeemable national loan of 1920 had been called for payment on May 1.

Although railroad bonds made no spectacular gains, prices were held firm by a steady flow of buying orders. Indications of progress in negotiating a new southwestern merger were reflected in active bidding for the bonds of these carriers, including the Chicago and Alton, Frisco and "Katy" systems. Gains ranged from 1 to 2 1-2 points.

Chemical company bonds moved ahead in response to reports of increased fertilizer sales, both Virginia-Carolina and American agricultural chemical issues showing advances of 1 to 2 points.

GALES FERRY

Easter Sunday the church auditorium was beautiful with decorations of Easter lilies, pink geraniums and pink begonias, banked inside the chancel rail, and covering the reading desk in pyramid form. On the pedestals were baskets of hyacinths and daffodils, with an arrangement of potted palms, at the right and left of the chancel. In the rear of the auditorium canaries in cages were suspended from the gallery. A sunrise service was held at 6 o'clock, opening with a praise service of Easter hymns. Rev. George Smith Brown offered prayer and spoke on The Resurrection. The morning service at 10.45 opened with the singing of the canaries in unison with the prelude Improvisation (Schenecker), followed by the Doxology, invocation, hymn, Lift Your Glad Voices, Apostles' Creed, solo, O Matchless Love (Heysey, C. E. Colver); prayer, Rev. George Smith Brown; Psalter, special reading for Easter; solo, Alleluia, He is Risen (Neidlinger), D. R. Povey; scripture lesson; solo, Behold the Place (Gabriel), Miss Allen; offering and announcements; anthem, Christ is Risen (J. Edgar Birch), the quartet.

Rev. Mr. Brown welcomed and presented the new district superintendent, Rev. Myron E. Genter of Norwich, who administered the rite of baptism to Marjorie Elizabeth Hurlbutt, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll S. Hurlbutt. Following this, he received into membership of the church Mrs. George Smith Brown, Mrs. Carroll S. Hurlbutt by letter from the M. E. church of Wakefield, R. I., Misses Margaret Parker, Enz-Reth Bennett, Sara Louise Hewtell, Mystice Coman and Dorothy Birch. Rev. Mr. Genter took the text for his Easter sermon from II Corinthians, 4: 14, "That he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus." This was followed by the solo Be Ye Glad (Ambrose), by Miss Chapman, and benediction. The postlude was by Pernagie. The quartet comprised Miss Grace A. Chapman, Miss Gertrude Allen, D. R. Povey and C. E. Colver. Organist and director, Mrs. Eugene LaFontaine. The church decorations were by Mrs. R. Irving Hurlbutt, chairman, Miss Alice Satterlee and C. E. Colver. Two young children of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Coman were baptized at their home by Rev. Mr. Genter following the morning service.

The cantata The Resurrection and the Life was given Sunday evening in the church at 7 o'clock. Solos were sung by Miss Chapman, Miss Allen, C. E. Colver and D. R. Povey.

Among the activities announced was the meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary society for the afternoon of the 14th, and an all-day's session of the Ladies' A

BALL BY BACKUS HOSPITAL WOMAN'S AUXILIARY MAKES SOCIAL EVENT

Under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary of the William W. Backus Hospital an elaborate ball was held Tuesday evening at the state armory, McKinley avenue. The ball, which was held for the benefit of the hospital, had an attendance of about 300. Beautiful gowns, a splendid dance programme and handsome and attractively arranged decorations, made the evening a delightful one. The gathering was honored by the presence of Lieut. Leslie P. Arnold, of New London, and Lieut. Leigh Wade of Michigan, far-famed around the world fliers, who were guests of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph N. Ganey of New London. Dancing was enjoyed from 9.30 o'clock until 2 o'clock.

World Fliers Arrive

About 9:45 o'clock Lieut. Leslie P. Arnold of New London, and Lieut. Leigh Wade of Michigan, around the world fliers, arrived with Dr. and Mrs. Joseph N. Ganey of New London. As they arrived at their box the dancing ceased temporarily and the orchestra struck up America as a mark of recognition for the world famed army fliers. Other guests of Dr. and Mrs. Ganey were Walter Casey of New Britain, Mrs. Brenner Williams of Hartford and Mrs. Mary Cushman.

The dance programme was provided by D'Arrie Wauregan Hotel Orchestra of twelve pieces under the leadership of Edgar J. Caron. Selections featured by the orchestra included Peter Pan, End of The Road, Sunkist Cottage, O Katherine, Florida, Will You Remember Me, Craving, Yearning, Sally Lou, How I Love My Darling, Swuanee Butterfly, Mamie, Lucky Kentucky, Because They All Love You, Midnight Waltz, June Brought The Roses, Alabama Bound, I'll See You in My Dreams.

Armory Beautifully Decorated

The armory was beautifully decorated, this work being in charge of Hawkins, The Florist. Leading from the main entrance was an illuminated canopy with interior decorated in smilax. The interior of the hall was elaborately decorated, the color scheme being blue and gold. The walls were entirely covered with draperies of blue with an attractive molding at the top and paneled in American flags, each panel being set off with phoenix palm leaves. The ceiling was in blue and gold, the ceiling decorations being of the ribbon type, worked from the center to the sides of the armory.

There was a dome light effect in the center with electrical radio balls suspended from the ceiling, the radio balls being covered with wild southern smilax. Gaily colored balloons suspended from the radio balls about the beautiful dome light added to the general effect.

The boxes were arranged on three sides of the armory and the orchestra occupied a platform in the northeast corner of the hall. Baskets of flowers and palm leaves were used to advantage in the various boxes.

SPRAGUE WOMEN VOTERS HEAR HEALTH NURSE

The regular monthly meeting of the Sprague League of Women Voters was held Monday evening in the Town Hall, Baltic. Following a brief business session, Mrs. F. G. Conway, president of the League, introduced Miss Byrne, public health nurse for the Town of Sprague, as the speaker.

Miss Byrne outlined in an interesting manner the work which our Public Health Nursing Association is doing in the town. In detail she pictured the service, which she is able to render in the homes of our communities when there is need for such service as only a trained nurse can give. A very important and constructive form of service is given in the schools. Miss Bryne reported that because of the co-operation in the homes the visiting doctors found conditions much improved among the children during the past year.

We all know that the best success of this enterprise depends on two things —namely, the kind of nurse representing us on the job and the support which the citizens give the Association. Every woman present felt sure that Sprague had been very fortunate in securing the right nurse. Her interest and sympathy in the work she is doing, as well as her ability to meet the situation impressed all the women favorably. If the Association is to serve the town better, as those interested hope it will, it must receive not only the much needed appropriation from the town treasury but the hearty sympathetic interest of all the citizens.

Miss Byrne has served for four years with the United Fruit Company in South and Central America. During the war she gave her service with the Army in Siberia for eighteen months. Consequently she comes to Sprague well prepared to meet all kinds of situations. She is now giving Sprague her best service and in return deserves for herself and her association the best support.

PERUVIANS ARE BITTER AGAINST ALL AMERICANS

Conditions for Americans in Peru, just at present approach the hazardous because of Peruvian ill feeling over the Tacna-Arica award by President Coolidge. In a letter to Mrs. Idelle Babcock of Pachaug, whose son Charles I. Babcock is at Lima, Peru, in charge of a big hotel construction job for the Ley Co., the young man's wife writes as follows:

Lima, Peru,
March 20

Dear Mother,

We are sitting here tonight without electric light, using candles to read and write by, that is what one gets for living in a heathen land like this.

That isn't all for two days and perhaps for two weeks more, there will not be any water, as the electric current is off and the pump doesn't pump water up into the tank without it.

At the present time the city is in complete darkness, no trolleys, no newspapers to speak of, and meat and food is very high. Beside, this last item has been caused by the Rimac river overflowing it's banks, destroying power plants, transmission lines, bridges, railroads. One section of Lima yesterday was under 6 inches of water. Beside that, all the old houses in Lima were wet inside by heavy sprinkles of rain, lasting from 6 p. m. until noon the next day.

We didn't get any, but my servants house was all wet inside, beds, etc.

There is a strong feeling against Americans because of the Tacna-Arica. Peru considers that Coolidge was very unjust in the arbitration. This naturally makes it very hard for us here because of the strong feeling against us, and it is not certain whether the Ley Co., will decide to remain after finishing present contracts or not. The whole thing might "blow over," but they have gone as far as to attack men they thought were Americans, and beat them up. Fred Venezuela, a young man who works for Ley Co., in the office and was educated in the states) was walking along minding his own business and some Peruvians thought he looked like an American, so they went after him and punched him and gave him a black eye. He is from Guantamano.

A German and a Swiss fellow had the same experience but one almost got killed. There were two Americans killed in Arequipa.

All they do so far is threaten us, but I hate the time to come when they get started doing things. The latest fad in Lima among business houses is to say that they have canceled all business with American firms.

All the people go to the plaza on Saturday afternoons and holidays also Sundays and scream and yell, Down with the Americans, down the Gringos (meaning all foreigners). They had such a big mob that when the mounted police tried to get order it was only by slashing their swords at them, and thirty Peruvians were killed and countless wounded. They were very mad with Leguia the president for letting the question of the Tacna-Arica dispute be settled the way it was, by voting.

The people born in that section were to return there and vote, but these people didn't want that, anyway the country having the most people registering as born in that territory would gain that land.

The Peruvians now have made up their minds they can't win, so they have set one day aside to mourn for the loss of Tacna-Arica. All go about wearing black crepe in their button holes. The girls pin it on them, and they have bands on the sleeves of boys and men.

The voting is to take place the last of July and from their attitude at present it looks bad for Peru.

Chile has stated that if Peru gains it by voting, they will make war and take it away by force.

The exchange is dropping fast and just at present things aren't very pleasant for us. We haven't been on the street at night for three or four weeks and in the daytime, we get our business over and back to the house as fast as possible.

I hope this won't last long. Potatoes are 60 cents for a kilo, or two pounds. Eggs are 25 cents each. Fruit is scarce, and for two solid weeks there was not one piece of meat in the market, the butchers were on a strike and we had to eat eggs and fish for 14 days. Now meat is high. They went on a strike because the American firm here had a contract to build a new slaughter house and chilling plant. I don't know who won. No newspapers yet. I was afraid in church last Sunday that they would put a bomb in the door and set it off, but God took care of us alright. He protects in some critical times. Don't worry about us, but don't be surprized if we have to change plans. If we come home on a boat within a month you would not be able to get a letter, will cable. Don't be afraid of cables now from us, as the Peruvians have threatened to keep our mail from us and also to let us post our letters, and then they not leave Lima, ever. I may not hear from you any more so cable if anything urgent, but so far we have all letters from you and my mother.

Peru is having a bad year and we hope that they do the wisest thing to bring the best results.

Rendered Wiegand's Mass.

Wiegand's Mass in honor of St. Patrick, a new composition by this prolific writer of church music, was rendered for Easter by the choir of St. Mary's Memorial church. In this, his newest mass, Wiegand has given a melodious, well written setting for the mass ritual, the interspersed solos being especially noteworthy. The character of the chorus work is essentially tuneful and was given a harmonious and finished rendition by the ensemble of the choir. The impressive Credo was given with proper religious feeling, and in the Sanctus the subdued effects were decidedly artistic.

The soloists whose intelligent singing was such a feature included Misses Sadie A. Driscoll, Elinore I. Donovan, Josie A. Hartie, sopranos, Miss Lucy Woods, contralto, Nicholas Spellman, Walter La Fontaine, tenors, Horace Corning, baritone.

At the nine o'clock Mass, the Junior choir sang the Easter carols with true joyous spirit. "Christ is Risen" by Hammerel being especially effective.

SPEAKER FROM NEW YORK FOR ART STUDENTS MEETING

The regular monthly meeting of the Norwich Art Students Association was held in Slater Memorial on Monday evening, the president, Mrs. A. N. H. Vaughn, presiding. Following a brief business meeting, Mrs. Vaughn introduced Miss Edith Abbot, a former student of the Norwich Art School and a charter member of the Association, now head of the department of art instruction at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York. Her subject was "The New Wing of the Museum" recently erected to illustrate the development of domestic architecture and furnishings in America. The lecture was fully illustrated with slides showing the rooms as a whole and also individual pieces of furniture, which are typical of various periods and styles.

Miss Abbot first introduced her hearers to the large hall on the third floor, which represents the style of the earliest period, that of the 17th century, with furniture of maple and walnut. The arched ceiling of this hall, with its changeable timbers, is a reproduction of the one in an interesting old church at Hingham, Mass. Surrounding the central halls on each floor are smaller rooms, all suitably furnished.

The next floor illustrates the finer style of the 18th century the ceilings in these rooms having been brought from various old houses in New England and the south. Here are many fine examples of carved mahogany furniture of the Queen Anne and Chippendale styles. Several of the best of these were purchased from the collection of Mr. George S. Palmer of New London, formerly of Norwich.

The lowest floor represents the period of the late 18th and early 19th centuries. The paneling of these rooms is remarkable for its great beauty and delicacy and much of the furniture is mahogany inlaid with other woods.

Miss Abbot's lecture was delightful, as she has much charm of manner and many touches of quiet humor added to the interest of her theme.

FORMER HANOVER PASTOR ASKS D. A. R. AID AGAINST DRUGS

At a meeting of Wadsworth chapter, D. A. R., at Middletown last week, a former pastor of Hanover Congregational church, Rev. Herbert D. Rollason of Middletown, spoke on the subject, "Traffic in Narcotics." Mr. Rollason has made a serious study of the subject. He stated that as early as 1725 Warren Hastings publicly denounced the drug traffic, while in 1729 China passed the first law against opium smoking. China has made a real effort to stamp out this curse, but England and other nations commercially interested in the traffic have exploited China for their own gains.

At the various international conferences held since 1906 the United States has taken a firm stand for the restriction of the manufacture of narcotics, for their distribution for medicinal purposes only, and for the suppressing of the international traffic.

At the recent congress held at Geneva, Dr. Alfred Sze, the Chinese delegate issued a solemn warning. He said that if the powers failed to subordinate their financial interests to ethical interests and did not cease to exploit China and the Far East, they would be held responsible not only by the world as a whole, but by 400,000,000 Chinese.

In closing his remarks, Mr. Rollason urged the Daughters to keep themselves informed on this question, as it is a serious American problem as well as an international one. The United States ranks second only to China in amount of narcotics used.

FAGAN FEELS BETTER "THE PANE" IS GONE

Fagan's Smoke Shop on Main street received a visit from a Ford automobile, Tuesday morning, about 9 o'clock, when the car driven by Clifford La Rochelle jumped the curbing and smashed the window of the store, coming to a stop after colliding with the cornice of the window.

Mr. LaRochelle had parked his machine to the left hand curbing and upon starting out gave the machine the gas and pulled to the right to gain the center of the road. In some manner the steering apparatus became jammed and it was impossible to swing the car back to the left, or stop it before the crash came.

A large hole was broken in the window but the window display was undisturbed. Shortly afterwards Mr. Fagan had a sign in the window which read, "We feel better the pane is gone but back in next time, it's easier to unload."

Aside from the broken window glass there was little damage.

FRENCH SENATE RATIFIED BILL FOR AN INCREASE IN THE LIMIT OF CIRCULATION

As Modified by the Chamber of Deputies, the Senate Passed the Financial Measure 193 to 5—About 100 Members of the Opposition Abstained From Voting—Did Not Wish to Impede a Bill Which Was Necessary—Caillaux Has Accepted the Post of Minister of Finance in the Cabinet Now Being Formed by Paul Painleve.

Paris, April 15—(By A. P.)—Joseph Caillaux's acceptance of the post of minister of finance in the cabinet now being formed by Paul Painleve overshadowed all other developments in France's political crisis today. The return to power at the head of one of the most important ministeries of the man who five years ago was regarded as politically dead for all time has caused varied emotions in the French political world.

M. Painleve, upon whom devolves the task of the premiership from which Edouard Herriot was deposed, informed President Doumergue tonight that negotiations for the constitution of a cabinet were progressing as normally as could be expected and that he would be in a position to present his ministry to the president late tomorrow afternoon.

The ministerial declaration will be read in the chamber on Friday and a vote of confidence demanded. M. Painleve will himself take the office of foreign affairs, but beyond the appointment of M. Caillaux, the other cabinet posts have not yet been announced.

Throughout the day the coming of Caillaux had thrown all other issues into the background.

A bill authorizing the Bank of France to raise the legal limit of circulation from 41,000,000,000 to 45,000,000,000 francs and advances to the state of 26,000,000,000 francs, was passed by the chamber after slight modifications by a vote of 325 to 39. The senate in special session tonight also ratified the bill, 193 to 5. About two hundred members of the senate opposition abstained from voting.

M. De Monzie, sponsor for the bill, stated that when the Bank of France gave up its weekly statement to-morrow with full legal authority from parliament, the figures of paper circulation would be between 43,000,000,000 and 44,000,000,000 francs.

The decision of the national council of the socialist party to support the Painleve ministry without participation, therein came as a shock to many socialist deputies, who had caused it to be announced that socialists would enter the cabinet and that distribution of portfolios to some of the party's members had already begun. Paul Boncour and Alexandre Verenne were receiving congratulations from friends upon their elevation to cabinet posts when the news that the council had ruled against participation was received in the chamber.

M. Caillaux by the strange irony of evolution in French politics is the man most acceptable to the right and other parties in a cabinet composed out of the left groups. He is the man looked upon to obtain the support of the conservative elements in the chamber. What reception awaits him in the senate, among the members of which are morethan one hundred and fifty men who sat in judgment on his case five years ago is looked forward to with much interest.

Caillaux has gone of record as being opposed to the principle of a capital levy, he has a personal plan for the restoration of French finances, the details of which have not yet been published. The fundamental basis of his plan is known to be additional taxes and sterner collection of existing taxes.

Whether M. Briand will be included in the cabinet remains problematical. "I have been offering nothing, and could neither refuse nor accept," he said this evening. But M. Painleve a little before midnight sent for M. Briand and conferred with him, and reports were current that he had been offered the post of foreign affairs. Painleave himself abandoning his earlier intention and taking the presidency of the cabinet without portfolio.

M. Herriot is prominently mentioned as the successor of M. Paleve in the presidency of the chamber, the position, it is asserted, is his, if he desires it.

DEATH OF JOHN SINGER SARGENT, NOTED PAINTER

London, April 15—(By the A. P.)—John Singer Sargent, noted painter, and American by parentage, though born in Florence, Italy, died some time early this morning at his home in Chelsea, not far from London. He had retired apparently in good health. Death appears to have come peacefully, possibly in sleep, and it is believed to have been due to an apoplectic seizure.

It had been the intention of the great painter to make another visit to the United States, and last evening he dined with his sister, Miss Emily Sargent, who was to accompany him on his voyage. They spent much of their time discussing the trip, to which both were looking forward eagerly. Sargent appeared in his usual spirits and health when he departed for home about 10 o'clock, which he reached in a ten minute walk. When his housekeeper and maid left him, he was sitting in the library reading. That was the last seen of him alive.

It was Sargent's custom to retire about midnight, and at 8 o'clock this morning, the maid found him dead in bed. A physician who was called gave it as his opinion that death had occurred between 3 and 4 a. m.

MRS. CUNNINGHAM CHARGED WITH MURDER OF HER SON

Crown Point, Ind., April 15—Mrs. Anna Cunningham of Gary, who is in jail here while the mysterious deaths of five members of her family in the past six years, and the poisoning of her son David are being investigated today was charged with the murder of her son Walter, 18, who died in September, 1923.

Mrs. Cunningham fainted when the warrant was read to her.

The body of the son whom she is charged with killing by poison was one of two sons disinterred and a chemical analysis revealed arsenic in both. Other members of the family who have died after brief illnesses include Mrs. Cunningham's husband, daughter and a third son.

Mae, a daughter, submitted to an examination for traces of poison today after she had complained of feeling ill.

A plan to hold a sanity hearing was abandoned after the murder charge was made. Mrs. Cunningham late today talked for about an hour with a newspaper reporter.

"I might have left some of the arsenic that I used to spray plants somewhere where it could have gotten into food that I fed David, but I don't think I did," she said. She said she was subject to violent spells of illness during which she had no recollection of what happened and at such times she had been told that she became violent, hid knives in her bed, abused members of her family and chased away visitors. She said she had suffered such an attack just previous to the time David became ill.

Most of the money gained from the sale of a farm the family owned near Valparaiso and from insurance money paid on the lives of the five members of the family who have died was given to her children or went to pay doctor and funeral bills, she said. For the farm she received $4,000, but litigation took half of this and she gave one of her sons $850 of the remaining $2,000 to pay on an automobile, she said.

Some of her money, she said, had also been given to her daughter, Mae.

She said that the only pills she gave David while he was ill were those prescribed by a doctor and she declared she knew nothing about any capsules which searchers found in her home and which are now being examined.

She said she had paid $800 to Dr. A. A. Watts, one of the three doctors who treated the members of the family and that each of the five funerals cost her from $800 to $1,000.

The family has not employed counsel. Edwin F. Knight.

Test Of Aircraft On The Offensive

Impressive Results Shown by Marine Corps Operators—Parachutes Used.

Quantico, Va., April 15—The efficiency of aircraft operating on the offensive, with a battleship outlined by buoys on the river surface as the main objective, was tested by marine corps aviators and pronounced by naval chiefs from Washington to be "impressive and satisfactory in results obtained."

A feature of the tests, which included bombing at 6,000 and 3,000 feet altitudes, parachute jumping, machine gun fire from the air and the laying of a smoke screen about the target, was the drill of five airplanes, flying from one formation to another and executing commands as if they had been soldiers on parade. The evolutions were directed by radio from the flying field, which at times was more than a mile away from the drilling air squadron.

At the conclusion of this exercise, in which Secretary Wilbur of the navy and Senator Frederick Hale of Maine, chairman of the Senate Naval Committee, acted alternately as drill masters, the two officials joined in saying that every order that had been given from the ground station had been executed with the precision and promptness that marks only the performance of crack military organizations.

Although no official tabulation of the bomb hits was made, it was conceded that one of the ten dropped from 6,000 feet landed within the target outline—620 feet long and 120 feet beam measurement—while the remaining nine hits were close. At the 3,000 foot elevation the results appeared to be even more satisfactory to the official observers.

Several bombs hit plainly within the buoy line of the shipshaped target and others straddled the target, the explosions raising the waters in a way that submerged the buoys more than once. The bombs used for the tests were of the 120 pound type, loaded with a small charge of black powder.

ACCIDENT AGAINST WITNESS IN THE SHEPHERD CASE

Chicago, April 15—Charging that Charles C. Faiman, principal witness against William D. Shepherd, charged with the murder of typhoid inoculation of his millionaire ward, William Nelson McClintock, is being lavishly entertained at hotels and theatres at the expense of the state, a plea for a writ of mandamus to direct the clerk of the criminal court to issue a capias for his arrest was called here today.

Faiman is under indictment for murder with Shepherd but has not been arrested or placed in jail by the state. It was Faiman who claimed that Shepherd came to his school of science and offered $100,000 for typhoid germs to kill his ward and gain possession of the estate.

The petition was filed by Eugene J. McGarry, an attorney who said he acted simply as a "citizen and taxpayer." A hearing is scheduled for next Monday.

Shepherd will be arraigned on the murder charge tomorrow and is expected to enter a not guilty plea after which a date for the trial will be set, both state and defense having stated they desired an early trial.

The coroner's inquest into the death of McClintock, his mother, Mrs. Emma Nelson McClintock, and Dr. Oscar Olson, the McClintock's family physician, had been postponed pending the results of an examination on the viscera of Dr. Olson. Poison sufficient to cause death was found in the vital organs of Mrs. McClintock, who died 18 years ago.

ULSTER PARLIAMENT OPENED YESTERDAY

Belfast, April 15—The Ulster parliament was opened today by the governor general, the duke of Abercorn, who delivered the royal speech outlining the legislative programme for the session.

In the course of the debate on the address, Sir James Craig, the premier, justified the course he had followed in asking a new mandate for Ulster on the question of the boundary commission. He pointed out that in the elections of 1921 the loyalist figures respecting the vote for Ulster to remain in north Ireland were 146,666. Sir James added that in 1925 these figures were increased to 162,334 and these were reduced in 1925 to 103,537.

The premier held that the increase in the loyalist majority of 12,184 was conclusive evidence for the boundary commission that the northern counties did not desire to break from their allegiance to the Ulster parliament.

STORY OF HOW KING BORIS ESCAPED ASSASSINATION

King of Bulgaria Owes His Life to the Fact That He is an Expert Automobile Driver—When His Car Was Attacked From Ambuscade the King Seized the Wheel and Drove the Machine Partially Out of the Danger Zone—Whether the Six Bandits Planned to Kill the King or Robbery Remains Unknown.

Sofia, Bulgaria, April 15—King Boris of Bulgaria probably owes his lief to the fact that he is an expert automobile driver, Yesterday when his car was attacked from ambuscade by bandits and the chauffeur wounded, the king seized the wheel and managed to steer the machine partially out of the danger zone. The steering gear was damaged, however, and in a moment the car collided with a telegraph post.

Meanwhile the king's assailants, numbering six, continued to fire on the occupants of the automobile. These, in turn, retaliated with revolvers, but their shots apparently were without effect. Realizing that the only chance of escape lay in flight, the king and three of his attendants leaped out of the car and took cover in a little woods a few yards down the road which leads from Orchanie to Sofia.

M. Itiche, director of the Sofia museum, was already bleeding profusely from a body wound, but he continued to defend the king. Almost immediately a servant was shot through the heart, and Itiche became unconscious. The chaueur was some distance from the king and the others, so Captain Stanatoff, aide-de-camp, urged Boris to make a bid for safety and run towards an autobus carrying mails, which the royal car had passed a few minutes before reaching the ambuscade. Stanatoff covered the king's retreat, although Boris wished to make an attempt to carry off Itcheff's body with him.

Finally seeing this was impossible the king and his aide rushed towards the autobus, the driver of which, having heard the fusilade, was endeavoring to turn, but was hampered by the narrowness of the road. The king took the chauffeur's place and, driving with great skill, turned the bus and speeded off downhill pursued by the bandits, who fired and hit the bus, but without doing serious damage.

Arriving at Orchanie the king hastily mobilized a platoon of troops stationed there and remaining at the wheel of the autobus, with an officer and 25 soldiers returned to the scene of the ambuscade at high speed. The bandits not dreaming that soldiers would arrive so quickly, were engaged in robbing the bodies of Itcheff and the servant. They were taken by surprise and one was wounded. The others fled, and owing to their superior knowledge of the countryside, escaped.

The king's calmness during the affair was related with admiration by those who witnessed the attack. One passenger on the autobus admitted that on hearing the shots he hastily threw a large sum of money he was carrying into the brush beside the road. On returning several hours later where it was, Finally, after all had he failed to discover the place, but to the government what had occurred. been cleared up the king drove another car back to Sofia and reported spot directing operations, showed him the king who had remained on the planned to kill the king or whether Who the bandits were, whether they giving service this morning an unprecedented and remarkable demonstrathe palace. The march past the bulletion took place in Sofia. Thousands of people of all classes remained in the king, who appeared on the balcony of they only wished to rob the autobus, remains a mystery. After a thanksgiving lasted two hours. When the premier communicated the news to the Sobranje the members made a great display of sympathy for the sovereign.

The diplomatic corps called at the palace to congratulate the king, the town was beflagged, and shops were closed.

Although a large force of troops and police, aided by civilians, had been searching for the bandits, no trace of them has been found. The fact that they despoiled the bodies of the two men killed is regarded as a sign that the attack was planned by mere robbers, whose real aim was a hold-up of the autobus carrying the mails.

On the other hand, the government declares that the king's assailants were "political bandits," thus giving the impression that an attempt was deliberately made on the life of the king.

COOLIDGE STATEMENT ON UNIVERSITY MEMORIALS

Chicago, April 15—(By the A. P.)—A hitherto unpublished statement by President Coolidge dealing with university memorials appears in a book, "Great University Memorials" just published by the University of Chicago. The statement follows:

"One test of the civilization of any age is the record which it has for the teachings of the past and the opinion of posterity. The Greeks and Romans had these in a high degree. Dante spoke of the future in the lasting record of his great love for Beatrice. Gothic cathedrals of the middle ages still stand as reminders of abiding reverence. The Lincoln Memorial is built for the centuries in the confident belief that generations and generations yet to come will prize it as a magnificent inspiration.

"The memorial idea is sound and is sure to grow as increasing opportunities present themselves. One of the most encouraging signs is the tendency today to look to institutions of higher education for memorial sites. No more fitting agencies for this purpose can be imagined. For universities are not repositories of the dead. They are more alive than the market-place; their eyes are not only on the present, but on the past and the future. And the life within their walls is always young and acquisitive. To place your name, by gift or bequest, in the keeping of an active university is to be sure that the name and the project with which it is associated will continue down the centuries to quicken the minds and hearts of youth, and thus make a permanent contribution to the welfare of humanity."

The book names John D. Rockefeller, William K. Vanderbilt, George F. Baker, Collis P. Huntington, Andrew Carnegie, P. A. B. Widener, Julius Rosenwald, James B. Duke, George Eastman and many others as typical of men whose memory has been perpetuated in college or university building.

"Within the last ten years, $500,000,000, has been bestowed as endowments upon American colleges and universities by men of wealth," it added.

HORSE BY NO MEANS EXTINCT, SAYS STORRS PROFESSOR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, April 15—The Willimantic Exchange Club listened with interest to a brief address by Professor A. G. Kinner of the Connecticut Agricultural College at the regular weekly meeting, Wednesday noon. Professor Skinner took for his subject, "The History of Animal Husbandry" in which he laid special weight to meat animals and sheep. The horse, he said, was not going out of the country and he stated that Connecticut, which is so well filled with automobiles, trucks and tractors, is nevertheless importing between five and six thousand horses a year. Motor vehicles are competing with the railroads and not with horses, he said.

The per capita consumption of meat is 140 pounds throughout the country yearly he stated, relative to meat animals and Connecticut spends approximately $35,000,000 yearly for meat alone, sending this money to other parts of the country. Because of the vast grazing lands the West has not taken over the sheep producing industry which was formerly centralized in New England. Conditions are changing, however, and sheep could be raised on a profitable basis in New England; but with the going of the old sheep raiser of two generations ago, has also gone the knowledge of how to conduct this industry. Through the efforts of the departments of agriculture the sheep business is being restored gradually.

During the business session the club voted fifty dollars for the Boys' Week Fund. Adjournment was taken at 1.30 o'clock.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

The Broadway Theatre management announces for the last half of this week another special "N. V. A. Week" programme of seven big acts of B. F. Keith vaudeville. Everyone knows that the special N. V. A. show the first of the week was a big success, and we predict an even greater reception for the show the last of this week.

One of the feature attractions is The Lazy Bar Blue Blowers, presenting everything in jazz, from songs and dances to the bluest of blue music. Here is an exceptional offering and with its scenic investiture this company is going to leave a lasting impression with Norwich theatregoers.

The management has also succeeded in acquiring the services, by special arrangement, of Miss Marion Sunshine the musical comedy star, assisted by Mr. Henry L. Marshall, the popular American composer, both rendering songs of their own composition exclusively. Mr. Marshall is the author of such noted musical hits as, If Ever You Get Lonely; Some One; Somebody's Wrong; Across the Mason and Dixon Line; Be My Little Lady Bug; I've got Everything I Want but You; and many others.

Other real fine acts include the following:

Alice De Garmo, an aerial artist.

Jack Healy and Naomi Garnella in Youthful Capers.

Flo and Frank Inness, the comedy couple in a riot of fun with a laugh a minute.

Julia Curtis, the girl with the many voices and excellent commedienne.

Creighton and Byron in "Ain't She Dumb" another comedy classic.

Warner Baxter, Billie Dove, Mary Brian and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., are the featured players in the new Irvin Willat-Paramount production, "The Air Mail," which comes to the Broadway Theatre for a 3 days' run today. The story was written especially for the screen by Byron Morgan, who wrote "Flaming Barriers," "Code of the Sea," and others.

The picture has to do with the "inside" workings of crooks who prey upon the U. S. government air mail service and includes some genuine thrill scenes both in the clouds and on the Nevada desert.

"The Air Mail," one of the Second Famous Forty group of Paramount pictures, includes Guy Oliver, Henry Irving and other popular players in the supporting cast.

Palace Theatre.

Heading the bill coming to the Palace today Friday and Saturday is "Whitey Kaufman and his orchestra. This wonderful organization was first formed in Lancaster, Pennsylvania by Whitey Kaufman, under the name of the Original Pennsylvania Serenaders. Because it contained some of the finest in instrumentalists in that part of the country, it reached such a degree of perfection that vaudeville engagements and great popularity, naturally followed. There is also a great surrounding bill and feature picture "Head Winds." House Peters in the role of a wealthy yachtsman, taking advantage of the man-made law that is all fair in love and war," dared convention in the wooing of his shrew by kidnapping her and taming her on the briny sea in his latest starring vehicle, "Head Winds," the Universal-Jewel feature coming to the Palace theatre, commencing tomorrow. "Head Winds," adapted from A. M. Sinclair Wilt's story of the same name is an unconventional story of two people, a man and a woman both naturally endowed with strong, obdurate, stubborn wills, who placed in an unusual situation, each endeavor to master the other. The scene of the story is laid in and about San Francisco and on board a palatial yacht.

At the Strand

Bubbling with good humor, garnished with pretty girls, and all stepping entrancingly to the tunes of some good music, comes Bringing Up Father in Ireland at the popular Strand theater next Monday for an engagement of one night. Don't say that you have seen Bringing Up Father and let it pass unnoticed, as the show is absolutely new every year. You may as well decline to look at next Sunday's Funny Page because you say last Sunday's. It is the same with the play. New every year. Nothing left over from yast year but George McManus' clever characters Jiggs, Maggie, Dinty and the rest of the bunch. A chorus of genuine IrishColleens, none of whom are over 18—? No. This is not their telephone number, or the size of their shoes, but their age. Jiggs says chicken is no good when it's tough. And he knows. He's been married to Maggie for forty years.

The irritation caused me to scratch, and the scratching disfigured my face. I could not sleep on account of the burning sensation, and the trouble kept growing worse.

"I tried all kinds of remedies but they did not help me. I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and purchased some. After using these was a great improvement so I continued the treatment which completely healed me." (Signed) Miss Stella Dudek, 50 Shaw Park Ave., Chicopee, Mass.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Governor John H. Trumbull, Commissioners Charles Isbell, Frank Salmon and Robbins B. Stoeckel and Superintendent Robert T. Hurley of the state police department were in Danielson Wednesday forenoon, to make an inspection of the state police barracks on North Main street and the personnel attached to the local station. The inspection was in line with similar functions carried out by military officers and was as detailed, involving a review of the officers, their equipment, including the motor vehicles assigned to the station, and the barracks and its appointments. The visitors expressed themselves as pleased with what they saw at the Danielson station, which is under the direction of Sergeant Albert S. Field. The inspection made here on Wednesday was similar to others being made at every barracks of the department at the present time and is periodic. Governor Trumbull and his associates did not tarry long here, as their inspection schedule for the day called for them to cover widely scattered sections of the state.

In Chancery, a comedy drama in three acts, was presented by a cast from the junior class of Killingly High school at the Orpheum Theatre Wednesday evening, and provided splendid entertainment for those who patronized the production. The cast, which had been coached by F. C. Littleworth of the High school faculty, included Miss Ruth Litch, Elmer Major, Robert Putnam, Leslie Cornish, Denton Gallup, Douglas Logee, Henry Stoddard, Miss Mildred Tillinghast, Miss Helen Keech, Harold Warner, Miss Flora Keech, Miss Elizabeth McGorty and Miss Helen Haveles.

The newly elected borough officers, with Warden Walter Anderson presiding, met Tuesday evening for organization. Committees were named for the year and other business transacted. The list of committees as they are now made up follows: Building, Gaston A. Maindon, Charles E. Austin; fire, Richard D. Banigan, Louis E. Young; lighting, Pierre Boulaine, Charles E Austin; park, Richard D Banigan, Pierre Boulaine; police, D. E. Jette, Louis E. Young; sewer, D. E. Jette, Gaston A. Maindon; sidewalks, Gaston A. Maindon, Richard D Banigan; boxing, D. E. Jette, Gaston A. Maindon, Richard D. Banigan; board of relief, Richard D. Banigan, Gaston A Maindon, Louis E Young; chief of fire department, A. D. Woodward; health officer, Dr. W. H. Judson.

The boxing committee is appointed to meet a requirement of the state laws.

Enforcement of the building regulations relative to the taking out a permit before construction is begun and getting the approval of the borough was a matter considered by the meeting. In due time the borough will cause to be published a legal notice of what it purposes to do to stop the practice of building without permits or seeking such after building operations are underway or completed. At the present time it appears that a citizen who has real ground for objecting to some building operation has no other recourse if he would stop it than to seek, on his own account and at his own expense, an injunction through the superior court. The intent of the borough is to take such action as will make it possible for the borough to handle such cases.

Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock funeral services for Rev. Charles Albert Green, who died Sunday, were conducted at the undertaking rooms of A. F. Wood, by Rev. E. W. Salisbury of Jewett City and Rev. William Mason of Danielson. The Pearly White City, and The Eastern Gates were numbers sung at the service by a quartet. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. Relatives acted as bearers.

Detailed information relative to the postal rates effective on Wednesday have been made available for the public by Postmaster Edwin H. Keach. This information is set forth on neatly printed cards, and while they will not be generally distributed are available for all large users of the postal service, business men and those who are putting out much mail matter.

Supervisor William E. Parker of Killingly's schools gave a very interesting talk before the members of the W. C. T. U. at their meeting Tuesday on The History of Education in Connecticut and the Requirements of Teachers and Supervisors. Mr. Parker replace Mrs. Lillian Frink of Canterbury, who was to have addressed the meeting, but had to change her plans in order to represent the Windham county W. C. T. U. at the hearing on the so-called Wheeler bill at the state capitol. Members of the W. C. T. U. at Central Village were guests at the meeting.

Thunder and lightning were mingled with the heavy showers that fell during the early hours of Wednesday morning. The excitement of the elements was taken as indicating that warmer weather is at hand, and true to this theorizing the mercury started an upward climb that carried into the 70's by the noon hour. Having experienced snow and hail early Monday, Danielson has had quite a variety of climatic conditions the present week.

This is something of a busy week for Danielson members of Putnam lodge of Elks. On Tuesday evening a delegation of them were at Putnam for the installation of the new officers of the lodge and a social session. On Wednesday evening they again turned out in numbers to be present at a session of Norwich lodge at which a mortgage burning was a feature.

There was a large attendance at the town hall, Wednesday evening, for a whist given under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Leo J. L'Homme post, American legion.

For overstaying the parking limit-ation, Charles E. Focier of Arctic, R. I., was before the town court Wednesday and was fined $1.00 and actual costs, a matter of just over $3.00, which he paid. Focier is the driver of an advertising automobile.

"All of our edibles and drinking wa-ter can be classed as A-No. 1," says Dr. W. H. Judson in closing his annual report as health officer of the borough. This immediately suggests that the quality of liquor the borough is getting is ignored, which may be just as well, after all, that a good record be kept unimpaired.

Chief A. P. Woodward of the fire de-partment recommends in his annual report that the borough make an ordinance requiring property owners, when they recover roofs of their buildings, to use some non-combustible material. Sparks falling on roofs caused fires representing a loss of $16,000,000 in 1923, Chief Woodward also suggests, as he had done in previous years, that the borough install an additional fire alarm signal, expressing his opinion that too much dependence is now placed by the borough on its single whistle in the fire alarm telegraph system.

Wednesday afternoon, the body of Mrs. Eleanor Hill Nye Crossman, 43, arrived here from Norwich and was taken in charge by Undertaker A. F. Wood. Mrs. Crossman died Tuesday at the Backus hospital in Norwich. She had undergone a surgical operation. Mrs. Crossman was a native of the neighboring town of Foston, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nye, and had lived her life in that town until she moved with her husband to Packer a few months ago. Mrs. Crossman was the wife of Clifford H. Crossman, who survives her, with a son and a daughter.

At about 3:30 Wednesday afternoon the fire department responded to a "35" alarm for a chimney fire at one of the houses owned by the Connecticut Mills on Morin avenue. Only a few minutes elapsed before the pumper returned to the central fire station.

The rain that came Wednesday further reduced the danger from forest fires that has existed for several weeks. Incidentally, it contributed to filling up the brooks and raising the hopes of the trout fishermen for better luck along the streams.

As a result of a "Learn English campaign" in Rochester, N. Y., the pledges of 2,500 persons to join a class in English and learn to speak, read, and write the language were obtained. The goal, originally set at 2,000, was raised when this mark was passed.

The meeting at the Chamber of Com-merce rooms, in charge of the State Fire Warden was attended by a number of interested people. State Fire Warden Austin F. Hawes, of Hartford, talked on the various phases of the work of preventing and controlling forest fires, also told of the laws governing the situation.

District Patron, Caro Lathrop, of Phoenixville, told of methods of fighting fires which was followed by a general discussion of the subject. A chart was used to demonstrate the best method of stopping a fire during a strong wind.

It was emphasized that the law relative to setting fires should be made known. The statute forbids anyone to set a fire or authorize the setting of a fire in the open air outside the limits of a city or borough or fire district, or on land controlled by any railroad company for the purpose of burning bushes, weeds, grass or rubbish of any kind between the first day of March and the first day of June and the first day of September and the first day of December, in any year, without first obtaining from the fire warden of the district, written permission stating when and where such fire may be kindled. Anyone breaking the law shall be fined not more than two hundred dollars or imprisoned not more than six months or both; but such permission shall not be required for the kindling of a fire in a ploughed field, garden or public highway, at a distance of not less than two hundred feet from any woodland, brushland, or field containing dry grass or other inflammable material. This law is to be amended so as to require permits between the first day of March and the first day of December of any year. This is the first meeting of the kind to be held in Putnam although similar meeting have been held throughout the state.

DAYVILLE

Funeral services for Phyllis, aged 4 1-2 years, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Babcock, were held at their home Thursday, April 9th, at 2 o'clock. Rev. William Swainson, pastor of the Congregational church officiated. Two hymns were sung: "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere."

Death came as the result of an illness which began in February when the child was operated on for appendicitis. Following the operation she recovered sufficiently to be up and at play again, but two weeks ago she suffered a recurrence of the old malady which with complications, after a brief, painful illness, exhausted the child's strength. Rarely is a community touched to such grief as was evident here when the news of her death was learned. Widespread sympathy was expressed for her parents and her brother.

A large company of relatives and friends was present at the funeral. Burial was at Westfield cemetery, Danielson. The beautiful floral pieces included a pillow of pink and white carnations and rose buds, from Mr. and Mrs. William Babcock; spray, of pink rosebuds, from Master Lloyd Babcock; basket, of pink and white Hyacinths, from Frank Wood, Sr.; wreath, from Mrs. George Babcock; pillow, of roses, carnations and hyacinths, from Mr. and Mrs. A. Mansard Roof Not Mansard's

The Mansard roof, a popular type of architecture used in many early American buildings, as for instance in the department of state building in Washington, was made popular by Francois Mansard, a French architect who lived from 1598 to 1666, but he has been found to not be the originator of it. About 300 years before Mansard was born the style was originated by an architect named Lescot. Mansard eventually advertised the roof and himself at the same time and in popular conception he was given credit for it.

Say They Knew Bird Language

Arabians are claiming that they understand the language of birds. They maintain that many of their countrymen have had a knowledge of the birds' communication medium since the days of King Solomon. There are many legends associated with the exploits of the Arabians wherein birds figured importantly. The Mudammedans know the pigeon as their favorite bird, due to the story that a pigeon built its nest in front of the cave where the prophet was hiding, thus favoring his escape from his enemies.

COMMERCIAL AIR SERVICE

When the Wright brothers demonstrated that it was possible for a heavier than air machine to fly it marked the beginning of a new era. There have been remarkable developments since that time. Many of the uncertainties of aviation have been overcome and each year has brought faster, better machines, better aviators and a greater degree of safety in navigating the air. It has even been demonstrated that flight around the world [illegible] Mexico are being carried [illegible] through the air, certain passenger carrying routes have been established and [illegible] In the United States [illegible] of aviation has [illegible] instituted each [illegible]

[illegible] the commercial [illegible] the shipping [illegible] after the [illegible] have adopted this [illegible] concern has a [illegible] goes from one [illegible] are now doing [illegible] the delivery [illegible] the purpose of [illegible] tion the Ford has [illegible] regular service [illegible] Chicago [illegible] to the capacity of the aircraft is transported from the main [illegible] to the Illinois capital and such [illegible] there a cargo is carried in the same manner each day. It is a special delivery service which unquestionably saves time. In view of the experiment that is being made [illegible] be not so much attention given to expense. Such service it is apparent cannot be provided for a long time to come by private and not a public service that is being rendered, and the prospects are that if it accomplishes what is expected of it the service will be extended to other points.

This service is bound to be regarded as a demonstration of the commercial value of the flying machine. What that means can be easily surmised. [illegible] expected that it will not only mean more air service by the Ford but it will in all probability mean the production of air flivvers [illegible] Developments are steadily under way.

NEW POSTAL RATES

[illegible] postal rates are now in effect, they are not necessarily permanent. They are on trial with a congressional committee watching the results and determined to make a thorough investigation during the next several months with a view to disclosing whether they are unjust and whether [illegible] are exceeding the additional [illegible] sought to pay the [illegible] to the employees of the [illegible] improvements. The [illegible] have been advanced with [illegible] for first letters [illegible] to change. There are increases made for second class matter while it is expected that large [illegible] gains will made for second [illegible] while it is expected that [illegible] will be made by the advance in the rate for mailing cards and the new parcel post rates. There is no jump in the registration fee and opportunities provided for increased interest through additional and more prompt handling of parcel post matter. Insurance rates are also changed with the purpose of providing more revenue.

The new rates have made necessary the printing of a new stamp, the half cent stamp bearing the picture of Nathan Hale, called for by the rate of half a cent for each two ounces of printed matter and merchandise in packages which do not exceed eight ounces.

As might be expected there are those who have already revised their mailing arrangements so that the increased postal rates will fall as lightly as possible. The amount of confusion that will result will depend upon the care exercised by those using the mails. The new rates are quite as clear as those of the past. All that is required is a little study to recognize what is demanded and what is required in order to obtain the extra service that is offered. Perhaps the greatest trouble will come from the picture postcards for which two cents stamp is henceforth required instead of a one.

A KANSAS EXPERIMENT

For a considerable period of time the attention of the country has been attracted by the action of Kansas, headed by its governor H. J. Allen, in the establishment of the state court of industrial relations.

The purpose of this tribunal was to deal with industrial disputes and bring about their adjustment in accord with the facts as set forth by the respective sides. It was an effort to overcome the detrimental effects of strikes which interfered so seriously with production of necessities and in the adjustment of which too little consideration was invariably given to the public.

The court has been doing business under compulsory arbitration. It has dealt with many matters, though it has by no means had a smooth existence. The idea has encountered plenty of opposition. The court has been held to be unconstitutional and that claim has resulted in decisions of the court being appealed to the United States supreme court. The latter court has now rendered a decision which sounds the death knell of the Kansas court. The Kansas supreme court had upset the action of the industrial court in a case involving a packing company and its employes, but subsequently upheld a decree of the industrial court fixing hours and working conditions. It was this which was appealed to the United States supreme court as the result of which the highest court in the land declares compulsory arbitration unconstitutional because it interferes with the liberty of contract and the rights of property guaranteed by the the 14th amendment to the Constitution. With the court based upon compulsory arbitration the supreme court's decision means the end of an experiment which has been watched from one end of the country to the other, but which developments will prevent other states from adopting. It is made evident that the public rights must be maintained by some other method than that followed by the industrial court of Kansas.

TAKING CHANCES

The crushing to death of four persons in an auto that was struck by a locomotive near Stillwater, R. I., this week was typical of many crossing accidents. Just what the driver of the auto was attempting will never be known for she was among the killed, but with the railroad crossing sign in clear view and with the engineer of the train stating that he had seen the auto approaching, slowing up and then going rapidly ahead, it is evident that the crossing is not a blind one, but at a point where it is possible for those on the highway to observe a train equally well as for the engineer of the train to see whatever may be approaching on the highway.

The approach to a crossing, with its familiar crossboard warning sign should be sufficient for an experienced driver to recognize the possibility of danger and place the machine under such control that it could be stopped before getting into the path of a locomotive. The idea of trying to beat [illegible] a train is too risky for those who [illegible] to properly value their own lives [illegible] the lives of those who may be with them.

There are certainly qualifications which the drivers of locomotives have no reasons. If they are not on their job and tending to business serious trouble is likely to follow. The same should be true of the auto driver. Insomuch as signals and rules are to be respected by the former so should the warning signs when approaching danger get due consideration from the latter. It is much safer and better to stop, even when one can actually be observed at crossings, than to plunge ahead regardless and trust to the hand of luck to look after the safety requirements.

SHIP CANAL IN ST. LAWRENCE

Whenever the question of developing the St. Lawrence river project has been brought up for new attention there has been advanced the advisability of devoting the same amount of effort and money to the development of the waterway from Buffalo to New York which would take care of the business from the middle west that expects to be served by the development of the St. Lawrence.

The fact is that the existing barge canal would seem to offer many advantages at the present time, and that these are not being utilized to the limit, if we are to judge by the amount of traffic handled each year on the canal.

What appears to be a move to get at the relative merits of the two propositions is that being made by the war department through the survey which it is to make and the estimate that is to be obtained, concerning the cost of making the barge canal a ship canal.

Inasmuch as there is much opposition to the St. Lawrence project in both countries, and inasmuch as the time to settle the relative merits of the two methods of giving water service to the midwest is before any contracts are let, the action being taken by the war department would seem to be based upon meeting that very situation. It can be shown whether the plan is feasible, what it will cost and whether it would actually meet requirements. Unless the department believed that the survey and estimate were justified it is not probable that it would be spending the time and money to get them. If there is any merit in the development of the canal now is the time to bring it to the surface.

BLIGHTING KINDNESS.

The two friends looked at each other and laughed when they met.

"Well, Hallie, when did you begin taking afternoon tea?" asked one of them.

"I ran into buy some buns and I thought for once I'd indulge myself in a cheering cup. Have you been ill, or has anything happened? You look a bit worried. Also you look tired and pale."

"I haven't been ill," replied the other, "and nothing has happened except that Cousin Kate visited us. She, you know, is Andy's mother's cousin."

"Oh, I suppose the care of an old lady was rather exacting."

"She isn't very old, and I didn't take care of her. She took care of me. She has a genius for taking care of people. Just let me tell you some of the things she did while she was at our house.

"I was greatly astonished to find her in the kitchen the morning after her arrival, with her sleeves rolled up and her arms deep in a tub of steaming soapsuds.

" 'What are you doing, Cousin Kate?' I asked. 'You don't have to do your own washing here. You must put it in with our laundry.'

" 'This ain't my washing, Hallie,' she answered. 'I just noticed how grimy your slip covers were, so I took them off and you see I am rubbing them out for you.'

" 'Oh, Cousin Kate,' I cried, 'you shouldn't do that.'

" 'It's all right, dear,' she answered. 'I really like to wash and iron. I've never been one to be above homely tasks.' I just wish you could see those covers after she finished them. She finished them, all right. You remember what stunning cretonne they were and how gay they made our living room. I had intended to send them to the cleaners, for I feared they wouldn't stand laundering, and they didn't. The colors ran and faded and they're all of a dismal whatness now. Of course I shall have to have some more made, and those were new only last autumn and would have been good for years if they had not come under her devastating hand."

"She meant well."

"Of course she did! That's the pity of it. I had to thank her warmly for every one of her blighting kindnesses. Wait till you hear what she did to Andy. I came home late one afternoon and Cousin Kate met me at the door with a solemn face. 'While you've been enjoying yourself at the club, Hallie,' she said, 'your husband has been suffering with lumbago.'

" 'Oh, dear, poor Andy! Has he one of those attacks again?' I asked anxiously.

" 'Yes, but don't worry about it. He'll be all right. I've fixed him.' She certainly had fixed him. I wouldn't like to tell you what Andy said when I entered the room where he was groaning. I'll just have to delete all the explosives. He said Cousin Kate had put a mustard plaster on his back, and every time he had asked her to take it off she had refused and he was too helpless to pull it off himself. I removed it as carefully as I could, but he certainly was cooked. The things he said about Cousin Kate! His back is frightfully sore yet."

"And how's the lumbago?"

"Oh, that disappeared, and, of course, Cousin Kate took all the credit. Andy had to be grateful to her. So did I when she shortened a frock I unfortunately said was too long. Now I'm looking for some ballet girl to give it to, for it's up to my knees nearly. Do you wonder that after three weeks of such helpfulness I'm about worn out and quite ready to make a pet of myself for a few days until Aunt Kate comes back to us?"

"Comes back?" exclaimed Lucy. "Why do you have her come back?"

"My dear, we aren't having her come back. She is coming back of her own free will. She says that she feels that Andy and I need her care because we are young and reckless, and we are her dearest relatives."

"Oh, um, I see," said Lucy. "Is she the one with estates in California and the Adirondacks and the fat bank accounts?"

"Yes."

"I see again," said Lucy.—Exchange.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Rev. J. G. Graham Insists on Being Heard.

Mr. Editor: The following letter has been sent to the Pastors' Union of Willimantic and vicinity.

James G. Graham,
Willimantic, April 14 1925.
Pastors' Union, of Willimantic and Vicinity.
Gentlemen:

We have heard the "pacifists" in public meeting yesterday. In the interest of common decency and fair play I demand a similar right to present a paper at the next meeting: Pacificism and Individualism versus Christianity and Democracy.

I regard it as a disgrace to Christianity, disloyalty to our nation, and an insult to the lives sacrificed for the protection of home and country, that such views as expressed by Rev. F. W. Tholen and Rev. E. E. Sundt should be heard in public. They cannot go unanswered.

Your truly,
James G. Graham.

Fighting Use of Tobacco

Mr. Editor:—Our white ribboned women who have for many years made an intensive campaign against the use of tobacco will be greatly rejoiced to know that their hands are to be upheld by the strong masculine arm. At a conference of 150 delegates from numerous organizations held in Washington recently it was decided to hold a convention in Indianapolis, May 30, having for its goal a constitutional amendment forbidding its use. A national wide campaign of education will be launched. Their plan of attack as outlined is as follows:

"A concerted drive to pledge every Sunday school scholar and church members against tobacco.

Universal agitation against smoking in public places.

A campaign to drive tobacco advertising out of newspapers and periodicals and smoking scenes from moving pictures.

Laws forbidding outdoor advertising of cigarettes, tobacco, its sale to minors and to women.

Congress is to be asked to make it a crime to smoke in any public building in Washington.

If this point is gained, the reformers will move on to state legislatures and municipal lawmaking bodies with demand for similar enactments.

Dr. Daniel H. Kress, chairman of the National Anti-Tobacco convention promotion committee, declares that once congress or a state legislative body makes smoking in public places a crime the fight will be an easy one. This organization is backed by the personal influence and financially by such noted men as Henry Ford, Hudson Maxim, Luther Burbank, Dr. Irving Fisher, of Harvard, Dr. Harvey Wiley, of pure food fame and Dr. Kellogg of Battle Creek, Mich. For some time such far wide read magazines and newspapers as the Saturday Evening Post, The Ladies Home Journal, Good Housekeeping and other journals have refused to stain their pages by keeping before the public pictures of young men and young women smoking cigarettes. When the moving pictures follow the fine example set by these publications a mighty force for tabooing smoking will be accomplished. We can not emphasize too strongly that men like Washington, the father of our country, Lincoln, Roosevelt, Hughes Chauncey Depew, Drs. Mayo, Dr. Howard Kelsly of Johns Hopkins all men who have been leaders among men, were all non-smokers.

Why is it that smokers are not wanted on football and baseball teams? It is because they lack endurance and cannot be depended upon at a critical point in the games.

If this is true in games how much more important it is to have when men women in the game of life endowed with the power of endurance and with clear judgment! We have sent missionaries to Japan, when Japan can teach us that we fall in one of the finest points of Christianity as Christ taught it; for Japan a quarter of a century ago, when in introducing a bill into the house of parliament Hon. Momota said: If we would make our nation superior to the nations of Europe and America we must by all means forbid the smoking of cigarettes by our boys and girls who are to become the future fathers and mothers of our country." No stronger reason can be given. Japan has set us our example, we must follow if America is to hold her own; for without character and brains we can not survive. We stand today as the most criminal nation in the civilized world. How much longer will we continue to bear this blot upon our Escutcheon? Congress some time ago voted $100,000 for the investigation of diseases in fowls. Why not appropriate a like sum to investigate the cause of "juvenile delinquency?" Dr. S. H. Kress of the Washington sanitarium and hospital deserves much praise for his persistent investigation and has not the slightest doubt that cigarette smoking is largely responsible for juvenile degeneracy. He says, "we are fighting an evil that is threatening civilization." In his investigation he has found that nearly all the crimes committed in our large cities are committed by young men and nearly every case they are cigarette fiends who formed the habit in their teens, while in schools. Judge Arnold of the court of Chicago asked one of the boy criminals, "why do you smoke?" He replied, "Because I want to smell like men." Here we have it in a nut shell—men are responsible for this terrible condition among boys. Every minister who smokes is partially responsible for the lack of morals among the young. Every professor in our educational world who smokes is responsible. Youth looks up to both as their leaders and how often they have failed them by this foolish love for tobacco.

The mother love in our Woman's Christian Temperance Union led our women to start the crusade against tobacco along with their crusade against its twin brother, alcohol, almost a century ago. How rejoiced they were, too, to have the co-operation of this "national anti-tobacco convention promotion committee"—a band of strong men spiritually, mentally and physically, men of God, going forth to battle for civilization.

Marinda C. Robinson.

Are You Discouraged?

Curtis Buffeted by Other Newsboys

Nearly every man who amounted to anything in Portland, Me., the native city of Cyrus H. K. Curtis, was a merchant, and the boy's goal was to be a tradesman, but circumstances led away from the city and the vocation.

At twelve he started with a capital of three cents, to sell newspapers. Undersized for his age, he was buffeted by older boys, but found a new market at Fort Preble nearby. Next he delivered newspapers at $4 a week, arising at 3:45 o'clock every morning, for four years.

When he was fifteen he and a partner started Young America, a four-page boys' weekly, but the partner withdrew after the first issue and Cyrus had to assume the indebtedness and publish it alone. Buying a plant for $20, he did job work and in three years had a weekly income of $8. Then fire destroyed the Curtis home and his plant.

Quitting school, he started as errand boy in a dry-goods store at $3 a week, but soon was advertising solicitor for a Boston newspaper, and at twenty joined a friend in establishing The People's Ledger, a weekly, whose progress was slow. Marrying at twenty-five, he moved to Philadelphia, and a year later with a partner established The Tribune and Farmer.

Chaffed by Mrs. Curtis about his Woman and Home articles, he induced her to edit the department, made it into a supplement. The Ladies Journal selling for twenty-five cents a year, then turned The Tribune and Farmer over to his partner and in many years of work and disappointments developed The Ladies Home Journal.

When, at 47, he bought The Saturday Evening Post, an antiquated weekly called "a piece of literary bric-a-brac" for $1,000, friends predicted his failure. Losing nearly all of the 2,000 subscribers when he converted it into a business man's publication, he spent $1,000,000 and five years of hard work before it succeeded. Later he spent $2,000,000 to bring The Country Gentleman to a high standard.

At 63 he purchased the Philadelphia Public Ledger and last year, at 73, bought the New York Evening Post. President of the Curtis Publishing Company he is a multi-millionaire, and is a proud and happy grandfather.

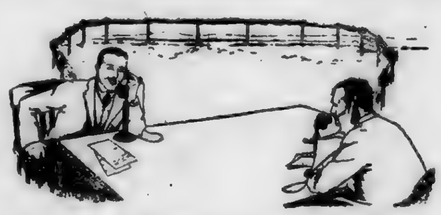
IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Dr. Charles G. Abbot, who has been chosen to direct the joint Smithsonian Institution, National Geographic Society expedition, which will travel half way around the world for the remarkable purpose of making a daily measure of the heat of the sun, has been director of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory at Washington since 1907, when he succeeded its founder, Dr. Samuel Piermont Langley. No better choice could have been made for the task, since Dr. Abbot has been continuously engaged in the study of solar radiation for the past thirty years. Only recently he started a controversy by his announcement that the heat of the sun was gradually diminishing, and had decreased from 3 to 4 per cent within fifteen months. Dr. Abbot is a native of New Hampshire and was educated at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Numerous honors have come to him from learned societies in recognition of his researches in solar radiation.



Voice to Voice=Face to Face

THE personal element is an important factor in salesmanship.

Every salesman knows that much of his success in securing orders depends on his method of approach.

His voice, greeting his customer over the telephone, secures for his sales message an undivided attention which may even exceed that obtained in personal interview, while still carrying with it the personal element of face-to-face.

By telephone, the salesman's voice conveys his personality to the man he calls.

Many Connecticut firms have found selling by telephone indisputably profitable.

Is there a thought in this for you?

Stories That Recall Others

No Wonder

The new baby cried almost continuously for three weeks. Even Harold was disturbed. It seemed to the lad that everywhere he went he heard the cries of his baby brother. He had heard a lot about storks carrying babies to happy homes and remarked rather sarcastically one evening after listening to the baby's wails, "Well, it is no wonder that they chucked him out of heaven."

Self Confession.

A business man accompanied his wife to a meeting and left her with the promise to call for her after a committee meeting at his church which he had promised to attend.

The church committee held an absorbing and prolonged session and at its adjournment he went home. The house was dark. He put some coal in the furnace and sat down for a short perusal of the paper till he could bank the fire for the night.

He was roused by footsteps and a knock at the front door. It was the forgotten wife. He doesn't tell how he squared himself, but his friends who know the story will not be surprised if he was unusually generous when her birthday came.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

JAGHBUB

Italy has asked Egypt to give her immediate possession of the oasis of Jaghbub four hundred miles due west of Cairo across the Libyan desert.

"The geography of this latest international territorial demand sounds a bit improbable," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Georgraphic Society, "until one remembers that Italy now possesses a large area of Northern Africa—Tripoli—and that this Italian colony adjoins Egypt on the west. Jaghbub (it is also spelled Jarabub and Jarabaih) lies about on what has heretofore been the disputed frontier between Egypt and Tripoli, or Cyrenaica, as the northeastern part of Tripoli is called. It is about 120 miles inland from the Mediterranean coast, almost due south of the border port of Sollum.

"Jaghbub is not a familiar geographic name, to put it mildly," continues the bulletin. "But 'senussi,' a member of the fanatical Mohammedan sect that time and again has turned northeastern Africa into a turbulent war field, is a term fairly well known to most readers of recent history in that part of the world. The two are closely connected. Until the Great War broke up the military aspects of Senusiism, Jaghbub was the heart and head of the movement, the residence of the Grand Senussi and a holy place of the sect to which hordes of its two million members flocked. Under the dome of the mosque at Jaghbub is the tomb of Sidi Mohammed ibn Ali es Senussi, who founded the sect about 80 years ago.

"The Senussis are sort of spiritual brothers of the Wahabis, the Arabian sect whose members recently captured Mecca. The Senussis play much the same role in Northern Africa, insisting that Islam be stripped of all luxurious practices and that it shall be marked by the utmost simplicity. Es Senussi did not overlook a 'propaganda department.' He established the famous University of Jaghbub which was long a power in the land, and which still operates with a greatly reduced student body.

"Jaghbub has been visited by few Europeans. It was long held inviolate somewhat as Mecca is. But there is little to induce a sightseer to cross miles of desolate desert. The oasis is very small, water is scarce, and the dates are of inferior quality. There are now only about 100 inhabitants. Besides the mosque and the white, bastionlike buildings of the 'university,' the structures of the community are negligible.

"During the great war the Senussi, under German and Turkish stimulus, waged war on the Anglo-Egyptian forces. The leader at that time, Sayed Ahmed, divided his time between Jaghbub and the extensive, prosperous oasis of Siwa about 60 miles to the southeast. After his defeat by British forces he escaped from Africa in a Turkish submarine, leaving as next claimant for leadership a cousin, Sidi Mohammed Idris, who has been friendly toward the British and Italians.

"Before Great Britain relinquished her protectorate over Egypt she had agreed that the Egyptian-Italian boundary be drawn so as to leave Jaghbub on the Italian side of the line. Italy, asserting that this arrangement is still binding, is asking for the formal transfer of the oasis from Egypt."

WOMEN BORN 1873 TO 1881

Now Is the Critical Time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will Help You Safely Through

Convoy, Ohio.—"During the Change of Life I was weak and run-down and could hardly do my work. By reading your advertisements I found out about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it beat straight—cured me right out and made me feel like a new woman. By the time I had taken eight bottles I was well and could do my housework on the farm without trouble. I recommended it to my daughter-in-law after her second baby was born and it did her a wonderful lot of good. I told her to try it and if it didn't help her I would pay for it, and before she had taken one bottle she said to me, 'You won't have to pay for it! It is helping me wonderfully!' And she took three bottles of it. You can use my testimonial if you wish."—Mrs. ELMER ACKERMAN, Convoy, Ohio.

Consider carefully Mrs. Ackerman's letter. Her experience ought to help you. She tells of the trials of middle age and the wonderful results she obtained from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

NORWICH ELKS' HOME

NORWICH ELKS HOLD JUBILEE OVER BURNING OF MORTGAGE

Norwich lodge of Elks, No. 430, had the biggest event of its history Wednesday evening, a triple celebration that included the 27th anniversary of the institution of the lodge, the tenth anniversary of the opening of the new home on Main street in the former W. C. Osgood residence and the burning of the $30,000 mortgage on the home. The mortgage burning was made possible by [illegible] ment of a $30,000 balance [illegible] the handsome house and grounds on Main street now stands free and clear of all debt.

Elks from the lodges in New London, Willimantic, Westerly, Putnam, Rockville, Middletown and Hartford as well as a delegation from Stonington, Mass., headed by James Sampie, a former Norwich man, were present to join in the Norwich jubilee and it was estimated that well over 1,000 of the antlered herd were on hand during the festivities of the night.

CHARLES W. CASSIDY

Mayor Milo R. Waters and members of the common council, Fire Chief H. L. Stanton, U. S. Commissioner Earl Mathewson, President A. E. Story of the Chamber of Commerce and Selectmen W. S. Murray and Charles S. Bushnell were special local guests in the lodge room when the programme began at 7 in the evening in the lodge room with the ceremonies attending the burning of the mortgage.

Dr. Thomas O'Loughlin of Rockville, district deputy grand exalted ruler, accompanied by George Williams, Martin Labscher and Percy Ainsworth of Rockville and Judge Max Boyer of New London, members of his staff, was the special guest of the evening.

Organist Hugh Kinder opened the programme with a well rendered prelude, following which Exalted Ruler Charles W. Cassidy called the gathering to order and expressed his pleasure at the great gathering of the membership, the guests and the visitors from brother lodges. The $30,000 mortgage has been fully paid off, he said, and we are prepared to burn it on this joyful occasion.

After District Deputy O'Loughlin and his staff had been escorted into the lodge room by Esquire Walter W. Carrigan and given seats at the exalted ruler's station Secretary William R. Balcom called the roll of past exalted rulers of the lodge. The following responded in the order named:

Reginald Fitzmaurice, Boston; John H. Cleary, Edward S. Hinckley, James P. Hayes, Judge N. J. Ayling, William R. Stevens, Thomas R. Craney, John H. Carney, John J. Connelly, Hartford; James J. Casey, ames Purdon, John L. Counihan, James E. McCormick, James J. Harrington, John E. Fitzgerald.

A moment of silence was observed in respect to the five deceased past exalted rulers, F. L. Osgood, Alfred Hunt, Archibald S. Spalding, Allen C. Matthews, and Arthur F. Campbell, while Exalted Ruler Cassidy recited a brief eulogy.

Brief Historical Sketches.

Five minute sketches of different periods in the history of the lodge were given by several past exalted rulers, beginning with John H. Cleary, who spoke of his initiation in Tyler Hall, in May, 1898, a month after the lodge was instituted. At that time the membership was 46 and interest in the lodge languished until it moved to Steiner hall, when the membership grew to 160 and three falos were given with net receipts of $1,700, $2,000 and $1,600.

Reginald Fitzmaurice, the oldest past exalted ruler present, spoke briefly when called upon and was followed by P. E. R. James P. Hayes, who covered the Steiner hall period. He joined in 1906 and he called himself the reason for buying the home as he said he began to argue for it in 1907 and the lodge finally voted to buy the property in 1909. Mr. Hayes gave a vision for the future when he said that the things to be done now was to build a hall to cover the back lot, 180x87 feet, which would be a great asset to the community and to the lodge.

P. E. R. John H. Carney covered the period in the home before the lodge room and hall addition was built. The mortgage of $7,500 assumed Oct. 12, 1911, was soon paid off, he said, and this was followed by the appointment of a committee on building the addition. He paid a tribute to the late William T. Ward for having been the one to secure the plans of the present building which were adopted Aug. 25, 1914 and the building committee with Judge Ayling as chairman.

P. E. R. John E. Fitzgerald covered the final period as it was under his administration in 1924 that the final balance of $3,000 was paid off on the mortgage. He paid a tribute to the administration of L. E. Millea as exalted ruler, the first under the $30,000 mortgage, and also to the associate officers and committees under his own administration which accomplished the final extinction of the mortgage.

Judge Nelson J. Ayling, senior trustee, presented a brief review of the financial side of the purchase of the Osgood property for $15,000 in 1909 and the subsequent financial negotiations. Of the three who signed a $7,500 mortgage at that time, John Donovan, the only one surviving, was present at the celebration. The other two were the late A. S. Spalding and George A. Allen.

Judge Ayling went onto say that this was paid off in 1910, and the $50,000 mortgage from the Chelsea Savings bank, as of Nov. 14 1911, and over $25,000 was used as $4,500 was raised over from the trustees. J. H. Carey, Jonah A. Reed and Judge Ayling signed the mortgage as trustees and a number of others signed as guarantors. During the life of the mortgage the lodge paid $9,700 in interest.

Burning the Mortgage.

The original mortgage and note were then produced by Judge Ayling, who struck a match to the papers as they reposed on a silver platter held by the two other trustees, James P. Hayes and James P. Service, while the lodge members cheered and applauded.

District deputy O'Loughlin was the concluding speaker, commending the lodge for its successful career, congratulating it for the ownership of such a fine property, free and clear, and urging it to participate more and more in social and community welfare.

A verse of the Star Spangled Banner closed the programme.

Parade is Held.

A parade with red fire blazing and the paraders wearing Elks hat bands was next in order, with music by Swahn's Elks' band and Houston's East Side drum corps. This covered a short line of march and returned to the home, where lunch was served at 9:30 and a five vaudeville programme as a troupe from Boston was given until midnight in the hall.

Swahn's band played at the [illegible] skellar and the Elks' orchestra in the hall. At 11 o'clock the Elks Toast was given by P. E. R. Hayes.

The committee in charge of the celebration included: Joseph F. Williams, chairman; F. P. Callahan, John H. Wilson, James M. Osten, John P. Corcoran, James Purdon and George P. Madden. They were generally complimented upon the complete success of

ONE NORWICH MAN GETS 3,400 DAY-OLD CHICKS

About 800 incubator chicks arrived at Norwich Post office by parcel post for distribution. The season is now at its height having been somewhat delayed by cold weather of late.

During Tuesday there was a big invoice of the day-old chicks, one man receiving a consignment of 3,400. The estimated value of his invoice was $700.

Up to this time the majority of the future broilers have come from New Jersey or from Wallingford, but now they are from more distant points, even from as far west as Indiana. Clerk Maurice F. Kelly and assistants in the parcel post department have to work lively to get the peepers off to their destinations as they arrive at the local office. To date, the chicks received have gone over the 20,000 mark.

A gem of thought is often impaired by a bad setting.

MAKING GREAT PLANS FOR NORWICH BOYS' WEEK

Plans for Boys' Week, April 24 to April 29, were explained at the noonday luncheon of the Norwich Rotary club on Wednesday noon at the Wauregan hotel by the chairmen of the various committees. All reports were very encouraging and the indications are that Norwich's Boys' Week will be a great success and that everyone in Norwich, especially the parents of boys, will enter into the project with hearty enthusiasm.

Edwin A. Harris introduced the various chairmen after an appeal to the Rotarians and the people of Norwich to support the movement which means so much to the boys of Norwich. General Chairman Nelson J. Ayling was the first speaker. Judge Ayling said that people who had children had a wonderful opportunity that is denied those who are childless. We have all heard that saying that "there is a destiny that shapes our ends" but I do not believe that this is wholly true. We have the boys here but their development is largely a matter of environment rather than destiny. The children come to us not of their own volition and it is up to us to make their environment so that they will grow up to be healthy normal children with a good sense of moral right and wrong. The men have a great habit of leading their lives along the lines of least resistance. Of course there is the duty of providing for the family but this is as far as some men labors at his work, comes home at night and swells out his chest saying go in family obligations. The man that he has done a good days work and is satisfied. Yet he neglects the little things that mean so much to the growing boy such as comradship between father and son. The boy is left largely to his mother who perhaps is busy with social activities and the boy is left to himself to find amusement where he fancies with no guiding hand to direct him in the proper channels. The boy of yesteryear is not the same as the boy of today. Times change and with the changing of times so changes the form of amusement for the child. Father will have a hard time adjusting himself to the boy of today. He should not be too severe with the boy and neither should he leave him to his own devices. There is a middle course. The greatest asset in the world today is the boy, for he is to be the man of tomorrow and will guide the affairs of the world. The duty lies with the father.

Alfred H. Peale was the next speaker. Mr. Peale is chairman of the committee in charge of "The Boys' Day in School." Mr. Peale outlined the plans of the committee to have special programmes in the schools on this day, Friday April 24th when parents are urged to visit the schools. There will be short talks to the children by various men and every effort will be made to get the parents to the schools on Friday the opening day of the Boys' Week.

"The Boys' Day Out of Doors" committee reported through its chairman, James E. Murphy who said that his committee was planning a series of athletic events for Saturday, April 25th., at Chelsea parade. The stunts will be put on from 1 to 3 o'clock nishing in time for children to attend the Academy baseball game. Mr. Murphy urged the parents to make an especial effort to get their children and to attend themselves; if the father intended to go fishing that day to take the boy with him.

Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, chairman of "The Boys' Evening at Home" committee, said that he hoped Dad and the boy would stay at home on Tuesday evening and get better acquainted. Stay home and do the things that the youngster likes, make him feel that you are glad to have him at home and that you take an interest in him and his work and play.

Ingold E. Robbins, chairman of "The Boys' Day for Service," said that the committee proposed to make this day a day when the boy should do something to help Dad and Mother. He suggested many things that the boy can do about the house to make his parents tasks just a little lighter.

The committee on "The Boy in Industry" made a report through its chairman, James E. Morton, who said that his committee was endeavoring to interest the boy in the industries in Norwich, and develop industry in the boy. Several manufacturies will welcome boys and parents at their plants on this day and will gladly explain the process of manufacture to the boys. A list of the plants that will co-operate in the movement will be published later.

Emery Davis of the Y. M. C. A., who is in charge of the Junior Olympics which will be held on the closing day explained the idea in which the best athletes from each school will compete in various events. There will be three classes: First boys under 12; second boys under 15 and third boys under 18. Mr. Davis also spoke on what this Boys' Week idea means to Norwich and in fact to the country in general, as one way to prevent crime is to educate the boy.

James L. Case spoke on the get-together meeting when the prizes for the winners in the Junior Olympics will be awarded.

At the business session President J. Nelson Weymouth presided and Bill Park and Joe Worth acted as song leaders. Several new songs for Ladies' Night were tried out an dthe club was in fine voice. An attractive and pleasing feature of the musical programme was the two solos by Frank R. Murdy.

Max Hanover made a strong plea for attendance at the Sunday afternoon concert at the Palace theatre for the benet of the Norwich Hebrew institute. Mischa Elman, celebrated violinist, is to be the artist and everyone known of the remarkable ability of this world renowned musician.

Herbert B. Cary spoke on the Ladies' Night plans and announced that there would be no meeting on next Wednesday noon.

Dr. Hugh B. Campbell and President J. Nelson Weymouth were elected delegates to the spring conference of the 30th Rotary district which opens today (Thursday) at Pittsfield, Mass. About 14 members of the local club will attend the conference.

HOW NATHAN HALE STAMP CAME TO BE ADOPTED

The Nathan Hale stamp came to be adopted by the post office department through the interest of George Dudley Seymour of New Haven, who took up the matter with Chief Justice William H. Taft, the latter in turn referring it to Presidents Harding and Coolidge. The matter was finally referred to Postmaster General New, and on March 10th he wrote to Mr. Seymour expressing his decision to adopt Nathan Hale as a cut on the new one-half cent postage stamps. The letter from the Postmaster General follows:

I hope I am about to make you happy. You may not be aware of the fact that the pay and rate which seems the department of one-half cent denomination. Requests for such an issue have been coming in for the last few days and I am satisfied that the demand for such a stamp will be widespread and permanent. Anticipating this I had the bureau of engraving and printing make two designs for me which I am sending for your information and inspection. My choice goes instantly to the one showing merely the face. To meet it is a perfectly marvelous countenance. If that face doesn't carry on it the stamp of nobility, I am no judge of physiognomy. I feel almost as much interest in this matter as you do and I see a way to get what we want without any reference to sesqui-centennials or anyone else for I have authority to place this order myself. The full length picture I do not like. I expect to affix my signature in the first case and put it immediately in the worse, so that it ought to be ready for issue within the next 45 days. I trust this your approval. Kindly return both designs at once as I want to place the order immediately, upon getting them back.

Nathan Hale's history has been closely identified with New Londons, as well as New Haven's and he had many close friends in the Continental Army where his acquaintance was of general and college nature. Neglect of his memory by those who should have cherished it and paid tribute, to him, as well as by the Federal Government, is one of the strange passages in our history. It is not satisfactorily explained by the ignominy that attached to the mode of his death since Andre also hanged was widely mourned on both sides of the Atlantic, while the sacrifice of Hale passed almost forgotten and never widely mourned as was that of Andre, for whom England raised a splendid memorial in Westminster Abbey.

Today, barring the living, Nathan Hale is probably the best known American after Washington Lincoln and Roosevelt. A striking statement, but a reasonable one, for it would be hard to find throughout the length and breadth of our and a school boy or school girl unacquainted with the memorable last words of this youthful martyr who so long ago gave his life in sacrifice to our cause of liberty. Hale has not yet been admitted to the official Hall of Fame which may be thought to need no lustre of his name more than he needs anything that the Hall of Fame could bring to him. It is a case for thankfulness that after [illegible] neglect for a century we have definitely taken [illegible] youthful national hero as the symbol of patriotism. In his case his personal beauty and athletic prowess, in his simplicity and [illegible] forwardness of character, in his supreme sacrifice and early death, he has an unfading brightness which must forever endear him to all who are quick to feed a modest and manly spirit.

For Mah-Jong Tiles

Nothing is ever wasted at the Chicago stock yards, but recently there has been an unparalleled call for shinbones for exportation to China for making mah-jong sets, says the Scientific American. Such bones are now an important article of commerce and are sent to China by the ton. These are used in connection with bamboo to form the "tiles" in the mah-jong set.

China does not have many domestic animals, and, therefore, is not able to supply the ever-increasing demand.

ACADEMY AND POMFERT GAME IS CALLED OFF IN THE FOURTH INNING

The Academy Baseball team travelled to Pomfret yesterday and after four innings of tight playing the game was called on account of the rain, the score being 5-4. The Academy boys were just about warmed up when the game was called. The local team seemed to have a slight advantage over the Pomfret team and no doubt had the game continued they would have won. The Pomfret team under no circumstances can be called a poor team as they are composed of some fine material and are scheduled to play some of the best schools in the state.

Irwin, the Academy pitcher pitched a fine game striking out 6 and displaying head work throughout the four innings that he pitched. Not once on a single would he make off his delivery. In the third inning he was threatened but succeeded to emerge from a tight place. The first man to face him, Thayer, flied out to Burke. The next man, Foster, was hit by a pitched ball, stole second and went to third on a misjudged throw. Hinrichs to Gavlin. With a man on 3rd and only 1 out it seemed that Pomfret would score. Plunkett struck out, making it two out. Gundry hit a slow grounder to Jarvis and was put out on 1st.

Both teams played an errorless game fielding in perfect fashion. Hinrichs of the Academy in the 3rd inning was the only man to make a hit, he singled to left field. It did not amount to much as his team mates at the time were still weak from the trip and failed to do any damage with the stick.

The results of the four innings of play were entirely satisfactory to Coach Earle W. Brigham. He was able to put the team in action against a good team and considering the bad weather condition in which the team played it made a splendid showing.

Coach Brigham is planning to put the squad through its daily practice for the next two days Thursday and Friday and on Saturday when the team faces the fast J. B. Martin team it should give a good account of itself.

The game with the J. B. Martin team was recently arranged by Manager Gilman as a benefit game for Tenbarri, a member of the squad who had broke his leg in practice and who will be unable to play for the next three weeks. The J. B. Martin team will furnish some stiff opposition for the high schools to solve and the game will be worth seeing. A large crowd is expected to be on hand to witness the contest. The score:

FOURNIER AND MEYER FIGHT AS DODGERS BEAT PHILLIES

New York, April 15—A fist fight between Jacques Fournier, the Dodgers' hard-hitting first baseman, and Coach Benny Myers of the Phillies marred Brooklyn's 6 to 4 victory over Philadelphia. Fournier said after the game that Myers had insulted Pitcher Dazzy Vance in yesterday's contest and today turned the verbal attack upon him. Several blows were struck before the men could be separated by umpires and players.

Jimmy Johnston, who took Fournier's place after the first baseman had been banished from the park, contributed a double in the eighth that cleared the bases and settled the issue. The score:

NURMI IS TEMPORARILY REINSTATED BY WESTERN A. U.

St. Louis, April 15—Paavo Nurmi, great Finnish distance star, who has been under suspension by the Amateur Athletic Union because of his failure to appear as advertised at a meeting in Kansas City Monday night, was reinstated today, it was announced by Verne R. C. Lacy, president of the Western District of the A. A. U.

Nurmi's reinstatement however, is conditional, Lacy said. While permitting him to fill engagements already contracted for, he will not be permitted to make further agreements until a complete investigation of his failure to appear in Kansas City has been made.

"We do not want to work an injustice on the organizations which have booked Nurmi for future appearances," Lacy said. "We will go right ahead with out inquiry as to his reasons for failing to fill his obligations at Kansas City, where the promoters lost about $5,000."

Nurmi was said to have been unable to appear at Kansas City because of illness. He is scheduled to run at Minneapolis tonight.

O'BRIEN FIGHTS WITH BROKEN HAND AND WINS

New York, April 15—Tommy O'Brien, Milwaukee lightweight, was awarded the judges' decision over Pal Moran of New Orleans in a twelve-round bout here tonight.

O'Brien fought eleven rounds of the bout with a broken hand, suffered in the first minute of boxing. The fracture affected his best hand—the right—which he had previously injured in a bout with George (K. O.) Chaney of Baltimore. He was compelled to pile up his winning margin of points with the left, which he employed successfully in a jabbing attack as Moran came to close quarters for ineffective infighting.

The injury was considered serious by O'Brien's supporters to compel him to withdraw from the lightweight tournament scheduled for April 20.

'CHICK' STANLEY, NORWICH BOY, PLAYING SPECTACULAR GAME AT CATHOLIC UNIV.

Norwich Academy has produced another baseball player who bids fair to make quite some reputation on college diamonds this year. This player is Lawrence J. Stanley better known as "Chick" Stanley to local fans but in college has been dubbed "Tubby" Stanley. Chick is now pursuing his studies, and the hurtling horsehide sphere, at Catholic University at Washington.

"Chick's" ability as a ball player was never for a minute doubted by Norwich people but some were very skeptical when he announced his intentions of going to C. U. last fall and many predicted that he would never make the grade in college baseball. However, Chick has shown them that he is still there and is really putting up a fine game. Hitting was Chick's most popular dish and he is still proving a thorne in the side of the college pitchers.

LAWRENCE "CHICK" STANLEY

It was Chick's bat that sent Big Ed. Mullowney of Boston College down to hurler who was not having such an easy time of it. Mullowney pitched and Stanley waited. The count became 3 balls and two strikes. The next ball would tell the story, if he walked Stanley the game was over, if Stanley fanned extra innings might follow. defeat Tuesday afternoon at Washington when C. U. won 4 to 3. The stage was admirably set for Chick's dramatic finish. It was the ninth inning, the score was tied, two men were down and the bases were loaded. Such a situation confronted the local lad when he came to bat. Was Chick nervous? Not he. He smiled at the Mullowney took the chance and grooved the ball. Stanley cut at it and the result was a stinging single to left field scoring Clarke with the game. Not only did Chick hit at the right time in that last inning but his double in the second frame had accounted for two runs besides. The game was practically Stanley vs. Mullowney. Thus has Chick carved his little niche in college baseball. Here's hoping he keeps on carving.

To date Chick has participated in five games and during these encounters has been at bat 18 times and has garnered 9 hits giving him a batting average of .500, no mean average in college circles. He is now batting in fourth position in the batting order, the coveted position of clean-up man, which all goes to show that the coach at C. U. recognize his hitting power.

One of the most remarkable features of Chick's playing is that he has taken up the game after a lay-off of four years. Chick went from the Academy to Holy Cross and tried out for a pitching position. His arm went bad and he left college. Last fall he took the entrance exams to Catholic University and made good. When he left here he weighed around 200 pounds. By diligent work he took off about 30 pounds of this superfluous weight and is now in the proverbial pink of condition. His arm is in good shape and he is now playing the outfield with a great deal of credit.

Local fans are watching with interest his career in the athletic world and even the skeptical ones will have to forego the pleasure of making that old threadbare crack, "I told you so."

NEW LONDON FAMILY, GAS-POISONED SHOWED IMPROVEMENT WEDNESDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 15—Monoxide, a deadly gas that frequently formulates on gas hot water devices and from which one death and other narrow escapes from the deadly poisonous fumes have occurred in New London within a comparatively short time, nearly killed seven children and adults last night when the family of Clyde L. Williamson, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. were partially overcome at the Williamson home, 1057 Ocean Avenue. But for the timely sensing of the dangerous gas by an occupant of the house it is probable that the entire family, excepting Mr. Williamson, who was not at home, would have perished.

The Williamson family had retired and about 10 o'clock, Mrs. Carrie L. Miller, aunt of Mr. Williamson, detected the strange odor; feeling dazed, she managed to go to the residence of Richard E. Egiden, next adjoining the Williamson home, Mrs. Belden hastening to the Williamson residence and then summoned Mr. Williamson, as the entire family, consisting of Mrs. Williamson, four children and a maid, Miss Lena Fenn, were in a semi-conscious condition. Mr. Williamson, accompanied by Harry Rafferty, Army and Navy secretary, were rushed to the Williamson house in an automobile and there the six partially unconscious residents were found. All were removed from the house to the open and a call to Lawrence hospital resulted in Drs. Charles Kaufman and George P Cheney responding. The physicians prescribed for the patients and all responded to treatment, although today Mrs Williamson and Miss Fenn are quite ill and under the care of the family physician.

Upon the death of Mrs. Colandini the body was taken from her home, after mourners had gathered there, and was taken on to the hospital where an autopsy was performed. Another twelve months of the labors of this association is drawing to a close and agreeable to the requirements of your by-laws as well as long established custom I render herewith my annual report.

The executive heads of the different departments have given you detailed reports tonight of the work under their supervision and I shall endeavor to avoid detail in this paper and give you rather a general summary of the affairs of the organization.

The past year marked for its generally adverse conditions and its real discouragements in most lines of endeavor has been a year of excellent progress and achievement for the association and I know that you will join with me in gratitude and thanksgiving.

I hardly need call to your attention the imperative need of the ministry of such agencies as this if we are ever to overcome the wave of lawlessness, brutality and crime with which the nation is at present afflicted. Thinking men everywhere are agreed that only through a re-awakened moral conscience and a realization of moral responsibility in our young manhood can a permanent remedy be found. It is my personal belief after fifteen years of official connection with this work that at no time during the forty years of its existence has the association been a more potent factor in the life of this community in activities that aim toward the development of real Christian citizenship.

Business.

The splendid ... ness that attended our ... many ... ago when almost ... entire ... our ... ments were ... days ... of seats to be set ... for the ... Middletown ... ed ... Over ... House ... ed ... way for the End of Year ... the ... moderate ... staff.

... as we will do ... we shall know that we approach the end of the fiscal year with all bills paid and a small ... being the twentieth year of this remarkably fine record.

A substantial reduction has been made during the year in the mortgage which means a saving in interest charges as well as relief from responsibility. The mortgage is now $15,000 and our property valued at least $150,000. Our income from dormitories has maintained its steady increase and I believe this year will prove to be a record. Our trustees have administered the trust funds with care and good judgment and receipts therefrom show a slight increase.

Boys' Work.

No activity in our curriculum is deemed of more importance than our service to boys. Under the leadership of Emory H. Davis who is entering his fourth year with us this department shows a gratifying increase and our ever multiplying number of boys who are eager to enjoy the privileges of the gym, the pool and club quarters.

Mr. Davis is proving very popular and capable in our Junior work and is constantly being called on to head up other enterprizes in this work throughout the city and town.

County Work

As we enter the new Association year an important problem awaits us in determining what our relation shall be toward County work for Boys. As Directors our Board is a unit in desire to serve the Boy on Farms and in Rural communities and grant to him at least a part of the privileges and well as influences enjoyed by our local membership. A wise solution of this question means much to the future of our Work.

Physical Department

The spirit of the Y is at all times a spirit of service and in recent years only has the local Y been able to render the kind of service that we believe business Men and young men demand thus with the remarkably fine Gymnasium and a faithful and energetic instructor Mr. E. J. FFritz who is entering his sixth year we find the Physical department working at top speed most of the time and the expressions of thorough enjoyment seem far beyond our fondest hopes. We note with great satisfaction the numbers of Business Men who frequent the Gym and derive fine results from this diversion. With this department and its complete equipment added to the Showers and the Swimming pool the ever ready remark seems to be that the Norwich "Y" has made good and that a great future awaits around the bend.

Womens Auxiliary

This associatnon will even owe a debt of gratitude to this splendid body of women who are evr anxious to assist in solving our problems and in the advancement of our service in this Community. Their Annual pledge of three hundred dollars toward our Budget proves a wonderful help and I welcome this opportunity to express for the Board and myself our keen appreciation of their helpfulness.

Union With the Churches in Lenten Services.

Enjoying as we do exceptional advantages placed in our hands by one whom I feel builded better than she knew, The Norwich Association holds a position of Leadership in evangelical enterprizes that has never been equalled to my knowledge locally. The constant prayer of our Board is that we may prove worthy of the confidence reposed in us by our Benefactor. Uniting with the churches we have been permitted to bring to this city some of the most notable preachers and lecturers in this country and that our people appreciate is best attested by the large attendance at each service. The final number of this seasons series when the choirs of the city assisted by Hartford singers rendered the Cantata of the Crucifixion proved the best Musical service and the most largely attended church service ever held in this city. Thanks to the Leadership of F. W. Lester this excellent success was made possible.

The Friday noonday meetings during the Lenten season proved a blessing and a real source of fine fellowship to many our our business men and under Rev. Mr. Danforth's guidance are looked forward to eagerly year by year.

Remarkably few places of our size as a city enjoy an endowment the earnings of which can be applied to so beneficent a purpose and with such beneficial results as our Sturtevant fund.

Few of those who are not in close touch with Association affairs realize what a remarkable change has come during this past year over the whole movement. The transition from the old International Committee to the new National Council, is really a rebuilding and revitalizing effort to better fit the Y for its World program and is making this organization if not the worlds greatest then one of its most active factors for Christian service.

This National Council is composed of some of our most capable leaders throughout the nation and this body is fortunate in having among its members one who was deemed fit to stand shoulder to shoulder with the best of our sponsors. Thus we take considerable pride of Ex-President Case's membership in this very important body.

We note the absence tonight of Director John W. McKinley, who lies on a sick bed at the Backus hospital and our prayers are united to Almighty God for his early recovery.

In the midst of innumerable success ... ches intrude and all men seem ... We note with sadness the loss of one who has been a loyal and ... stent supporter in past years. Mr. ... Cary, who has passed to ... beyond will be greatly missed ... association for we valued his ... and material help.

Year's Expenditures $25,618.56.

The report of the treasurer showed ... expenditures last year were $25,618.56. There is a balance on hand with all bills paid. The membership report showed that the present membership report is 932.

In the absence of John W. McKinley, chairman of the nominating committee, that committee's report was presented by Arthur F. Wyman, as follows:

For President, James C. Macpherson; first vice president, Herbert B. Cary; vice presidents, B. P. Bishop, Judge Allyn L. Brown, George H. Loring, James L. Case, Shepard B. Palmer, Leonard O. Smith; treasurer, Arthur F. Wyman.

The following whose terms expire at this time were recommended for re-election, all for three years: P. N. W. Chapman, John W. McKinley, N. Eugene Smith.

In the place of Charles L. Stewart whose increased duties in other lines make it impossible for him to serve longer as a director, the committee recommended Archibald Mitchell, 4th for three years.

For trustees, the committee recommended the re-election of the following for three years: Oliver L. Johnson, Frank L. Woodward.

The report was accepted and the secretary of the meeting was authorized to cast one ballot in favor of the nominees.

Votes of Thanks.

A rising vote of thanks was given Mr. Macpherson for his services as president of the past year and a rising vote of thanks was given Henry D. Johnson for his services as chairman of the new building fund.

The meeting adjourned with prayer by President Macpherson.

Previous to the annual meeting of the association the directors held their monthly meeting with a good sized attendance. Encouraging reports were given on the work of the past month. President Macpherson presided at the meeting.

The anniversary service of the Y. M. C. A. will be held Sunday evening at the Central Baptist church and the annual financial campaign will be held Monday. It is planned to complete the campaign in a one day drive.

Mrs. Skunk Moves

When Mrs. S. makes up her mind
There's naught to do but trail behind.
—Jimmy Skunk.

Mrs. Skunk had talked of moving, but Jimmy Skunk hadn't paid much heed to what she said. He was too much concerned with his own immediate affairs to be particularly interested in Mrs. Jimmy's talk. There is much to do and much to see in early spring, you know, and Jimmy was wandering about, enjoying life and thinking very little of home affairs.

So Jimmy hadn't paid much heed to Mrs. Jimmys' talk of moving. It had gone in one ear and out of the other. "It is just talk," said he to himself. "There isn't any reason for moving. We couldn't find a better home than we already have. Mrs. Jimmy talks about moving just for the sake of talking. She likes to hear her own voice. There is a full moon tonight," so I believe I'll go down to the Smiling Pool. It is a bit early for any of the Frogs excepting Peeper and Hyla, but you never can tell. It is so long since I have dined on frog that I've almost forgotten what one tastes like."

"Huh!" muttered Jimmy. "Now, I wonder who did this"

So Jimmy ambled down to the Smiling Pool and spent the night there. It was broad daylight when he reached home and he was too tired and sleepy to think anything about the fact that Mrs. Jimmy wasn't there. "She probably stayed out all night, too he muttered "I'm glad I got home first." Then he curled up and straightway went to sleep.

When he awoke about shadow-time he was still alone At first he didn't notice this, and when he did he wasn't much surprised. "Must be she has gone out early," thought he. "I'm beginning to feel a bit hungry myself. Wonder where I haven't been up around Farmer Brown's dooryard lately, so I think I'll have a look around there. There are good eats up there once in a while."

So Jimmy Skunk carefully made his toilet and ambled away through the Black Shadows toward Farmer Brown's dooryard. He didn't hurry. You know Jimmy seldom does hurry. He sees no use for hurrying. "People who hurry, rushing this way and rushing that way, miss a lot," says Jimmy. When he reached the dooryard he, found a dish of milk Black Pussy had left. Then he found some scraps of meat which Bowser the Hound had left so when Jimmy finally ambled along past the henyard and the henhouse he was feeling particularly good natured and in the best of spirits.

As he turned the end of the henhouse he was surprised to discover some freshly dug sand there. Of course he had to have a look at it and see what it meant. That sand had come from a hole dug down under the back of the henhouse.

"Huh!" muttered Jimmy. "Now I wonder who did this?"

"I did!" said a voice most unexpectedly, and a black head was thrust out of that hole. It was the head of Mrs. Jimmy.

"Oh," exclaimed Jimmy, when he had recovered from his surprise. "Why, how you surprised me, my dear! I had no idea you were up here."

"No!" replied Mrs. Jimmy, tartly. "You had no idea where I was, and you didn't care!"

Jimmy didn't heed this at all. He was too much interested in this new hole under the henhouse. "Did you dig that hole all yourself?" he asked Mrs. Jimmy nodded.

"What for?" asked Jimmy.

"For my new home," replied Mrs. Jimmy. "You know, I've moved. I told you I was going to move, and now I have. I moved last night."

"I didn't know it," replied Jimmy, with a queer, puzzled look on his face.

Alaskan Sponge Field?

Two sponges were attached to the anchor rope of the mine tender Leo when drawn from the water off Chichagoff, Alaska. Capt. Cedric Davis tested the temperature of the sea 20 fathoms down and found it was 18 degrees warmer than that of the surface. News of the sponge discovery aroused almost as much excitement as did the old-time gold craze. Fishermen sought diving outfits to explore the submerged rocks for sponge beds.

POETRY

Lise

If I were a cloud in heaven.
I would hang over thee;
If I were a star of even,
I'd rise and set for thee;
For love, life, light, were given
Thy ministers to be.

If I were a wind's low laughter,
I'd kiss thy hair;
Or a sunbeam coming after
Lie on thy forehead fair
For the world and its wide hereafter
Have naught with thee to compare.

If I were a fountain leaping
Thy name should be
The burden of my sweet weeping
If I were a bee
My honeyed treasures keeping,
'Twere all for thee.

There's never a tided ocean
Without a shore,
Nor a leaf whose downward motion
No dews deplore;
And I dream that my devotion
May move thee to sigh once more.

—Rose Terry Cooke

THE SUNFLOWERS

Against a background of farmhouses, cornstalks, barnyards, mountains,
Of chicken-coops, hay-fields, threshing machines and cows,
The sunflowers stand, flower beside flower,
And raise sto the sky their enormous candid brows.

Russian peasant women with bright round faces
Beaming from their 'kerchiefs fresh bought for a fair,
Standing in a row before they start the dancing
With a clapping of hands and ribbons in the air—

With shuffling of feet and the white dust rising
With a swinging of skirts and hands
With a panting and laughing and whistling and stamping
And the heavy smacking gusto of lips upon lips—

Oh the peasant gaiety, the sunny stolid
coquetry
Of the sunflower rows with their bright round brows.
And the farmhouses, cornstalks, barnyard and mountains,
The chicken coops, hayfields, threshing machines and cows!

—Elizabeth J. Coatsworth.

KALEIDOSCOPE

The pheasant is the best earthquake predictor known, the bird crowing before or during every slight shock, according to a Japanese writer.

Robert Sweet, of Austerlitz, N. Y., found a pearl in an oyster served to him in a restaurant and refused an offer of $100 for it. He sent it to New York to have its value appraised and learned that it was worth $57.

The largest grapevine in the world is growing in the Carpinteria valley in California. It is nearly a century old and is 8 feet 4 inches in circumference. The trellis covers about one-third of an acre and sixty heavy posts support it. In one year, it yielded more than ten tons of grapes.

The famous Piltdown skull, which has been pronounced prehuman by some anthropologists, is most assuredly human, according to Sir Arthur Keith, probably Britain's greatest physical anthropologist, in the latest revision of his chief work, The Antiquity of Man. His latest computations on the skeletal fragments indicate a brain capacity for the creature of about 1,300 cubic centimeters. He holds that 1,000 cubic centimeters is the lowest human level.

FREE SHOW THIS AFTERNOON

The first 500 people are going to be admitted for 10 Cents. Just think a little thin dime. I want you to see the show. I want you to go out and tell your friends—The loss I take on the admissions the first afternoon is going to be made up by the increased patronage the rest of the week. The word of mouth advertising is what I am depending on to crowd the theatre to capacity. I've got to have capacity or take a big loss, but I know that after the first afternoon you'll have to come early if you want a seat.

I've got a great surrounding bill and you can jot this down in your note book that if you miss this show you are losing more than I am.

Don't Fuss With Mustard Plasters!

Musterole Works Without the Blister—Easier, Quicker

There's no sense in mixing a mess of mustard flour and water when you can easily relieve pain soreness or stiffness with a little clean, white Musterole.

Musterole is made of pure oil of mustard and other helpful ingredients, combined in the form of the present white ointment. It takes the place of mustard plasters, and will not blister.

Musterole usually gives prompt relief from sore throat, bronchitis, tonsilitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest (it may prevent pneumonia).

To Mothers: Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS IRREGULAR.

New York, April 15.—Extreme irregularity in price movement developed in today's stock market, the rails working towards higher levels while the industrials showed reactionary tendencies. Bullish enthusiasm was checked by another sharp break in grain prices and the publication of the weekly steel trade reviews setting forth that business during the second week of April was quieter than the first.

Buying of the rails was stimulated by the decision of the interstate commerce commission overruling a motion to postpone consideration of the Nickel Plate merger plans. The weekly car loadings report, which was 2,000 cars smaller than the previous week and 60,358 cars larger than the corresponding week of 1924, was regarded as encouraging because of the substantial increase in the loadings of general merchandise.

New York Central, Baltimore and Ohio, Louisville and Nashville, Rock Island common, Kansas City Southern, Missouri Pacific common and preferred and "Katy" common and preferred were among the dozen or so issues to show net gains of one to nearly two points. Jersey Central jumped five points and Chicago Northwestern preferred 2 3-4 but the turnover in each case was small. Colorado and Southern soared 5 1-2 points to a new 1925 top at 62.

United States Steel common developed impressive strength in the face of the relatively unfavorable trade news, touching a new high on the current movement at 117 5-8 and closing just below the top for a net gain of 3-4 on the day. Republic Iron and Steel advanced a point to 47 1-4 although the publication of the quarterly report after the market closed showed net profit of $812,560 as compared with $1,356,158 in the last quarter of last year. Bethlehem, Gulf States and Crucible steels improved fractionally.

Motor shares continued to gather strength, Maxwell B. being lifted up nearly 3 points to a new high record at 73 3-4 while Hudson crossed 54 to a new top and then eased to 53 7-8, up 1 7-8. Mack Trucks sold as high as 147 3-8 and then slipped back to 145 1-2, up one eighth. Jordan moved up 1 3-4 to 51 3-4 while General Motors and stocks of some of the smaller companies improved fractionally.

Several of the standard industrials lost ground. American Can sagged more than a point to 172 7-8 and American Sugar Refining fell back 1 1-4 to 68 3-8. Baldwin fell from 115 1-2 to 112 3-4 and then rallied to 114 3-8, off 3-4 on the day. Marked heaviness also was noted in Cuba Cane Sugar preferred, General Electric, Americap Car and Foundry, the Commercial Solvents issues, Electric Storage Battery, May Department Stores, National Biscuit, Pittsburgh Coal and Sears-Roebuck, all of which showed net losses of 1 to 3 points. United States Cast Iron Pipe broke nearly 6 points to 168 1-2 and Goodrich Tire fell back 1 5-8 to 51 5-8 in reflection of speculative disappointment over the failure of the directors to declare a dividend.

Call money ruled unchanged at 3 1-2 per cent. Time money rates showed an easier tendency, more funds being available for the shorts maturities at 3 1-4 per cent. Prime commercial paper was quoted at 3 3-4 to 4 per cent.

The feature of the foreign exchange market was the recovery of nearly 4 points in French francs at 5.13 on indications that Painleve would be successful in the formation of a new cabinet. Demand sterling ruled around $4.76. Japanese yen at 43 cents to a new high on reports of a reduction in discount rediscount rate, sterling advanced 12 points at 16 15 cents. To Dry Up Gulf Coast

Rear Admiral Frederick G. Billard, Commandant of the United States Coast Guard, who has been sent to New Orleans with instructions to "dry up" the Gulf Coast, that long stretch of littoral through which thousands of gallons of good red liquor—good, sometimes—seeps daily to end the legal parch in all parts of the United States. Admiral Billard has mobilized the greater part of the entire "dry navy" against the Gulf rum-running fleet and some real battles are expected, as it is known the liquor smugglers are heavily armed, even to machine guns and determined to put up a fight.

FAVORABLE ATTITUDE SHOWN TO NORWICH ISSUE OF WATER BONDS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Hartford, April 15—The matter of issuance of $1,500,000.00 of water bonds by the city of Norwich was heard by the committee ordinance today.

The hearing was opened by Corporation Counsel William H. Shields Jr. who explained the existing conditions, in the water department which had made it necessary to ask authority to issue these bonds. He reviewed the receipts and expenditures of the department. The continued growth of the use of water which now is about 3,000,000 gallons per day will soon be greater in the near future. In reply to House Chairman Parsons, Mr. Shields said that he would devise his substitute bill so that it will provide for the payment of bonds in forty years. Engineer Scott of the State Department of Health reported on the survey that had been made by the department and of the permission that had been given for pumping from Trading Cove Brook. The department is not in favor of a continuance of this form of supply. They are making a weekly inspection of the brook.

S. B. Palmer, City Engineer, said that the reservoir's have a storage capacity of about one billion gallons. Owing to the drought that has prevailed there is now only about six hundred millions gallons or four hundred million gallon shortage. Pumping two million gallons a day does not increase the storage in the reservoirs.

Dr. F. S. Wilcox said the state had contracted with the Norwich department for a supply. The institution needs at the present time 200,000 gallons per day. This the department is not able to supply. He emphasized the need of an increased supply, and was of the opinion that the bond issue asked for should be granted.

President Corkery reviewed the consumption of water in the city which was constantly increasing.

Chief Engineer Stanton told of the penalizing the city by the insurance companies because they had not an adequate water supply.

Ex Mayor Murphy said that insurance rates would be increased if a better supply was not provided.

Henry H. Gallup gave his endorsement to all that had been said about the immediate need of an increased supply of water.

Mayor Water's said that he believed this matter had the approval of the people of Norwich, and called the attention of the committee to the fact that the Norwich department was also supplying water to the Tuberculosis Hospital for domestic and fire purposes.

No opposition appeared against the bill and the committee manifested a favorable attitude.

Persons present from Norwich were: President J. J. Corkery of the Water Board, Mayor Mile R. Waters, Chief Engineer Howard L. Stanton, Town Attorney Harry H. Peyis, Town Clerk Charles S. Holbrook, Corporation Counsel Wm. H. Shields Jr., Selectman Wm. S. Murray, Ex-Mayor T. C. Murphy, Tax Collector H. T. Robinson, Chamber of Commerce Secy. John J. O'Rourke, City Engineer S. B. Palmer, Miss Julia J. O'Connell of City Treas. office, Doctor Franklin S. Wilcox, Supt. of State Hospital, Henry H. Gallup, President of Board of Trustees, State Hospital, James B. Sheridan, Chas. A. Hagbery, member of Water Board.

COMPENSATION AWARD FOR WIDOW OF MOSES SOLOMON

Mrs. Ida Solomon of 334 Broadway, dependent widow of the late Moses J. Solomon of Norwich, is the beneficiary under the terms of a compensation finding made by Commissioner J. J. Donohue, against the Yantic Grain & Products Co., of Norwich, employer, and the New Haven insurance company.

By his finding the commissioner awards to Mrs. Solomon compensation at the maximum rate of $18 per week for a period not to exceed the 312 weeks provided by the act for fatal cases, accrued payments to be made at once from Jan. 26, 1925, in a lump sum forthwith, and weekly during the remainder of the period during which compensation may be payable.

Moses J. Solomon was president of the respondent company, doing business in the city of Norwich, with branch stores in several other places.

His salary was $125 per week.

In part the commissioner's finding says:

Aside from being president of the company, the Yantic Grain & Products company, it is found that he, as well as other officers of the company, put in all their time in various lines of employment connected with said company, such as soliciting business, directing other employes, delivering goods and performing duties in connection with the office itself, and in fact doing anything and everything he could to promote the interests of the company.

It is found that on the 23rd day of January of the present year, a telephone order for sugar for the Moosup branch of the Self Service stores was received at the office of the Yantic Grain & Products company in Norwich, and as no other way could be found to deliver the sugar, the decedent arranged to take the goods wanted in an automobile to Moosup. It is found that he did so, the store in question being on the Norwich side of the railroad tracks in Moosup, and after making delivery of the sugar, the decedent crossed said tracks and went to their own branch grain store in Moosup and secured a tire and started back towards Norwich, and in crossing the railroad tracks the automobile in which he was riding was struck by a train and decedent received serious injuries. He died at the Backus hospital Jan. 26, 1925 from his injuries.

It is found that the widow and her three minor children were totally dependent upon the deceased.

It is further found that the decedent was very clearly within the scope of his employment at the time of his injury which resulted in his death, that at the time of his injury he was an employe of the respondent company, and that his injuries arose out of and in the course of his employment and that his widow is entitled to the provisions of the workmen's compensation act.

HARWOOD TAKES FIRST PLACE FROM DRAKE

With a difference of less than 400 in the scores of the three leaders and with only one more evening to play, there is much interest in the outcome of the tournament. Scores for the evening: Harwood 8,580; Amburn 8,270; Griffith 8,255; Huntington 8,235; Allen 7,785; Lamb 7,730; Burlingham 7,675; Gifford 7,475 Drake 7,440; Crowell 7,310; Kenefick 7,260; Cochran 7,100; T. LEDYARD FARMER DIES, FELL ON CIRCULAR SAW

Thomas A. Ball, 77, of Ledyard, died Wednesday morning at the Backus hospital, of injuries sustained a week ago when he fell on a rapidly revolving circular saw while at work on his farm. Mr. Ball was born in Ledyard, March 9, 1848, the son of Gardner and Malinda Perkins Ball. Years ago he was in New London and worked at the machinist's trade. He served with the Union forces during the Civil war. For the past 20 years he has worked on his farm in Ledyard.

Mr. Ball was one of five brothers who served in the Civil war. One of his brothers served during the war on the tug Underwriter, which was then a Union blockade ship and which now is tied up at the New London state pier as a captured rum runner.

Thomas A. Ball is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Freelove Davis of Lyme, and Mrs. Emma Babcock of Ledyard Center. He also leaves one brother, Cephas Ball of Jay street, New London.

FOUR PRINCIPAL BREEDS DIVIDE STORRS HONORS

The leading pens for the past week in the Storrs egg laying contest are about equally divided among the four principal breeds. Two Connecticut pens are tied for first place, Hilltop Farm's White Leghorns from Suffield and Keewaydin Farm's Rhode Island Reds from Darien. These two pens made a score of 51 eggs each. Second place went to a pen of White Wyandottes from Carteret Farm at Troy, Mo., whose birds made a score of 50 eggs. Two Massachusetts pens were tied for third honors. F. S. Chapin's Rhode Island Reds from Longmeadow, Mass., and a pen of White Leghorns entered by Meadowedge Farm at Sterling Junction each had a production of 49 eggs. Fourth place was filled by a pen of White Wyandottes entered by Obed G. Knight of Bridgeton, R. I., whose total for the week was 47 eggs.

The production in the leading pens and in the contest as a whole is somewhat lower than for last week. The total production was 4159 eggs or a yield of over 42 per cent. This represents a decrease of about five per cent from last week's production and is probably accounted for by the fact that the night lunch under electric lights has been completely discontinued. Recovery from this change will probably take place during the coming week and result in a normal increase in production which is to be expected at this time of the year. The general health of the birds in the contest is very good. The occasional cases of sickness which usually appear in the late winter and early spring have now recovered and the stage appears to be set for a successful spring.

JUDGE FINDS PLAINTIFF WAS NEGLIGENT DRIVER

Judge Edwin C. Dickenson has handed down judgment for the defendant, The Connecticut Co., in the suit brought against the company by Arthur Morgan of New London, a railroad engineer, who sought $3,000 damages for personal injuries and damage to his automobile that was in collision with a trolley car on Williams street, New London, on June 20, 1923.

Judge Dickenson, before whom the case was recently tried in the superior court finds that Morgan's failure to use due care was the proximate cause of the injury and that therefore he cannot recover.

Morgan claimed that his automobile had been damaged to the extent of $1,660 and that he had lost a month's wage of $265 and been obliged to pay $11 in doctor's bills.

Memorandum of Decision.

In his memorandum of decision, Judge Dickenson says:

The plaintiff, it appears, entered the south driveway of the filling station indicated on the map and photographs in evidence, and after getting gas drove out of the north entrance. As counsel for the plaintiff has suggested in argument, the plaintiff did not drive out at right angles bearing to the north. At this time when he was at or near the west sidewalk of Williams street he says he looked to the south and saw no trolley car on Williams street.

There are two conclusions that may be drawn from this statement, with the other evidence in the case, either one of which is fatal to the plaintiff's claim. First, that he did not make a proper observation, his back being partly to the approaching trolley because of the direction his car was headed in, or, second, that he did look, saw the trolley, and took the chance of making the turn. There are certain bits of evidence that incline me to take the second view. An examination of the photographs, exhibits 1 and 2, and of the map, plaintiff's exhibit A, shows that a person situated where he claims to have been at this time might have seen a trolley car at any point between the filling station and Main street, and the weight of evidence indicates that the trolley must have been on Williams street at the time the plaintiff was on the west sidewalk driving out. On his own statement, at this time the plaintiff shifted from first to second speed to give his car a good start of gas. This statement jibes with the testimony of all the other witnesses of the actual collision that the collision happened suddenly and that it happened as the plaintiff turned out on to the car tracks. If the plaintiff, as he claims, ran onto the tracks with his left wheel some three feet over the westernmost track when the trolley was at or near Miner's store, which, according to the civil engineer, was 147 feet away, it stands to reason that he would have completed his circle and have been off the car tracks before the trolley car had arrived at the spot.

Whatever criticism may be made as to the intelligence of the motorman, Fitzgerald, his honesty seems apparent. He saw the plaintiff as the plaintiff was about to leave the gas station, sounded his bell, and thought from the conduct of the plaintiff that the plaintiff saw him. If Fitzgerald could see the plaintiff in his car, certainly the plaintiff could and should have seen the trolley car at this time. I cannot escape the belief that the plaintiff did see the trolley car as he rolled into the street and that he put on speed to complete his turn at this time thinking he might do so before the trolley reached him.

Such conduct cannot be called reasonable care. Rather it was taking "close chances as to his ability to clear the trolley track before the car passed over," to use an expression in Woodhall v. The Connecticut Co., 100 Conn. 361-365.

It is found that the plaintiff's failure to use due care was the proximate cause of his injury, and that therefore he may not recover.

Judgment is directed for the defendant to recover his costs.

Withdrawal in Voluntown Suit.

Withdrawal in the $10,000 damage suit brought by Fannie Goldberg of Voluntown against Dr. John H. Hoover, also of Voluntown, has been filed with Clerk George E. Parsons of the superior court.

The plaintiff is the wife of David Goldberg. The defendant for many years past has been a practicing physician in Voluntown. The plaintiff claims that during her sickness she lost large quantities of blood, became weak and helpless in her body, and suffered great pain, and anguish of body and mind; her health became greatly impaired, to such an extent that she can never regain her original state of health, her constitution permanently injured, and she was obliged to, and did, expend, a large sum of money in endeavoring to be cured of her sickness.

Another paper filed states that Dr. Hoover died in 1924, and that action is pending against the executrix, Sophie I. Hoover.

WANDERING NORWICH GIRLS ARE BROUGHT BACK

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, April 15—Two Norwich girls, one named Gromesky and the other Herrick, the former 16 and the latter 16, came to New London this afternoon and by their conduct attracted the attention of the police as it was evident if the girls were not looked after they would be likely to fall into ways of vice. To prevent this, Traffic Officers William Corcoran and William Graham and Patrolman John Hogan took the girls into custody and at the police station they gave their names as Ruth Williams, 23 Clay street, Norwich, and Nellie Hopper, 107 Smith street, also Norwich. Following the New London police communicating with the Norwich authorities in an endeavor to obtain the coming to New London of parents of the girls, it was revealed that the girls were not known at the addresses they had claimed, but it was made known that the Gromesky and Herrick girls were missing. Shortly after 7 o'clock Patrolman William Sharvan of the Norwich police department, came to New London for the purpose of escorting the girls back to that city, but to this they steadfastly refused to submit, Sharvan intended to escort the girls home on a trolley car and in view of the fact that they had displayed ugly demeanor and might possibly make trouble for the officer while enroute to Norwich, Patrolman William Babcock was instructed to drive the police automobile with Officer Sharvan and the two runaways to Norwich and in that manner assure the girls getting back home and without making trouble along the way.

In the Midst of Plenty Thousands of Children are Starving

Not starving for food—mind you—for of that they get plenty—but simply starving for the want of vitamines that their entire being is eagerly craving for.

Let us all be thankful that these vitamines can now be supplied and that right now this vast army of weak, thin, undernourished and underweight boys and girls can with the balmy sunshine days of spring and summer grow strong, robust and happy.

Nature's greatest health builder and strength giver is Cod Liver Oil—it's full of vitamines of the first class—everyone knows that.

But pity the poor children—how can they take this nasty, nauseating stuff that invariably upsets their small, delicate stomachs?

Most of them can't and now—thank godness—none of them have to.

For now Cod Liver Oil comes in tasteless sugar coated tablets, that are as easy for the kids to take as candy and they sure do build up the youngsters in double quick time.

So mothers, if any of your loved ones aren't feeling right just ask Lee & Osgood Co., or any druggist for a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—40 tablets—40 cents.

They start to help the poor child in just a few days and they'll help you too; for you won't need to worry any more.

One sickly, thin child aged 9 gained 12 pounds in seven months and now plays daily with other children.

Splendid for any run down, weak, skinny, nervous man or woman—thousands of boxes are sold daily—but be sure and ask for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—the original and genuine. Try them for 30 days and if you aren't delighted with the improvement get your money back.

PAINLEVE CABINET AGREE ON MINISTERIAL PROGRAM

It Has Been Announced That Painleve as Premier Will Take the War Portfolio, With Briand Minister of Foreign Affairs—Caillaux Will Assume Guidance of French Finances—Caillaux Yesterday Studied the Financial Situation With the Leading French Bankers.

Paris, April 17.—(By the A. P.)—After arduous negotiations Paul Painleve completed his cabinet about midnight, and sent notification to President Doumergue that he had succeeded in constituting a ministry, where Briand had failed.

So difficult were the last hours of the task that hope had almost been abandoned of reaching an agreement. Not, in addition to forming the ministry, an accord also was found on the ministerial programme.

M. Painleve himself takes the post of minister of war, as well as president of the council, while M. Briand assumes the portfolio of foreign affairs, and Joseph Caillaux, whose political career was thought to have ended when in 1920 he was sentenced to imprisonment and ordered expatriated, will have the guiding hand over France's finances.

The only member of M. Herriot's cabinet who remains is the former finance minister, Anatole De Monzie, to whom is attributed in a measure the downfall of the Herriot administration. He becomes minister of public instruction. The cabinet is as follows:

Premier and minister of war—Paul Painleve.

Foreign affairs—Aristide Briand.

Finance—Joseph Caillaux.

Justice and vice president of the cabinet—Julez Steeg.

Public instruction—Anatole De Monzie.

Interior—Senator A. Schrameck.

Commerce—Charles Chaumet.

Marine—Emile Borel.

Colonies—Andre Hesse.

Agriculture—Jean Durand.

Public Works—Pierre Laval.

Labor—Antoine Durafour.

Devastated Regions—Pierre Deyris.

Pensions—Louis Anterious.

The ministerial crisis occupied the leading statesmen and bankers throughout the day and night, and claims of all descriptions were suggested and put aside until the final combination was decided upon. It is reported that M. Briand's hesitation to accept the portfolio of foreign affairs held up the final decision, as his programme was said to be greatly at variance with that of Caillaux.

Briand's role, although less spectacular than during the first four days of the crisis, was the point around which the entire situation revolved. Upon his acceptance or refusal to enter the cabinet hinged M. Painleve's charges of success or failure. One parliamentarian expressed it thus: "Briand can torpedo Painleve's cabinet before it is actually afloat."

The complete eclipse of Edouard Herriot, the retiring premier, from the councils of the leading statesmen conferring with M. Painleve marked the proceedings of the day. M. Herriot paid a short visit to the prospective premier, but somewhat naively volunteered the information that he had come without being sent for." This heightened the impression in parliamentary circles that the late premier had been systematically omitted from the negotiations by the parties upon which the cabinet was eventually chosen. Herriot announced that he was leaving for Lyons Friday.

M. Caillaux spent one of the busiest days of his busy life. The morning and early afternoon he devoted to a study of of the financial situation with leading French bankers, the evening and night hours to the political situation with the most prominent statesmen. After conferring for three hours with the financiers, Caillaux said: "It is not my habit to ask financial advice from financiers, and I do not intend to acquire such a habit."

When he emerged from a five hour session with the politicians he remarked: "Patience has never been one of my outstanding qualities, but I think I am learning it."

Caillaux declared that the situation of the French treasury appeared "very serious," but he hoped, if he took charge of the ministry of finance, to make it normal by various appropriate measures, notably the absolute separation of the question of the treasury and monetary situation from budget considerations."

The return of M. Caillaux to public affairs is received without bitter criticism by even those sections of the press and politicians which have been most instrumental in the past in attacking his policies. No reference whatever has been made to his activities during the war.

RADICAL SOCIALISTS HAVE CONFIDENCE IN CAILLAUX

Paris, April 16—M. Caillaux made a declaration at a meeting of the radical socialist group this afternoon on the futility of "improvised measures" in order to place the treasury on a sound footing. This group remains the most numerous in the chamber having 140 members, as compared with the socialists 104.

M. Caillaux began by sketching the situation of the treasury since the war as laid before him by the bankers; then outlined some measures he said in kind for its relief.

He spoke gravely of the sacrifices to which the nation must submit to restore its finances, which would be still heavier than the penances he had brought sufficient a few months ago.

The coolness displayed by a section of those present at the commencement disappeared as he proceeded with his speech, and a motion expressing full confidence in him and promising full support was voted unanimously.

The declaration of M. Caillaux was considered both firm and prudent. One phrase he used was: "If at times I have worn the livery of an aristocrat, I have never had an aristocrat's soul."

CAILLAUX SENSITIVE ABOUT HIS BALD HEAD

Paris, April 16—(By the A. P.)—Joseph Caillaux who has accepted the post of minister of finance in the Painleve cabinet, can boast—but does not—of one of the boldest heads in the world. Known as one of the best dressed men in France, M. Caillaux who is very particular concerning his personal appearance, dislikes any reference to his lack of hair. Surrounded by a hundred newspapermen this evening as he left M. Painleve's apartments in the chamber of deputies, M. Caillaux, beyond saying that the situation was tangled, but not inextricable, remained silent.

"It is a situation such as will cause you many gray hairs," one of the correspondents blessed with a luxuriant growth of hair volunteered.

"You are a clever man," M. Caillaux retorted with a slight touch of annoyance. "I gladly would exchange my portfolio of the ministry of finance for a head of hair like yours."

SHEPHERD PLEADED NOT GUILTY TO MURDER CHARGE

Chicago, April 16—White and haggard from his month's stay in jail, William D. Shepherd today emphatically pleaded not guilty to the charge that he murdered William N. McClintock, his millionaire foster son, with typhoid germs.

Chief Justice Hopkins of the criminal court, before whom Shepherd was arraigned, previously had overruled a motion of Attorney William Stewart to quash the indictment. In making this motion, Mr. Stewart said he did not care to argue it, and the judge said he would not consider it under the circumstances.

As soon as Shepherd's plea had been entered, first assistant State's Attorney Gorman demanded that the trial start at once. Judge Hopkins ruled that the date was a matter for the trial judge to determine.

"The case will follow the regular call," he said.

Shepherd's sister Mrs. Amos W. Peden of Indianapolis, sat beside him during the arraignment procedure. He was taken back to his cell in the county jail, having been denied freedom on bail several times.

Information relating to life in the McClintock household just before the death of Mrs. Emma Nelson McClintock, the boy's mother, was brought today to Chief Justice Olson of the municipal court by Mrs. Anna Beckford, who served as a nurse to Bills. Judge Olson instigated the investigation into the deaths of young McClintock, Mrs. McClintock and his own brother, Dr. Oscar Olson.

Mrs. Beckford told of a mysterious illness that sent her to a hospital after she had permitted Shepherd to give her medicine for a cold. She described also the continuous influence of Shepherd in every action of Mrs. McClintock, and declared Shepherd signed Mrs. McClintock's every decision.

ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF DEFRAUDING MERCHANTS

New Haven, April 16—Following complaint by the Chamber of Commerce, Thomas P. Madden, of no certain address, was arrested here today on a technical charge of idleness, it being alleged that he has obtained funds from merchants in all parts of the state under false pretenses, City Attorney Sheridan T. Whitaker, said tonight that so far the police have counts to place against Madden.

According to the police, Madden represented himself as an agent for the National Retailers' Advertising association of Chicago and offered to install a large electric sign in front of the merchant's place of business upon payment of $6.50 to him and $10 upon the arrival of the sign.

Madden confessed tonight, according to the police that there was no such concern as the one he said he represented and that he had used the money that he collected from the merchants.

Contracts in his possession showed that about 500 merchants had paid him $6.50, they being located in New Haven, Waterbury, Hartford, Meriden, Wallingford, Bristol, Derby, West Haven, Seymour, Ansonia and other places.

CONSIDERING NEW COUNTY BUILDING IN HARTFORD

Hartford, April 16—A proposal to erect a new county building in the triangle formed by the junction of Washington and Lafayette streets and the south end of the Leverett Brainard property will be laid before a special county committee meeting to be held tomorrow. The estimated cost of the building would be in excess of a million dollars, according to what is projected. The site is diagonally across Lafayette street from the State library and supreme court building, diagonally across Washington street from the site of the future state administration building, and faces the state capitol.

The committee, which was appointed by County Chairman Robert J. Smith, of Manchester, consists of the county commissioners, Joseph F. Barry, of Hartford, George W. Klett, of New Britain, Raymond J. Johnson, of Manchester and David Weinerman, of Hartford.

MEETING OF THE NATIONAL LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

Richmond, Va., April 16—Programs for constructive work in every field of the organization's endeavor, were adopted in committee meetings of the National League of Women Voters here today. The programs will be submitted for final vote on the floor of the convention.

Fifty-three specific legislative recommendations were made, the most outstanding dealing with American policies in international relations, chiefly those seeking to abolish war. Simplication of election laws, government operation of Muscle Shoals, removal of legal discriminations against women, economic legislation to regulate the cost of living; intensive war upon social evils; adjustment for women in industry, and equalization of educational opportunity were among the goals set for the league.

Report From Dirigible R-33

London, April 17—The air ministry at 5 o'clock this morning made public a message from the R-33 saying she was making about eight knots an hour. The weather was fine and she was encountering little wind.

RIGHT OF GOVERNMENT TO TAX LIFE INSURANCE

Washington, April 16—The right of the government to tax the $424,000 of life insurance left by Henry C. Frick, Pittsburgh iron and steel magnate, to his widow and daughter, was argued in the supreme court.

The government, holding that this insurance is taxable as part of the Frick estate is seeking to compel the executors to include the amount in the total for distribution of the estate tax payment. The lower court held that the law under which the tax was proposed was unconstitutional because by specifically adding life insurance proceeds to net estate sit provided a direct tax.

If that decision is upheld by the supreme mcecourt, Mrs. Frick and her daughter will not be required to pay any tax whatever upon the money they received under the insurance policies, it having been established by a long line of precedents that proceeds from life insurance policies as such are not income and therefore are not taxable.

Counsel for the executors based their objection in the supreme court largely on the ground, that should the money derived from the insurance policies be added to the net Frick estate the assessmen would take the highest rate of taxation, the steel magnate having left an estate in excess of $100,000,000.

OSLER WOULD DODGE TEAPOT DOME OIL CASE

Toronto, April 16—The Toronto Star says that H. S. Osler, former president of the Continental Trading company, will appeal from the appellate court's decision last month requiring him to give certain testimony sought by the United States government in connection with the Teapot Dome oil case. The newspaper says that the case may be carried by Osler to the privy council.

Osler returned here Monday after a hunting trip to Africa, where he contracted blood poisoning. Special counsel for the United States maintained that he was in a position to tell what disposition was made of $90,000 in Liberty bonds said to have been purchased with oil profits, and to give information as to whether any of these bonds came into possession of Albert B. Fall, former U. S. Secretary of the Interior.

HUGE BULLDOG CREATED A SCARE IN WALL STREET

New York, April 16—Pedestrians in Wall street and the surrounding financial district were routed temporarily when a huge bull-dog ran amuck through the section, driving hundreds to cover, before it was captured. The dog did not bite anyone so far as could be learned, but will be examined for rabies.

Choosing the front doorway of the offices of J. P. Morgan and Company as a starting point, the dog tore through Wall and Broad streets, ran through a restaurant upsetting patrons and filled the district with the din of his bark and the screams of frightened stenographers.

Police reserves finally roped the dog which was taken to a police station. It stood three feet in height and weighed 160 pounds.

D. C. STEPHENSON ENTERS PLEA OF NOT GUILTY

Indianapolis, April 16—Pleas of not guilty were entered by D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan, and Earl Klinick and Earl Gentry when arraigned on indictments charging conspiracy to kidnap Miss Madge Oberholtzer. Stephenson is also indicted for an alleged assault which caused the girl to take poison.

Hundreds of the girls friends attended her funeral. She died Tuesday after four weeks illness from the poison.

Judge James A. Collins overruled the defendants' motions to quash the indictments. No date was set for the trial, but the judge indicated he would be unable to hear the case until after May 25, because of the crowded condition of the docket.

CINCINNATI DETECTIVES GUILTY OF CONSPIRACY

Cincinnati, O., April 16—A verdict of guilty was returned by a jury in United States district court here late tonight in the case of Cincinnati city detectives James Hayes, Fred I. Bullerdick and Robert Kinney, charged with conspiracy to violate the national prohibition act.

Bullerdick and Hayes were adjudged guilty on all four counts of the indictment returned by a recent special federal grand jury. Kinney was found guilty on two and not guilty on two counts.

HERITAGE FOR MARY BLANCHE BEATRICE YVONNE JODOIN

Hartford, April 16—A heritage awaits Marie Blanche Beatrice Yvonne Jodoin, daughter of the late Joseph Elzear and Marie (Cote) Jodoin, of St. Urbain, Chateauguay, Quebec, Canada, according to a letter received by Attorney General Frank E. Healy from J. Alexander Poitevin, of St. Marine, Quebec. M. Poitevin, who is a notary, says he has information leading to the belief that Miss Jodoin is in Connecticut.

RUSSELL SCOTT HAS BEEN GRANTED 90 DAY REPRIEVE

Chicago, April 16—Instead of spending the night in the death cell of the Cook county jail awaiting the gallows, Russell Scott, former Canadian promoter, tonight was back in his old cell in the jail proper, due to a 90 day reprieve. His stay, granted by Governor Small, came just 24 hours before the time set for Scott to pay with his life for the murder of Joseph Maurer, drug clerk.

Governor Small was moved to clemency by the delay of the supreme court in acting upon the motion of Scott's attorneys for a writ of supersedeas.

ALBERTINI HAS SUED MRS. LESLIE CARTER FOR $1,487

New York, April 16—Mrs. Leslie Carter, actress, is defendant in a suit brought in the superior court by Steckell Reynolds Albertini for $1,487 alleged arrears in rent. The suit is based on a judgment against Mrs. Carter for 244 pounds obtained in London in 1918, the plaintiff alleging that Mrs. Carter has failed to satisfy that judgment.

Runaway British Dirigible Is Safe

Has Successfully Ridden Out Storm — Has Started on Homeward Journey From Holland.

London, April 16—(By the A. P.)—Relief came tonight to an over-wrought British public, which has dbeen fearful throughout the day as to the fate of some score of officers and men who were borne away early this morning in the dirigible R-33, which was torn from its mooring mast at Pulham by a fierce gale and driven across the North Sea.

The relief came with a report which reached the air ministry that the airship had successfully ridden out the storm and was starting on her homeward journey to Pulham from Holland. The aircraft was making from five to ten knots an hour, the reports said, and expected to reach the airdome some time tomorrow morning.

"The wind, which during the day had averaged 75 miles an hour, had greatly moderated, it was hoped the R-33 would arrive over Pulham during the early hours of the morning and that she would be landed with the break of day. If for any reason she cannot be brought down at Pulham, an attempt will be made to house her in her original hangar at Cardington.

The air ministry says the R-33 reported at 9:37 p. m. that she had crossed the Dutch coastline ten miles south of Yumiden and was making her way West Northwest toward England, the British sloop Godetia was instructed by the admiralty to accompany the aircraft in its trip over the North Sea.

Shortly after 11:00 p. m. the R-33 was 14 miles seaward from Yumiden and still making headway, but slowly. She asked by wireless that the Godetia show her searchlights and also requested the weather forecast. The radio added that the wind at the time was blowing from 30 to 35 miles an hour.

Late tonight at Pulham, flares were kept burning and the necessary forces had been assembled to land the runaway airship when she returned. There was a rumor afloat that one of the port engines of the airship had ceased working, but the officials at the airdome felt no alarm over this fact, saying the craft would be entirely disabled only if three of her engines stopped functioning.

The runaway had a parallel in many of its features to the breaking away of the American navy dirigible Shenandoah from her mast at Lakehurst more than a year ago.

The United Kingdom throughout last night and today was in the grip of a terrific gale, varying in volidity from 59 to 90 miles an hour. The storm caused a deal of damage on shore and made navigation in nearby waters dangerous.

The R-33, which only recently had been brought out for new experiments, after four years of idleness in the Cardington hangar, was attached to the mooring mast at Pulham.

It was only about one hour after the night crew had been relieved and the new crew had gone aboard that the craft broke away, with a quantity of wreckage, including four guncarriage wheelers suspended from the gondola for extra safety, danging at her nose.

During the day there was a wholly bewildering and rapid succession of reports of the alleged whereabouts and doings of the lost airship. It was extremely difficult to disentangle any connected story from the numerous reports.

The Dutch government in anticipation of a forced landing in Holland had mobilized all necessary forces to land the airship at Soasterberg and ordered torpedo boat destroyers to watch for it.

JURY SELECTED FOR THE TRIAL OF SENATOR WHEELER

Great Falls, Mont., April 16—A jury was completed, and taking of evidence begun today at the opening session of the trial of Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, in federal district court here. He is charged with accepting a fee for prosecuting claims for a client before the department of the interior.

Announcement that the government had a surprise witness, an attorney, was made by District Attorney John L. Slattery, in his opening statement to the jury.

W. E. Bennett, register of the land office here, the first witness, identified records from his office relating to permits involved in the case. The books were admitted as evidence, over the protest of Senator Thomas J. Walsh, chief of defense counsel, who interposed technical objections.

The jury was selected in the space of three hours. The defense exercised but six of its ten peremptory challenges.

Outrage To Members Bulgarian Cabinet

Bombs Exploded in Ancient Cathedral — How Many Persons Were Killed is Not Known.

Sofia, Bulgaria, April 16—(By the A. P.)—The ancient Cathedral of Sveti Kral (the Saint King) was the scene of a terrible outrage this afternoon. The members of the Bulgarian cabinet, hundreds of leading political personalities and citizens and many military officers were assembled in the streets of Sofia Tuesday night. During the course of the service a bomb, or bombs exploded, causing widespread death and destruction and partially wrecking the old building.

How many persons were killed is not known, but rescuing parties already have taken numerous bodies out of the ruins. None of the ministers were killed, although several were wounded. It is the general belief that this outrage, the attack on King Boris and the murder of General Gerghieff constitute an attempt to provoke a Communist revolution.

It is expected martial law will be proclaimed tonight.

RIGHT OF NEWSPAPERS TO PRINT INCOME TAX LISTS

Washington, April 16—The right of newspapers to print income tax lists made available for public inspection by the commissioner of internal revenue was reached for oral argument today in the supreme courts shortly before adjournment.

The question was presented in the government's appeal in the case Journal Post. There also is awaiting brought against The Kansas City argument in the court, the government's appeal in a case instituted on similar grounds against The Baltimore Post.

Senator Reed of Missouri appeared as counsel for The Journal Post, while Former Secretary Newton D. Baker of the war department, was in court as counsel for The Baltimore Post. The solicitor general presented the government in both cases.

Despite efforts by the court and the solicitor general, the newspapers' counsel refused consent to have the two cases argued together. As a result, unless the court arbitrarily advances the Baltimore case for hearing tomorrow at the conclusion of the arguments in the Kansas case, it will not be reached until next week.

Asserting that the questions presented involved the freedom of the press, Senator Reed asked for and obtained thirty minutes additional time for the presentation of his argument. He hoped the court would remember, he said, that those accustomed to senate rules permitting unlimited debate had difficulty in placing time restrictions upon their arguments, and Chief Justice Taft, joining other members of the court in a hearty laugh over the reference to lack of a cloture rule in the senate, announced that on the grounds advanced by the senator, the court could not deny him additional time.

Mr. Baker advised the court that when his case was reached for argument he would not consume half the time allowed him under the rules of the court.

Solicitor General Beck presented only a brief summarization of the questions at issue before the court adjourned for today. He told the court that, while the "fourth case" presumably was interested in the issues presented and while Senator Reed had devoted considerable space in his brief to a discussion of the right of free speech and the freedom of the press, he regarded the question as one of statutory construction alone and could not conceive how the liberty of the press was in any way affected.

Stressing that the law required the commissioner of internal revenue to make available for public inspection in the offices of the various collectors, lists of income taxpayers with the amounts assessed against them, the solicitor general asserted that it was an imporant part of the law that these lists should be used only for a lawful purpose and in a manner to be determined by the commissioner.

Declaring that the commissioner had not decided that the lists should be published in the newspapers, Mr. Beck argued that such publication was unlawful, asserted that the construction of the law insisted upon by the government would result in a reasonable exercise of a proper federal power, and denied that the stature was an infringement on the liberty of the press.

Referring to the decision of the lower court in The Journal Post case, holding that it was doubtful whether the information published was a part of the income tax returns whose publication was prohibited by law, Mr. Beck was insisting when the court adjourned, that the publication did contain information which was a part of these returns.

LIFE IMPRISONMENT FOR THE "LONE WOLF" BURGLAR

Sentence Pronounced by Judge Bishop in Suffolk Superior Court, Boston—"Lone Wolf" Had For Weeks Terrorized the Back Bay Apartment House Section by Raids on Suites Occupied by Women—Found Guilty by Jury on Six Counts of Breaking and Entering, Also Carrying Concealed Weapons.

Boston, April 16—James H. Walters, of Richmond, Va., who assumed the title of "Lone Wolf" and for weeks terrorized the Back Bay apartment house section by raids on suites occupied by women, was sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge Bishop in Suffolk superior court.

Walter was found guilty by a jury on six counts of breaking and entering and a further charge of carrying dangerous weapons and sentence was pronounced at once. The jury had the case two hours. The trial, which occupied a week, hinged largely on the mental condition of the defendant, the defense having entered a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity.

Walter admitted all the crimes charged against him and on the witness stand described in detail how he entered apartments occupied by women, bound his victims and robbed them, often remaining many hours in the apartments. Throughout the trial he kept up a stream of remarks to judge, counsel, and witnesses. Alienists, who examined the "wolf" for the state pronounced him sane but of psychopathic mentality. Alienists engaged by the defense testified that he was insane at the time the crimes were committed.

District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien in his final address to the jury said that Walters' conduct throughout the trial had been "faking" in an effort to make the court believe him insane. In a scathing speech frequently interrupted by the defendant, he described the "Lone Wolf" as a "thief, a marauder and ravisher of women" and asked the jury to "announce to the wives, mothers and sisters of this community that no outranger of women when caught, is going to hide behind the shield of insanity." At one point in the address Walters shouted: "you're a liar," and at another he threatened to choke the district attorney.

The robberies to which Walters confessed were committed in January and for a time the operations of the "Lone Wolf" spread terror in the Back Bay district. Many women living alone closed their apartments and went to safer quarters, and a strong force of plainclothes police was assigned to the district. Walters was traced through finger prints left on a bottle in the apartment of one of his victims. He served in the navy during the war and the identification was made through the naval records.

PRESIDENT-ELECT OF CUBA ON VISIT IN WASHINGTON

Washington, April 16—Cuba's next president, General Gerardo Machado, who is here on an official visit had a busy program, ranging from a White House luncheon, and a dinner tendered by Secretary of State and Mrs. Kellogg, to a sightseeing tour and shopping tour.

Numerous foreign dignitaries attended the dinner tonight, which was held in the Pan-American Union, but the occasion was purely a social and devoid of political significance, those close to the general maintained, taking occasion also to deny a report that he had come to the United States to negotiate a more advantageous commercial treaty, and to discredit rumors that he would name his cabinet while here.

The president-elect presented a carved box containing specially made Cuban cigars, to President Coolidge. He met several notables at the White House luncheon, which lasted an hour and a half and was afforded further opportunity to meet others at tea given by R. R. Govin, Havana newspaper publisher, and Mrs. Govin, later in the day.

An automobile tour around the speedway along the Potomac river, gave General Machado and his party a chance to see the panorama of flowers and blossoms and the Lincoln Memorial. Two motorcycle policemen were detailed to accompany him, clearing traffic along the route. The brief shopping excursion followed.

WOMAN POISONER OF SONS REGAINS HER COMPOSURE

Crown Point, Ind., April 16—Mrs. Anna Cunningham, 48 year-old widow, of Gary, Ind., who collapsed today after confessing the killing by poison of three of five members of her family who have died in the last six years, and the poisoning of another son who is ill in a Chicago hospital, had recovered her composure tonight.

Sheriff Benjamin Strong said that the middle-aged widow who said she killed those she loved best in order to take them with her to heaven, had eaten after being revived and had then gone into a sound sleep.

Word was received here from medical authorities at Lafayette tonight that the analysis of the bodies of two of Mrs. Cunningham's sons showed a large amount of arsenic in the body of one and a very small amount in that of the other.

Only a little of the arsenic was found in the body of Harry Cunningham and this in part substantiates Mrs. Cunningham's story. She maintained that she had not poisoned her husband, David, Sr., the first to die in 1918, nor Harry, the fourth to die. She admitted however, that she had spread arsenic on bread and butter and given it to Isabelle, Charles and Walter, at the same time taking some herself. They died, but it only made her ill, she said.

She also admitted she had poisoned David, Jr., who is ill in a Chicago hospital. She said she had not poisoned Mae, the only surviving daughter, because she did not like her well enough.

Mrs. Cunningham was to have been arraigned today on a charge of having murdered her son, Walter, but after she collapsed, the hearing was postponed indefinitely.

Authorities said that a coroner's inquest would probably be held first over the body, and that it might be two or three days before the woman is formally arraigned. It was the second time Mrs. Cunningham has collapsed since her arrest, she having fainted in Chicago after she had been questioned for several hours. A few hours later she tried to choke herself to death with bed clothing.

The authorities here said that they would probably press only the murder charge and that the bodies probably will not be exhumed.

UNDERWOOD ARRAIGNED FOR SHOOTING GARY

Keene, N. H., April 16—Ora Underwood, whose admission yesterday to county authorities that he accidentally shot Herbert Gary was later corroborated by the victim, was arraigned in municipal court here today. He pleaded not guilty waived examination and was held without bail for the grand jury on a charge of assault with deliberate and premeditated intent to murder.

Gary, said to come from Orange, Mass., is in a critical condition at the Melrose hospital, West Brattleboro, Vt. He confirmed Underwood's story of the shooting in a statement from his bedside. Underwood, another man and three women who live in Underwood's house at West Chesterfield, where the shooting occurred, first told the police that Gary was shot by a stranger who had been seen loitering near the place.

In his confession to the authorities, Underwood admitted that the first story was made up. He admitted he did the shooting, but said it was accidental. He and Gary were investigating noises in the house when they collided in the dark and the revolver he was carrying was discharged, he said.

Miss Amy L. Hooker introduced John Campus of Fall River, Mass., a member of the national executive board of the United Textile Workers of America, and Miner S. Treat of Bridgeport, organizer for the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union.

The speeches were followed by a two-real motion picture which left the strikers in a pleasant mood as they filed from the theatre.

Mr. Campus was the first speaker. "The Fall River Mills have met with the disaster of a wage cut," he said at the outset of his talk, "but the fight for justice in that city has been hampered by a "near-manufacturers' union," so-called textile organizations which play into the hands of the manufacturer." He stated that the Dyers at the Fall River plant were out on a strike against a wage cut reaching from 30 to 40 per cent. He blamed the Reds and similar bodies for the functioning of the outlaw organizations.

Relative to the local situation Mr. Campus said that the strike was justified in the face of a $1,500,000 clear profit made by the concern during the past year. He mentioned the legality of arbitration and went on to warn against the depredations of such men as Simons and other Communists.

In mentioning the model strike being conducted here the speaker thanked the local police department for the confidence they had placed in their fellow citizens that they would not adopt injurious methods. Mr. Campus concluded with a strong appeal to the manufacturers to "have a heart" and not make it compulsory by small wages for the mother of children to enter the mills with her husband, in order to eke out an income that would serve to educate their children.

In his talk Mr. Treat said that a survey had been taken of the state labor organizations and that Bridgeport, Hartford and New Haven were prepared to hand over contributions to the local strike headquarters. He said that there were no reasons for "that down-in-the-mouth feeling" as long as the American Federation of Labor was backing the movement to show the thread company that the textile workers of Willimantic were not in accordancew ith the American Thread Company slogan of "We do as Fall River Does."

Mr. Treat concluded: "The business men are beginning to feel the effects of the strike. They have asked the American Thread company to do something to bring about a settlement. They will now make it a demand! The time is not far distant when you will be called back to work, of that there is no doubt, and when you do go back, continue to hold your membership in the Textile Workers of America, and avoid further disagreement!"

The daily meeting will be held at the Gem theatre Friday morning. Thomas Eagan is expected to speak here Saturday. Manager Louis J. Coriarty of the theatre in which the meeting was held Thursday, was extended a rising vote of thanks.

The fees which women pay vary from $2.50 to $50, but some professional dancers have received as much as $200 for a single dance.

The record is held by a South American woman, who paid $750 for one dance.

What Your Eyes Tell Others

Students of such things say that the intellectual person has eyes of grey, while brown eyes express temperament rather than intellect. Blue and gray eyes nevertheless are said to express sadness with greater facility and brown eyes more readily respond to joy and anger. Green and black eyes are put under the classification "most wicked." Actually there are no black eyes, however, as only dark brown or dark grey eyes show up as black in certain lights.

It is estimated that in Soochow alone there are 1,000 homes where grinding is done either as a main or part-time industry. It is only recently that glass lenses have become popular in China, and then only in and around Shanghai.

PLAUT-CADDEN EXPANSION SALE BEGINS TOMORROW

What promises to be the greatest merchandising event in the history of local mercantile business is disclosed in The Bulletin this morning in the extraordinary Expansion Sale announcement by The Plaut-Cadden Co.

No announcement ever made by any local mercantile establishment is of such great significance to the public as this one is. It is significant not only for its extraordinary buying inducements made necessary to make room for extensive alterations in the Plaut-Cadden buildings but because it is the culmination of fifty-three years of faithful public service and the beginning of an expansion unsurpassed by any establishment of its kind.

Coming as it does just at the time when people are engaged in housecleaning and needing new things for their homes this expansion sale is of unusual and timely interest to everyone because of the notable price concessions which will be in effect in all departments of the store and because of the special privileges provided to make buying convenient. The benefits to be derived from this event are so numerous and the opportunities for economical buying so exceptional that a new mark in home making values will be set which it is not likely can ever be duplicated again.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Vaudeville acts of pleasing variety and a screen classic, "Head Winds," are found on the current bill at the Palace Theatre. Whitey Kaufman and His Orchestra head the bill and at the initial performances yesterday the band made a great hit. The band is one of the leading Victor Record Co.'s recording teams and when their engagement is completed here they will return to New York to record six numbers, two of which are being played here. The Novellows open the show with a high class posing act on Roman rings, they are very clever gymnasts and receive much applause for their efforts. George Watts, a real darktown boy follows with some snappy songs and steps and his exhibitions are well worth seeing. Conrad Tafton & Co., is an act of much beauty and offer some very artistic dancing. They were well received by the audience. Sparling is an exceptional good tenor singer and goes over very big. The two singing parodies on "Follow the Swallow" and "Sitting in a Corner," which takes the audience by storm. Over and Over again they are called back. The feature picture is Head Winds.

The keynote of "Head Winds" is a novelty, for it deals with an unusual situation in an unusual way. For instance, in the story House Peters is cast in the role of a millionaire sportsman who in order to win the love and respect of the girl he loves finds it necessary to kidnap her and spirit her away to sea. As Peter Rossiyn, the wealthy yachtman, House Peters is seen in a role which is acclaimed to be his greatest screen characterization.

"Head Winds," adapted from the breezy Saturday Evening Post story of the same name from the pen of A. M. Sinclair Witt, is the third production which Peters has made for Universal, his other two being "The Tornado" and "Raffles". In "The Tornado" Peters was seen in the role of a lumberjack who battled the elements to save a small northern village from utter devastation from the havoc of a tornado, while in "Raffles" the star portrayed the role of the suave Amateur Cracksman. His versatility is well exhibited in "Head Winds" for the role calls for a difficult interpretation of a difficult character.

Patsy Ruth Miller, who plays the leading feminine role opposite Peters, plays the part of Patricia Van Pelt, the headstrong, impetuous shrew, with whom Peters is in love. Miss Miller, who will be remembered for her work in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," where she played Esmeralda opposite Lon Chaney, does some of the best work in her career in "Head Winds".

Broadway Theatre

Adolphe Menjou has added a foreign touch to his screen philandering technique. In order to portray with his usual perfection the part of a suave prince in "The Swan", a Paramount picturisation of Ferenc Molnar's stage success which features Menjou, Ricardo Cortez and Francis Howard, Adolphe devoted every moment of his time away from the camera during the filming of the production to the serious business of manipulating a monocle.

"The Swan" which opens Sunday night at the Broadway Theatre, was produced for the screen by Dimitri Buchowetski. He also wrote the screen play. Included in the cast playing in support of the principals are Ida Waterman, Clare Eames, Helen Lindroth and Arthur Donaldson.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the management announces that he has acquired, after great expense, one of Vincent Lopez's bands which unquestionably will be the biggest hit that ever came to town.

Strand Theater

It seems to be a popular indoor sport for dramatic editors and some of the would be wiser readers, to seriously doubt the authentity of some of the phases used in the exploitation of a theatrical attraction. Thinking, as they do, that they are all the work of an over zealous press agent, and coined according to their high sounding calibre. As a matter of fact, every phrase or exclamation used in promoting Bringing Up Father in Ireland, has been culled from the criticisms written by the critics of the various newspapers from every town and city in the United States and Canada. The files at the general office in New York City can be referred to and the correctness of this claim can be proven.

For the past ten years Bringing Up Father has been touring the country, each successive season with an entirely new version.

This remarkable attraction will make its yearly visit to the Strand theatre on Monday, April 20, for an engagement of one night. Crowded houses is the daily dilemma of this popular attraction and its sponsors wonder why theatres are built so small.

A. camp in the town of Woodstock, during the coming summer vacation period are interested in the improvement work to be done there. Work is already under way for the construction of the dining hall, a work made possible through the generosity of one interested in the camp.

Danielson furnished its quota of stock buyers in a corporation that is now being subjected to investigation on an allegation that its officers used the mails to defraud. The federal government has caused several arrests of officers of a concern that has been selling stock in a shot resisting glass corporation and will prosecute them, alleging they have mulcted the public out of $2,000,000 and diverted much of it to their own use.

Indications are that the legislature will take favorable action on a bill providing for the establishment of a town court in Plainfield. At present justices' courts hear such cases as are within their jurisdiction. Plainfield is a large and important town of the county and the feeling among many of its citizens is that a town court should be established. This early, it is understood, there are candidates for the judgship.

A tale of thieving at the state line at Little Rest, five miles east of here, has to do with the stripping of tires from two Ford roadsters while they were in the garages where they are kept for the night. On each side of the state highway a few feet over the state line in Rhode Island there are filling stations. One of these is conducted by Joseph Porter, the other by James Salisbury. Each place keeps a roadster. The tires and the spare tires were taken from these cars a recent night. Though several dogs are in the immediate vicinity, they gave no alarm of what was going on.

Recently motorists resident here or hereabouts have had the experience of having their cars held up at night in Willimantic or its immediate vicinity by officers seeking rum runners. The drivers report no inconvenience other than being asked to stop the machines until the officers satisfied themselves the cars were engaged in legitimate business.

This week end will be set aside by numbers of property owners in Danielson as clean-up week. The spring cleaning period for premises is at hand, in Danielson, known far and wide for its neatness of grounds and properties, there is much work to be done in removing the winter's accumulation of ashes and various kinds of debris. These are days of pleasant contemplation for the paid members of Danielson's volunteer fire department. Their annual pay checks, while not large, are now due and will be received by them within a few days.

The Jacobs Manufacturing company will go on a schedule of four days a week, as the concern did during a part of 1924. This section of eastern Connecticut will sit tight, a week from Sunday, when the railroad company changes the schedule of its trains to conform with the daylight saving plan that will be in force in New York and Massachusetts after that date. At the special meeting of Putnam Delphian chapter, Wednesday afternoon, Miss Ellen Wheelock gave a talk about Panama and the Canal, which she visited a few weeks ago. The meeting was held at the home of the chapter were present. Miss Wheelock took many pictures during her trip and bought a good many, so that her description was in the nature of an illustrated lecture. She spoke in an illuminating way of the picturesque and unusual sights on the isthmus and of her trip through the Canal. She was impressed by the mechanical skill that had made an open waterway between the two oceans of the great advantage of the Canal to commerce and of teh inestimable value it was to the United States in protecting its coast line.

The cities at either end of the Canal have for the most part become somewhat Americanized, but she visited the foreign quarters of them and gave a wonderfully clear idea of all that came under her observation.

They are Postmaster Archie Macdonald, John A. Dady and George Allen Hawkins. Mr. Macdonald is at St. Vincent's hospital, Worcester, where he underwent a major surgical operation three weeks ago. Mr. Macdonald is out of danger and will be able to return home within a few days.

John A. Dady, who was critically ill for several weeks; is getting his strength back gradually, is able to sit on the veranda of his house on fine days and to take a daily automobile ride. It was feared for several days after he was first taken ill that he could not recover.

George A. Hawkins, water commissioner, fell through a trap door at the pumping station a month ago, breaking his arm at the shoulder. The injury was so serious that the outcome was in doubt for several days. He is now getting stronger, the fractured bones are beginning to knit and he will soon be able to return to his home.

MONEY READY TO REDEEM REMBRANDT PORTRAITS

New York, April 16—Money to pay for two Rembrandt portraits, for the return of which Prince Felix Youssoupoff of Russia is suing Joseph E. Widener, of Philadelphia, has been placed in a bank to be paid over if the Prince wins his suit, it was announced at the trial of the action in the supreme court. The case was adjourne dto Monday after Prince Youssoupoff concluded his testimony which had lasted almost three days, and George De Maxiroff, his business agent, had been examined.

The amount involved is 100,000 pounds plus eight per cent. interest since August 1, 1921, Mr. Widener having paid the Prince that amount for the two portraits in what the former alleges was an outright sale. The Prince claims the right of repurchase on the ground that the transaction was a chattel mortgage in which the pictures were security.

De Maxiroff testified that in his negotiations with Mr. Widener leading up to the transfer of the paintings, the Philadelphia collector mentioned that he had heard the pictures were in pawn, that the Prince was unable to pay the interest and that if he waited he could get the pictures for a low figure when the Prince was compelled to forfeit them. Mr. De Maxiroff said he produced jewels worth more than the redemption value of the pictures to show they could be redeemed.

Mr. De Maxiroff, an officer in the pre-revolutionary Russian army, testified that in 1920 the Prince gave him a letter authorizing him to sell, pawn "or do anything at all" with the Rembrandts.

Concluding his testimony Prince Youssoupoff told of having a bank account in New York and jewels worth 15,000 pounds which he had forgotten to mention previously. Former Governor Nathan L. Miller, attorney for Mr. Widener, asked the Prince:

"By all this haziness and loss of memory did you want to appear to the court as being very simple?"

"No," was the reply, "I just want to be myself."

Many years ago Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., originated her now famous Vegetable Compound for women, by steeping roots and herbs on her kitchen stove. The fame of its success for overcoming some of the most stubborn ailments of women spread far and wide until today the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., of Lynn, Mass., is said to be the largest user of roots and herbs in the world. It operates a large laboratory at Lynn, Mass., others at Cobourg, Canada; Mexico City, Mexico; Barcelona, Spain, and Paris, France.

THE WHEELER BILL

Unless we are greatly mistaken Connecticut was prepared for the unfavorable report by the judiciary committee on the Wheeler prohibition enforcement bill and the sustaining of that report by an overwhelming vote in the senate.

The bill was an effort to bring about a better enforcement of the dry law by closing up some of the gaps that exist and making it possible for the authorities to do their work as it is believed it should be done. But in the drafting of the measure, which was recognized as being drastic by those responsible for it, an attempt was made to obtain a law which was out of sympathy with Connecticut sentiment. Connecticut it will be remembered has not ratified the 18th amendment. It wasn't necessary that it should for it to adopt the Wheeler bill, but for a state to put such a far reaching law upon the statute books when it has refused to ratify the amendment would be running counter to public sentiment.

Objection has been raised because the bill is the product of those who would be expected to administer it. That isn't believed to have served alone to turn the tide against it. When the committee declared it did not believe that it would help the enforcement of law it unquestionably reflected a strong sentiment throughout the state, for not much can be expected in the way of enforcement of a law which doesn't have public sentiment back of it, and certainly the committee and the senate are not standing in the way of demands which are prompted and backed by the public.

That there is need for strengthening the present law, or possibly clarifying it would be admitted by those who are unalterably opposed to the Wheeler bill. Because the proposed measure went so far as to invite general disrespect should not stand in the way of needed changes. Connecticut as represented by its senate believes the situation would be made worse by trying to do too much and that a law could not be enforced it is much better that it be not adopted.

THE BASEBALL SEASON

With the baseball season of 1925 officially opened all that remains for the teams to round into good playing form and for the fans to come out in customary numbers is balmy spring days. Baseball still has its hold upon the great American public, and whether it is a big league community or a small one enthusiasm seldom ceases to reach the boiling point when the national game is well played.

The race for the pennants in the various leagues is invariably keen. The big leagues hold the center of the stage but there are some excellent sideshows furnished by the smaller aggregations all the way down from the bush leagues to the amateurs.

There has been talk about the interest in baseball waning. There can be no question but what those who have been playing the game in the streets as a matter of personal pleasure are finding their games seriously interfered with by present day traffic conditions, but that is not enough to discourage the ardent ball player, regardless of what his age may be. If he cannot play in the streets he will go to the vacant lot or the playground where greater safety and more pleasure are obtainable. Baseball will have to disclose a much greater falling off in interest than has as yet been demonstrated before there will be an acceptance of the claim that baseball players and fans are turning to other sports.

It may be much too early for opinions to be chanced concerning the pennant winners. There are enough who will stand up for their favorites even now as a matter of principle, but others will wait for a careful looking over of the aggregations and their performances under real working conditions before staking their reputation on the contenders for the world's championship.

A good beginning does not always mean a good ending. Neither does it insure a bad ending. If 1925 develops as keen an interest as did 1924 there will be no escape from an exhibition of the way in which baseball is being played by the greatest exponents of the game in the world.

THE RUMANIAN LOAN

In connection with the efforts to obtain an adjustment of the foreign debts of this country, there appears to be good ground for the reminder which this country has sent to Rumania to the effect that no steps have as yet been taken to arrange for the repayment of the loans made to that country.

It is to be remembered that this country made war loans to European countries and also loaned money for reconstruction purposes after the signing of the armistice. Some countries have arranged for the refunding of these loans. Others have not. Rumania borrowed about $30,000,000 and since that time the interest has added several million more so that its obligations to this country now amount to about $45,000,000. Part of this sum, or $13,000,000, represents the credit given Rumania in connection with the purchase of a quantity of war materials part of the surplus which this country had in France at the close of the war.

Rumania has borrowed from others besides this country, but it has been adjusting such loans, and it is because it has been giving attention to part of its obligations, and not all of them, that Uncle Sam feels called upon to let it understand that this situation cannot be allowed to go on indefinitely.

This government is not pressing for immediate payment. It takes the same attitude that it has with other countries, which owe us large sums. It is disposed to do the right thing but it is not willing that the loans should be regarded as gifts, and it is desirous that it should be understood that there is no inclination to cancel them.

Perhaps it is felt by Rumania and others that if they delay long enough in undertaking payments there will be a disposition to send a receipted bill and call the whole thing off. The reminder that has been forwarded is sufficient to set at rest any such idea and to hasten the financial adjustment that has been hanging fire for so long.

PAINLEVE'S CHANCE

It is no small task that has been undertaken by Premier Painleve of France. For the time being he has succeeded in getting sufficient support from the different parties to organize his cabinet. He has been forced to make some surprising selections, the greatest of which is the naming of M. Caillaux, who was convicted of treason, as his minister of finance. How long the Painleve cabinet will exist is decidedly uncertain. It may be a week and it may be a year. It is necessary for it to follow a straight and narrow path, the deviation from which is likely to result in an upset in jig time.

Painleve didn't want the job but he virtually had it forced upon him. He has not been able to get socialistic representation in his cabinet but he has been able to get assurances of its support for the government. How long this will continue depends upon what is done. With the socialists holding a balance of power they are in a position to aid in accomplishments or in precipitating a fall of the cabinet. Without permitting a member of their party to take a cabinet position they are apparently going to hold the government to policies which are in keeping with theirs or at least very close to them. They will exert the influence without bearing the responsibility.

There are problems which require adjusting in France at the present time which call for strong parliamentary support of the premier, but with that of an uncertain character the task which is already big enough is made that much greater. However, if Painleve is able to meet the situation in spite of the obstacles all the greater credit will accrue to him.

JOHN S. SARGENT

Whether rated as the greatest, or one of the greatest American painters, there is no escape from the fact that a man of widespread international fame and esteem has been removed in the death of John Singer Sargent. His sudden taking away in the midst of his active career means a shock not only to the entire art world but to that even greater circle of admirers. His work was as well known and appreciated in the art centers of Europe as in this country, and his unexpected end leaves much work of importance uncompleted.

While Sargent was the son of New England parents, he was born in Italy and it was there he began his art studies, to be followed up later in Paris and London. It was in the latter city, where many of the years of his life have been spent, that he took up portrait work in which direction his greatest success has been, though it did not by any means shut out the demonstration of his clever skill with the brush in the painting of landscapes and mural decorations. There are some wonderful exhibitions of the latter in institutions in and about Boston, which will stand as a lasting memorial to his greatness as an artist, though it is to be regretted that the elaborate mural decoration on which he was engaged in the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston remains unfinished.

That age had not marred his skill is shown by the fact that he had just accepted a number of portraits for display in the national gallery in London and was engaged in making a painting of Princess Mary and her husband. Sargent had spent the greater part of his life abroad but he was none the less American.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Washington, April 16.—Late in the Fifteenth Century the Dons of Spain looked to the New World, their minds on the discovery of El Dorado, and no color intrigued their eyes save that of gold. Says Latane, in his "United States and Latin America":—

"The whole object of Spain's colonial policy was to extract gold and silver from America and to force Spanish manufacturers and products upon that country."

Under Charles V, Spain held the greatest empire ever under one crown in the history of mankind. But in three centuries her New World dominions had shrunk materially, and by 1900 she was out of America.

Among those territories was California, which passed to the United States following the Mexican War, 1846. In 1849 occurred the gold rush. It may be said that the new world descendants of the Spanish gold-hunters remained to produce revolutions, while those of the eastern Americans in California continue to promote industries. The extent to which the manufacturing industries have been developed in that great state is indicated by a census bulletin just published by the department of commerce.

From it we learn that California counted 9,228 manufacturing establishments in 1923, nearly 247,000 wage-earners, who were paid over $353,000,000, and the value of products totaled $2,217,000,000. At the head of the list stood petroleum refining, $267,000,000; next came lumber and timber products, $170,000,000; third, the canning and preserving industry, with $150,000,000 worth of products; fourth, printing and publishing, $106,000,000, there being 590 newspaper and periodical and 672 book and job plants; and, fifth, slaughtering and meat packing plants, $103,000,000. Other industries whose output exceeded $25,000,000 were bread and bakery products, $60,000,000; furniture, $35,000,000; motion pictures, $34,000,000; cement, $28,500,000. Foundry products, car repair, iron and steel mills, and structural iron works turned out products aggregating $136,000,000 in value; clothing, $33,000,000; and there were a number of other industries whose products ran from fifteen to twenty millions.

California is hardly to be considered a highly industrialized State. The value of her agricultural and mining products is tremendous. The pioneers who "were off to California with their banjos on their knees" may now be plucking a golden harp, but their descendants are playing a mighty chorus with the forge, the loom, the axe and the saw.

"Doc" Coolidge's allopathic dose administered to the Federal Trade Commission is having results. It is noted that the commission is successfully functioning under its new rules and that already a dozen or so of cases have been dismissed on the ground of a lack of general public interest. Houston Thompson, erstwhile chairman of the commission, who tried to make it a political factory while the presidential campaign was on last year, must feel that his opportunity for effective work on behalf of the Radical element in politics has gone forever.

A good deal of "bunk" has been emanating from Washington of late concerning the toggery of President Coolidge and his economy in that direction. In fact the energetic writers who dish this stuff up appear to be anxious to fasten the charge of parsimony on Cal. A newspaper correspondent was recently button-holed on the street by a former federal officeholder under the democratic administration, who is now hustling for the "eats." The button-holer asked the pen-pusher if he thought Coolidge could get away with this economy racket very much longer. "Wouldn't it get the people sore and cause a reaction?" The correspondent thought it over and replied to this effect:

First, the reports are not altogether true. Coolidge is notably neat in his dress and his taste is excellent. He does not follow the fads of ex-Senator Jimhaw Davis, nor of Senator Heflin. Solomon in all his glory was never arrayed like one of those. Coolidge has an adequate American wardrobe.

Second, the people who got sore at administration economy are for the most part those belonging to ring politics in the large cities. There is hardly likely to be heard any wail from the rural districts against economy, personal or governmental. The city vote is organized. The rural vote is not. Rusticus does his own thinking. Ask any man in political life which vote he prefers to feel certain of and he will unhesitatingly reply, "the rural." He will take his chances with the urban. Remember Roosevelt and the "practical politicians."

Third, Coolidge, by personal precept and official practice, is not displaying economy with a view to re-election, but because he was born with an economic streak and believes economy is good for the country, and the great majority of us know this to be true. "No, Billy," concluded the correspondent, "you'd better keep right on hustling, for the pickings in 1929 are not going to be improved on this score." So Billy drifted into a department to make a touch.

German Industrial Resurgence.—A synopsis of a report of our government by our commercial attache at Berlin makes interesting reading as indicating a revival of better conditions in Germany.

It is noted that during 1924 shipments of finished products accounted for 79 per cent of the total; German exports, whereas during 1913 they accounted for but 63 per cent. The loss of Germany's pre-war position in the coal trade, through having been reduced to a coal-importing nation plays an important part in this. The gold value of German exports last year was 65 per cent of the pre-war figures, while imports were 35 per cent. Germany's 1924 trade with its high percentage of finished products and its disproportionately heavy imports of raw materials and foodstuffs is interesting as an indication of the present industrial activity of the Reich. Excess imports have been paid for in large part by the foreign credits granted to Germany by the United States, Great Britain, and other countries during the last four months of the year. These credits, recently estimated at $300,000,000 over and above the official German loan of about $225,000,000 have not as yet been entirely taken up, and many of them, particularly those of Great Britain, still remain on the books at the disposal of Germany industry. The larger portion of German capital which was sent abroad during the inflation period, estimated at between $1,500,000,000 and $1,750,000,000, has been repatriated.

The climax of excessive import movements was reached in May, following which drastic restriction of credits by the Reichsbank, in order to prevent a new inflation, forced down high domestic prices and retrieved the stability of the mark on foreign exchanges. The small amount of liquid capital in the hands of business was rapidly consumed, and foreign buying dropped. In September the Dawes Plan came into effect and foreign credits were again established as a result of which imports shot up rapidly. Crop failures increased purchases of American cereals.

While factories have steadily been returning to greater efficiency, wages have risen to 25 per cent above the pre-war level, and the Government has cut taxes. The proportional increase in trade is directed toward the Asiatic and American continents. Germany is developing markets in the Far East and Latin America, while sales in Europe are less important than formerly. It was but recently that announcement was made of preparations for a tremendous German drive on the American market for textiles. Germany is getting back into the sun.

A very pretty little tribute was paid to the Japanese the other evening by Lieutenant Arnold, one of the round-the-world flyers. Arnold and Wade were giving an illustrated talk of their experiences in the course of the world flight to the Reserve Officers' Association at Washington. Arnold said that news of their expected arrival in Japan having preceded them, all the school children within a radius of nine miles walked to the landing place and return for three days running, the planes being late. When the aviators finally arrived they were greeted with immense enthusiasm by the kids, who sang songs of the U. S. Exclusion act. Arnold "America" in Japanese, while they waved tiny American flags. The entire populace turned out and made a gala day of the affair. And what made this welcome all the more effective was the fact that just a little while before Japan had been informed of the pas added: "To make the reception still more noteworthy, Japan gave us several earthquake shocks." Probably turning the other cheek.

As was stated some time ago, there will be no revision of the tariff in the next Congress. There may be "pop-gun" attempts, but that is as far as it will go. Just prior to the convention of the National Cotton Manufacturers' Association in Washington a rumor was started that they were going to begin a drive for revision upward on cotton textiles, but this was scouted by those who were "inside the ropes" and the canard was exploded by the silence of the organization on the subject. Certain individual members may have thought higher rates were necessary, but the matter was not agitated.

The rumor, however, seems to have upset the leaders of one or two farm organizations, and they promptly issued a counterblast demanding that the tariff on manufactures be lowered, but opposing any tinkering with the agricultural schedule. The importation of manufactured goods last year was greater than all of our imports of every nature the year before the war. Imports of textiles, cotton, wool, linen, silk, etc., totaled about $320,000,000. It does not appear that there is any kick coming on the score that the present tariff law cuts off imports to this country, and it is dangerous practice to attempt to arouse the agricultural against the manufacturing classes.

Meanwhile we must put our trust in Lord—General Lord, director of the budget—who has been drafted by President Coolidge to go forth and teach all citizens the value of economy, that being Mr. Coolidge's remedy for the evils of depression.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

In the retirement of Sir Joseph Pope the civil service of Canada loses its most distinguished member. A graduate of Prince of Wales College, Charlottetown, his native place, he turned in his youth toward political and civic affairs, and entered the civil service. Winning the admiration and confidence of Sir John Macdonald, the prime minister, by his capacity as a lesser government official, young Pope, in 1882 was made private secretary to the premier. In 1896 he was under-secretary of state and deputy registrar-general of Canada. He was attached to the staff of the British agent on the Bering sea arbitration at Paris, 1893; was agent of the Canadian Government in the proceedings of the joint high commission which met at Quebec and at Washington 1898-99; associate secretary to the Alaska boundary tribunal, London, 1903; plenipotentiary at the pelagic sealing conference, Washington, 1911; arranged the Canadian tour of the Prince and Princess of Wales in 1901, and, for similar services on the occasion of the Quebec tercentenary, received C. V. O. in 1908.

FINDERS KEEPERS

"Some of the fellers in our grade is awful lucky," sighed Bobby one night after dinner. "They find marbles and toys and things like that. There's lots of other things they find, too; pieces of roller skates and cigar bands, and once Billy found a cigar coupon good for part of a present. Only when Billy took the coupon to the cigar store they said he had to have a hundred or something like that, before he could choose what he wants. He won't give that old coupon to anybody. He says he's going to find some more and then he's going to get a radio. Mamie Kelly up and found an old cuff button and her mother says it's real gold and she's got it hanging on a ribbon to show all the gang. I wisht I could find a diamond ring, I do, and then I'd sell it and get a whole pile of things."

"If you found a diamond ring," said his father solemnly, "you'd watch the 'lost and found' advertisements in the newspapers and you'd return it to the owner."

"Maybe the owner wouldn't know it was gone," suggested Bobby. "So then she wouldn't but anything in the paper and I could keep it."

"Most people are fully aware of their loss when anything like that is gone," said his father. "Besides, we might decide that you ought to advertise that you found the ring and the woman would wake up to her loss and come and get it back."

"I bet it costs a lot to find the owners of things," said Bobby. "I seen—saw—a police stuck up on a tree, that somebody found a dog, and I think that's a good way when they find a thing that don't cost such a lot. Nobody ain't going to advertise they found 10 cents or even 15."

"Hardly," said his father. "But he might ask around among his friends and neighbors and maybe he'd find the owner that way."

"Seems to me," said Bobby, sagely, "that if a feller loses something he don't know about he don't need to get it back. Like diamond rings," he added hastily. "If a guy's got such a slew of rings he don't know when one gets lost he don't need to get it back. Did you ever lose any money?"

"Not since I was a kid," said his father. "That is, if you don't count oil stock and things like that."

"Sam goes around doing things to make him lucky, like not stepping on cracks," Bobby went on. "And always letting black cats foller him and everything like that, and he don't ever find a thing he don't. Susie Harrick finds slews of things, but they always got somebody standing near what they belong to, and she has to give them back and that makes her sore. I think maybe I'll be a street sweeper and find a lot of thing in the street.

"If you could find a diamond every night or maybe once a week you could get a swell radio and a new car and things like that. You wouldn't hardly have to work at all; you'd get so much off'n your finds."

"Evidently you do not consider yourself very lucky in such things," said his father. "Don't you ever find anything yourself?"

"That's what I was starting to tell you," said Bobby quickly. "I was awful surprised when I saw it and I couldn't hardly believe it, but there was 59 cents, as plain as day, and there wasn't a person anywheres around, so I put it in my pocket. I knew you'd up and ask me did I try to find who owned it, so I up and ast Billy and Jimmy and Sam and Stubby and the girls and six fellers from the other room and two ladies on our street, and there ain't nobody lost it, so I got it yet."

"Oh, yes," said his father suspiciously. "Where did you find it?"

"Well," said Bobby, slowly, "that was why I was glad you ain't ever lost any money since you was a kid. It was on our front porch I found it, and me and Billy's going to a movie."—Chicago News.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

RADIO "PORTS OF ENTRY"

Port Jefferson, Carnarvon, Nauen, Great Lakes, Nantes, and Iwaki are unfamiliar names to most people. To radio operators they stand for six of the world's greatest cities; New York, London, Berlin, Chicago, Paris, and Tokyo. They are radio gates to these cities, says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its headquarters at Washington, D. C.

"Because of interference by tall buildings the wireless telegraph stations for the great cities generally are away from the business centers. Sometimes the city's radio gate may be 150 miles away, like the Cabo de Sao Thomo station used by Rio de Janeiro. Japan offers another reason for locating a radio gate far from a great city. When Yokohama and Tokyo fell in the cataclysm of September, 1923, all communications ceased. Civilization received the first S. O. S. for help for the stricken district from a little seacoast town, Haranomachi, 190 miles north of Tokyo, outside the quake area. This trans-Pacific wireless station generally goes by the name of Iwaki, because of the province in which it lies.

"Saint Paul is believed to have been executed at a place now called San Paolo, near the old road to Ostia two miles south of Rome. At this sacred place tall radio towers today receive news from all Christendom. Ostia, once proud port of entry for Rome, gives way to San Paolo, radio port of entry for modern Rome.

"Abu Za'bel is Cairo's radio gate. Resting on the edge of the desert its towers look upon near-by Heliopolis, where Plato studied. In no less striking contrast stands the Carnarvon station, on which London townspeople point out, not their radio station, but grim Carnarvon castle, said to be the most nearly perfect example of a medieval fortress in the British Isles. Carnarvon owes its radio importance to its location in westernmost Wales.

"Nantes is best known for the edict temporarily granting religious freedom to the Huguenots, in France, but radio operators are more familiar with it as a radio station for Paris. Nantes has not displaced Eiffel tower nor the American-built Bordeaux station. Nauen, twenty miles east of Berlin, is the radio port of entry for the German capital. New York may get its wireless messages from any of a number of places. Although communications are constantly coming in at Port Jefferson, Long Island; Tuckerton, New Jersey, near Atlantic City; and Belfast, Maine, they are automatically relayed so that they are all actually received in a New York skyscraper.

"Wireless telegraphy throws a net around the earth. The South Orkneys, off the tip of Tierra del Fuego, claim the permanent station nearest the South Pole. In January, 1924, the National Geographic Society radioed greetings to the farthest north station, The Bowdoin, Donald B. MacMillan's ship fast in the ice, and deep in the gloom of Arctic night, at Refuge Harbor near Etah, Greenland.

"Credit for the most northerly permanent station must go to Norway for Kavoresand, which is north of Hammerfest, at the tip ton of the Scandinavian peninsula. The lonely Vaigach island post maintained by the Soviet government is nearly as far north.

"It is not regarded as wise to cross the Sahara Desert in midsummer. The Sahara is more unconquerable than the sea but radio now has done for the sea of sand what it did for the ocean. Last summer an American newspaper man went overland from Algiers to the Niger. Hazardous though the journey was this traveler was able to communicate with his wife in the United States nearly every three days through the oasis radiotelegraph stations established by the French.

"Col. Claude H. Birdseye and his party two years ago were swallowed up for weeks in the depths of the Colorado River Canyons. While their fate was debated in the newspapers the party at the bottom of the Canyon heard through their radio set the sad news of President Harding's death in San Francisco.

"Could the great explorers come back they would find the scenes of their exploits decorated with wireless towers. Darien, where Balboa discovered the Pacific ocean, has a wireless station. Cebu, the island on which Magellan was killed, now supports one. So does San Salvador where Christopher Columbus landed. Magellan, going through the straits, today might radio a waiting world at one end, 'Am entering Straits,' and from a station at the other end report, 'Very windy passage. Will use Panama Canal next time.'"

Calles' Political Mate Proved Faithless

Poverty, persecution, perfidy, all demanded their toll during the career of Plutarcho E. Calles, and often he was disappointed and rebuffed.

Born to humble farmers in Guaymanas, Mexico, he went without shoes until he was sixteen. Diligent in his studies at the public school, he determined to be a teacher, and at sixteen was placed in charge of classes of his home town school.

Then came slow progress for seventeen years, at the end of which he was made superintendent of schools of Hermosillo, the state capital. He was successful until his plans for better schools and broader course of studies met the opposition of Don Porfirio Diaz, the Dictator President. Then he resigned and went back to the farm.

Massive of figure, determined, shrewd and dictatorial, he became squire, merchant, bonesetter and mayor of Fronteras. As municipal judge he became a revolutionary leader of Madero. Later chief of police of Agua Pietz, he joined Obregon's army after Huerta had killed Madero, and led 500 men into the revolution.

Then came his rapid rise to the rank of general and the office of Secretary of Commerce and Labor and War in Carranza's cabinet. He placed many soldiers on farms, addressed many meetings and was hated by the well-to-do and beloved by the mob.

Upon the election of Obregon to the presidency, Calles was appointed Minister of Gobernacion and the two with de la Huerta were called the triumvirate of Mexico. As the end of Obregon's term loomed last spring, Calles resigned and became a candidate for the presidency. Suffering from the effects of a prolonged illness, he wished to withdraw in favor of de la Huerta, who would not listen to it. Then de la Huerta broke faith and became a candidate. His campaign failing, de la Huerta followed the Mexican custom and started a revolution.

Quickly squelching the uprising, Calles was elected by a two-to-one vote and was inaugurated president of Mexico. And because of his many ideas for reform, his administration is being watched by the world.

BOOST NORWICH EXHIBITION MAKES PRETTY SCENE ON OPENING NIGHT

Under the auspices of Robert O. Fletcher Post, No. 4, American Legion, a Boost Norwich Exposition was opened at the armory on McKinley avenue Thursday evening. The attendance on the opening night was estimated at 400. A style show, automobile show, exhibits by the merchants of Norwich, concert and dance music and handsome decorations make the show one of the best of its kind ever seen in Norwich. The exposition is in the hands of P. E. Rockwood, who has charge of the general arrangements, assisted by a committee of Fletcher Post members and Paul A. Brown who has personal charge of the style show.

Style Show.

The exposition opened at 8 o'clock at which time the style show was staged. The models, displaying all the latest in women's coats, dresses and hats, appeared on an elevated parade, fifty feet long and three feet wide, erected just over the booths in the center of the drill hall and leading from the gallery. The approach is an inclosure incline from the gallery. In the erection of the parade Mr. Rockwood did not use either a nail or a screw. Pages in colonial costumes escorted the models onto the parade.

Three local merchants, Manhattan's Ladies' Shop, Broadway Smart Shoppe and Mandell's showed dresses, coats and hats. The models were as follows:

Misses Cecile Stevens, Marion Royce, Helene Crawford, Esther Bixby, Mary Higgins, Ruth Loring, Elizabeth Sevin, Phyllis Brown, Virginia Woodworth, Mrs. Frank Crowell and Mrs. Harold Carpenter.

The pages, in colonial costumes, were Doris Brown and Marjorie Carey. The Manhattan's Ladies' Shop featured a white georgette gown, embellished with maribou and studded with rhinestones, a poudre blue coat, red fox trimmings with gold braided edges and a Charmeen coat, squirrel collar and bottom and embroidered.

The numerous exhibits, attractively arranged through the center and about the sides of the armory, were very favorably commented upon.

BINGHAM AN ADVOCATE OF COMMERCIAL AVIATION

Southington, Conn., April 16 Senator Hiram Bingham advocated a bureau for commercial aeronautics at Washington and urged congress to "wake up" and enact a law for commercial aviation, in an address before the Southington Business Men's association and the Southington Club here tonight. His address followed one by Lieutenant Leslie P. Arnold, who told of the airplane flight around the world.

Senator Bingham said he was much interested in aviation because he was affiliated with the air service in the world war. He gave a description of the world flight and said that he did not think the people realized what the men went through on that achievement. It was the spirit of Connecticut such as Arnold showed that made the trip a success, the senator continued.—the same spirit that Nathan Hale showed.

Appealing for a bureau for the development of commercial aviation, Senator Bingham told of his European trip and how commercial aviation had been successfully developed abroad, especially between London and Paris. Contracts should be awarded to private individuals for the transportation of the mails by air, he said.

Senator Bingham paid tribute to Henry Ford who recently inaugurated an air service between Dearborn and Chicago.

ASSOCIATION OF SPORTSMEN ELECTS ITS OFFICERS

Annual reports were presented and accepted at the annual meeting of the Norwich Fish and Game Association, which was held Thursday evening in the Chamber of Commerce rooms with President Arthur E. Story presiding.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Arthur E. Story; vice president, Louis Ortman; secretary and treasurer, W. W. Ives; directors, Warren W. Church, James A. Bidwell, John M. Swahn, William LaRochelle.

A prosperous year for the association was shown and the treasurer's report showed a balance of $241.92 on hand.

The club voted to have the regular membership fee include a subscription to the Connecticut Sportsman, a monthly publication. Secretary Ives was instructed to present to the proper authorities a protest over present methods of obtaining licenses.

Arrangements for the annual outing were left in the hands of the officers and directors and an animated discussion was held over various matters.

The members were reminded of the annual banquet of the association next Thursday evening in Odd Fellows' hall when Governor Trumbull, Commissioner Wolcott and Superintendent Titcomb will be guests.

Something of what has been done in the way of improving game conditions was shown by the report that the local association has sown 5 bushels of wild rice and has on the way 1,500 bulbs of wild celery, both inviting to wild ducks. In brooks in this territory there have been placed 11,000 trout during the past year. One hundred pheasants have also been placed by the association, and the state association has put 45 pair of European partridges around in this section. This is in the line of an experiment to see how these birds will become acclimated here.

WAS LIQUOR OR FIGHT CAUSE OF COX DEATH?

Bridgeport authorities are awaiting the result of the coroner's inquest to determine their next move in the case of Patrick Cox, who was arrested last Tuesday night after the death of his brother Michael. Both the men were formerly of this city, having been brought up and resided on the West Side for many years. They still have relatives here.

Following an autopsy Dr. H. L. Peters refused to discuss Thursday whether Michael Cox, 58, who died at the Bridgeport hospital Tuesday night, from injuries alleged to have been received during a drunken brawl with his brother, on board a houseboat, had died of the supposed beating or of poison liquor.

According to the story of Mrs. Cox, mother of the two men Patrick, held for inflicting the injuries, came home very drunk Tuesday morning and advised her to go down to the boat, where he said Michael was dying because he (Patrick) had given him a fine beating. His mother went to the boat and found Michael dead.

On the other hand, Patrick claims to have had nothing to do with the dead man after putting him to bed, Monday night. He did admit to the Bridgeport police that there had been an argument before that, and that they had drunk a gallon of cider and a pint of whisky earlier in the evening.

The coroner will hold his inquest today (Friday).

Cotton Is Old Fabric

Cotton cloth has been worn almost as long as civilization can account for wearing apparel aside from the skins of wild animals. One of the oldest books in the world, the Rig-Veda, written about 3,400 years ago, mentions the manufacture of cotton cloth. It is thought its first use started in India and then it found its way thence through Persia, Palestine, Rome, and Europe. It was first manufactured in Europe in the tenth century. The word calico comes from the port of Calcutta, from which place it was

YALE-HARVARD RACE TO BE ROWED UPSTREAM AT 5P.M. ON JUNE 19TH.

New Haven, April 16—The Yale-Harvard varsity boat race on the Thames river at New London, June 19, will be rowed up-stream this year, according to an announcement made today by Yale rowing officials. The announcement followed a conference made today by Yale rowing officials. The announcement followed a conference here between Yale and Harvard rowing representatives, officials of the New Haven and Central Vermont railroads and the regatta committee. For the past two years the varsity race has been rowed down stream.

Manager Charles H. Walker, of the Yale crew, announced the following tentative schedule of races agreed upon at the conference:

Thursday, June 18—4 p. m., combination crews, Yale and Harvard, up stream, middle two miles.

Friday, June 19—9.45 a. m., freshman crews, Yale and Harvard, down stream, upper two miles, finishing at Navy Yard.

Second varsity crews, Yale and Harvard, over same course as freshman race, starting shortly after finish of freshman event.

5 p. m., varsity crews, Yale and Harvard, up stream, starting at railroad bridge.

The condition is made, in the agreement reached, that if the water is smooth at the time of the freshman and junior varsity races, these races will be rowed downstream over the middle two miles of the regular four mile course. With the tide conditions as they will be on June 19, however it is expected by the officials that the water will be rough and that the crews will race over the upper two miles down stream, as given in the schedule. If a postponement of the freshman and junior varsity races is necessary, they will be rowed up stream over the middle two miles, the freshmen race starting at 2.30. The crews are also scheduled on certain special runs.

Observation train arrangements are completed at today's meeting. There will be an observation train of seven of the New Haven road side cars for the varsity race and five cars for the freshman and junior varsity races. The Central Vermont railroad also will have observation cars.

It is necessary to postpone any of the races until the next day, the course to be rowed will be left to the referee, W. A. Meiklejohn, varsity crew captains and Professor Chappell, of New London, chairman of the regatta committee.

Those attending the conference here were Manager Walker, of the Yale crew; Manager Blanchard, manager of the Harvard crews; H. F. Hallock, general manager of the Connecticut Valley motorists association; Mr. Chapman, E. Read, general passenger agent of the New Haven road; Mr. Fisher, member of the operating department of the New Haven road; Mr. Healey, of the Central Vermont and Mr. Smith of the Hartford division of the New Haven road.

CHAPMAN OPPOSES DEEP RIVER TEAM SATURDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, April 16—With two victories with high school baseball teams and a scoreless tie game with the Alumni which constitutes the record of achievement by the Chapman Technical High, the week end game provides for a journey to Deep River to engage the high school nine at that to engage the high school nine of that town. Having made a fine start with a decisive victory over Old Lyme in the opening game of the year, the game which Tech played with Madison High had its significance in more ways than one upon the season which would be enjoyed by the Red and Black.

Chapman Tech from the past three games, has three twirlers exhibit their stuff much to the discomforture of three teams. Not one run was scored off these twirlers in 25 innings, a fine performance indeed for any team. It means that Chapman Tech is especially well fortified with pitching material and has plenty of reserve strength which can be called upon at any moment. In the Madison game alone, Brown, the dusky Tech twirler, struck out 16 men. In the game with Deep River Saturday at the latter's grounds, Brown is again favored to receive the assignment to toss them.

The remainder of the lineup will probably be the same with the exception of second base, where Streeter, the present keystone guardian, may be supplanted by Montgomery, who was originally slated for this position but was unable to do so due to the illness which overtook him on the eve of the first contest.

SANDE WILL RIDE FOR WIDENER THIS SEASON

New York, April 16—Earle Sande, America's leading jockey, who yesterday announced a severance of his relations with the Rancocas stable of Harry F. Sinclair, today signed to ride for Joseph E. Widener, president of the Westchester Racing association.

The Widener string, a small but promising one, will give Sande an opportunity to ride for outside owners. It was said, Mr. Widener's turf fortunes in the past are considered by racing followers to have suffered from the absence of a skillful jockey.

The Rancocas stable horses will be ridden this year by the Fator Brothers, in whom Trainer Hildreth today expressed much confidence.

Sande has not ridden in competition since last August, when he suffered a broken leg, fractured ribs and internal injuries in a fall at Saratoga Springs. State board of compensation officials have been unable to decide who shall pay the hospital bill of the jockey, as he was injured while riding spurt for James Butler, whose counsel claims that Sande can not be considered as an employe within the meaning of the law.

In the other semi-final match of the women's singles Mrs. Benjamin Cole, Boston, former national indoor champion, won from Miss Anne B. Townsend, of Philadelphia, in decisive fashion, 6-2, 6-0.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 16—Bulkeley was in a ball game this afternoon. At least it took the local school nine seven innings to pound out a victory, and every inning of that seven the Orange and Black knew it was matched with a team of equal calibre. That probably includes only the hitting which came at opportune time for the vanquished Coast Guard nine, but when it came to playing smart baseball the Bulkeley team outsmarted the cadets and out ran them on the bases by the number of 5 to 3.

This afternoon's game was a contest worth witnessing. It was slam bang baseball throughout, with the Coast Guard threatening on numerous occasions to come through with a victory. The Coast Guard nine was primed for the battle, and gave the Bulkeley nine a tough tussle through out.

Captain Tillie Daniels was hooked up with Gillis in a fine pitcher's battle for the first two innings. But the crash came in the third inning for the school nine and the Cadets ejecting two hits and with a base on balls, a hit batsman and two errors accounted for three runs and took the lead. Slowly but surely the Bulkeley batters overcame this lead by hitting out two runs for themselves in the fifth in which Sheflott's triple was the most damaging. He scored Hutchison before him and with his head up, Sheflott scored on Booth's foul which was caught by the Coast Guard first sacker.

Daniels was forced to twirl good ball to come out ahead today, and he did this with a snap. The Bulkeley batsmen were slowly but surely landing on Gillis' curves, and it was only a matter of how much the score would be if the game went the regulation number of innings. The Bulkeley hitting today was weak in comparison to the hitting in the previous two games. All the safe bingles were divided between three men, and two of these each had two hits apiece. The score:

FARM PROBLEM A COMBINATION OF MANY LITTLE ONES

(Written Specially for The Bulletin.)

It is well understood in every newspaper editorial room in the land that three-quarters of the paper's subscribers know much better how the paper should be run than the editor,—or think they do.

It is equally notorious in farmer circles that the bankers and railroad presidents and business executives and college professors who occasionally condescend so far as to recognize the existence of farmer-men know much better what the matter is with farming and what to do for it than the farmers,—or think they do.

Mr. Henry Ford, for example, is quite sure that the trouble about farming lies in farmer's unwillingness to pay $5 a day maximum, and use Fordson tractors on their farms and Tin Lizzies on their trips to market.

Banker Youmans, for another example, is convinced that all a farmer needs do to attain success is to keep books, settle all accounts monthly, and have everything down in black and white.

Chairman Gary of the United States Steel Corporation, for another example, holds that the whole secret of successful farming lies in the farmer's implicit obedience to the "law of supply and demand."

And so it goes along the whole line. The amount of advice annually poured forth on the heads of helpless farmers is sufficient, if it could be transformed into nautical seamen, to man all the world's navies. The fact that the adviser does'nt know "Haw" from "Gee", or quack grass from Phleum pratense, or whether to milk a cow by massaging her horns or pulling her tail, seems minor matters are not considered as of any importance. The man who doesn't know which end of the egg-shell sucks me air bubble thinks himself not only qualified but divinely commissioned to teach both his grandmother and his grandfather how to pack eggs.

Because the average farmer is apt to be slower of speech than his glib-tongued city visitor, the latter assumes that he is dense of comprehension.

Because the average farmer has a habit of plugging away rather doggedly and quite unimpressively at his sordid daily tasks, the urban "go-getter" is inclined to think he lacks energy.

Because, having got up and done his morning chores at an hour when the average city man is snoring his loudest, he gets a little sleepy and slow towards the middle of the day, the city caller pities his lack of "pep."

Because, having worked hour after hour in the lonely field without sight of another human face or sound of another human voice, he seems eager to hang over the bars and "pass the time o' day", with any town Nimrod who chances along looking for a bird or a rabbit, the said hunter is inclined to criticize him for having nothing to do and for being willing to knock off even that on the smallest pretext.

And all are willing to take their stand on the belief that they would make successes where he seems to breed failure.

Chairman Gary of the United States Steel Corporation is one of the latest to undertake the task of setting us countrymen right. He "lays his heft" on the supremacy of the famous old law of supply and demand. In an article in a recent Country Gentleman, he points out that the steel corporation is perhaps the largest industrial organization in the world. "If economical conditions could be controlled arbitrarily by any combination of capital and material resources, we should be able to do so. Our property is worth over a billion dollars more than it was when we organized in 1901. But this substantial increase in resources has not enabled us to abolish the law of supply and demand. . . . Nor can we control the labor situation. That also depends upon the law of supply and demand."

All of which reads quite like an extract from some work on political economy, written before the labor unions had unravelled one end of the supply and demand law, and "gentlemen's agreements" had frayed the other end dangerously near the breaking point.

Chairman Gary avers that this law of supply and demand is "as inexorable as gravity." Perhaps it is. But a ten-years old boy at the handle of a common Douglas pump can nullify the law of gravity down to about 30 feet. With other special pumps and power engines water can be pumped up from 3,000 feet.

All these various sequences of nature which we call laws for lack of a better name, work equally and accordantly—so long as they aren't interfered with. Water runs down hill regularly and consistently till something dams the stream, or till somebody with a force-pump or a ram or other device sends it squirting up in the sprinkled face of the law of gravity.

And demand unquestionably governs supply, so long as nothing happens to check the supply;—something like a prolonged drought, or an invasion of insect pests, or a big strike of organized labor, or the sticking of a human enactment between the spokes of the wheels.

Just as an illustration take the case of coffee. The demand for it is just as great as ever; in fact, greater. So much greater that the price has gone up to double or treble what it was two-three years ago. But the supply which this fierce demand should stimulate and produce isn't manifesting itself. Why? Simply because Brazil, which raises most of our coffee and which has untold quantities on hand, won't let it loose in answer to the demand; holds it, instead, for the purpose of forcing high and still higher prices. There isn't any diminution in the American demand for its breakfast coffee; there isn't any lessening in Brazilian production; but a Brazilian embargo on coffee exportation effectually nullifies the normal operation of the law of supply and demand.

Of course you and I, being plain farmer-men, can't be expected to understand or appreciate all the fine-spun theories of the political economists and the wizards of big business. But we can still tell a hawk from a handsaw when the wind is northerly, as well as Hamlet.

We are willing to admit that the law of supply and demand is an absolutely straight line, so long as it is let alone to function in its own free way. But we can't help seeing, just as clearly, that when forty-seven varieties of trust or anti-trust legislation are whanging at it from the north-north-east, and an equal or larger number of labor unions bucking it from the sou'-sou'-west, it is apt to get more or less out of true. Eventually it will straighten itself out, without doubt. But "eventually" isn't "now." Nevertheless, it is the "now" in which we have to live,—if we can. It isn't what will happen after our bones have moldered away which concerns us so much, right this minute, as how we are going to keep bones and flesh together today and tomorrow.

We may feel complete confidence that truth will eventually triumph, since the eternal years are hers. But they aren't ours. We have a much narrower limit of action. Even the longest headed bird can't lay this year's eggs in next year's nest. Posterity may find all our present problems solved and settled. But there isn't going to be any posterity, unless we manage, somehow, to pull our way out of existing difficulties. The Delectable Mountains are very fine in prospect. Meanwhile our hind-wheels are mired, axle-deep, in the stickiest center of the Slough of Despond. And we've simply got to get ourselves out of that slough before we can make any progress towards the happy hights beyond.

I'll own up, right here and now, that I think our getting out of the slough depends a good deal more on the sensible, experienced work of practical men than on the advice or suggestions of gentlemen standing on the bank, no matter how sincere they may be.

I should rely a good deal more on the work of one old farmer with a stout fence-rail and a good "prop" than on all the schemes suggested by all the members of the sidewalk committee.

It's a good deal easier to stand on the dry turf and tell some one else what to do than it is to wade into the mire and give a hand at doing it. It's also less effective.

The real trouble with what they call "the farm problem," at least here in New England, is that it isn't just one big problem to be solved in one way and once for all. It's about a million separate little problems, no two exactly alike, each of which must be met by itself, solved by itself,—and then solved all over again, tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow.

These solutions aren't coming through outside advice, nor by the road of legislation, nor upon any built up platform of fine phases. They're coming, if at all, through the individual gumption of individual farmers, each one nailing the hide of his own varmint on his own barn door.

This does not mean Robinson Crusoe-ish isolation. It does not mean that every farmer should fence himself in and shoot at every neighbor who looks over the fence. But it means that varying individual troubles must be met by varying individual treatment. There's no panacea, no cure-all, no patent formula to fit all cases.

The "rule of three" is a perfectly good rule, in its place and for its purpose. But it isn't the rule to use in working out an example in compound interest.

The sort of farming which may bring success on horizonless western prairies won't work on New England hillsides. The thing which may be exactly what is wanted on Hardscrabble Hights may be worse than good for nothing in Hardscrabble Hollow, two stones' toss away.

The more a farmer knows the more effectively he will be apt to work,—provided he doesn't "know" too many things which aren't so. Bystanders and onlookers are much more apt to be flush with that latter kind of misinformation than his farmer fellows.

LISBON

In his Easter sermon Sunday morning, Rev. W. J. Reynolds spoke of how much knowledge of Jesus' appearance after the resurrection has come down to us because of the honest doubt of Thomas and the proofs of Jesus' identity that he demanded. The solo, Christ is Risen, by J. W. Lerman, was sung by Walter A. Hyde.

There was a brief programme by the Sunday school including a hymn by Mrs. W. J. Reynolds' class, song by Miss Clara Hyde's class, readings by Miss Hattie Bradlow and Miss Stella Buffan, two exercises by members of Miss Lucy Baldwin's class and songs by the school. The oral decorations were very beautiful. There were Easter lilies, pots of yellow daffodils, begonias and coleus.

The Ladies' Aid society was entertained at the parsonage Wednesday afternoon, with a very good attendance.

Mrs. Annie Church, who is nearly eighty, picked a peck of dandelion greens in a field on G. A. Kennedy's farm Monday.

Rowland Barber, Jr., of Westminster, Vt., and Claire Barber spent Easter with their father and sister at the Barber home.

Mrs. Joseph Bottomley writing to her mother, Mrs. Henry Kendall about the tornado swept through Miami and Hialeah, Florida, stated that when they saw it coming they jumped into their automobile and drove with all speed out of its probable path. When they returned they found the tornado had passed about a half mile from their home but the experience of seeing buildings and cattle carried through the air is one they never wish to pass through again.

LEFFINGWELL

Sunday evening an Easter concert was given by members of the Sunday school to an audience of seventy-five. The church was prettily decorated with evergreen plants, also cut flowers given by a Maplewood nursery, and afterwards were distributed among the shut-ins of the neighborhood. Mrs. Nathan E. Whiting, the organist, played the voluntary after which the audience sang, "In the Cross of Christ I Glory." Rev. William B. Oalslen read the Scripture and offered prayer. Then followed a song, "Hail, Day of Victory," by the children; recitations, "Easter" by Russell Murray; "Flowers," by Margaret Bedot and "My Wish for You", by Beulah Mowrey and the song "Jesus is Risen," by the children. Miss Louise Bedat gave a recitation, "Easter Millions," was given by Mary Hracyk; recitation "The Easter Question," Edmund Murphy and "The Present," Mildred F. Leffingwell; song, "Blossoms," by the choir; Miss Effie Murphy gave a reading, "Easter in the Garden"; Zelda Mowrey read "Lily of the Valley." A recitation was given by Raymond Murray, "A Gift," "My Joy" was given by Michael Hracyk, Miss Jennie Catana sang the solo, "Get Up," Rev. William B. Oakley gave a talk, after which Archie Murphy gave a recitation "The Decorator," and Raymond Murphy Spoke. Miss Linda Mowrey read "The Flowers' Message," and there was singing, "The Easter Lesson."

Monday evening several from Leffingwell attended the surprise party at Preston Plains at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Foote. They had been married ten years and were presented many gifts, mostly of tin-ware. Friends were present from Preston, Norwich, East Great Plains, and Leffingwell. Dancing and cards were enjoyed through the evening and later sandwiches, cake and coffee were served.

Guests Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John I. Ross were Mr. and Mrs. LeGrande Chappelle and daughter, Barbara, of Best View and Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Gardner of East Great Plain.

Rev. William B. Oakley and Mrs. H. E. Francis were in Old Mystic Tuesday evening to attend the fifth anniversary of Plus Ultra Bible class.

Easter Sunday was observed at the M. E. church with a sermon by the pastor in the morning from the text found in Luke 24-34, The Lord is risen indeed.

An Easter concert was given in the M. E. church Sunday evening by the children. Rev. J. R. Miller and Miss Miriam Young assisted in the musical numbers with violins. The parts were well taken and won much praise for Mrs. Era Huntington who had charge of the recitations by the children and Miss Edythe Woodward in charge of the music.

Mr. and Mrs. Loring Young entertained the formers brother last week.

Mrs. Charles Buell of Petersham, Mass., has been at the parsonage the past week, helping care for Mrs. Abbie Buell, who is still confined to her bed. Her condition is a little more favorable at present.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dansereau and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dansereau, of Southbridge, Mass., Mr. and Mrs. William Clemence of Goodyear, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clark and son Donald, of Eastford, were callers at the parsonage Sunday.

Rev. John H. Knott gave his congregation a strong and impressive Easter sermon Sunday. The choir rendered special Easter anthems and hymns. The flowers were beautiful and well arranged.

The South Chaplin Sunday school, Mrs. Katherine Crane, superintendent, gave a fine Easter concert in the chapel, Sunday evening. The children are deserving of special praise for the interesting manner in which they took their parts in songs, recitations and by a chorus of several Easter songs. The meeting at the church was omitted in the evening and a good number attended the Easter concert at South Chaplin.

The Flavor is Roasted In!

THE secret of good coffee is flavor. The secret of coffee flavor lies in the roasting. That is why a steaming, golden cup of White House Coffee tastes so delicious. The flavor is roasted in.

The White House roasting process retains and develops the delicate coffee essence that escapes during roasting unless it is carefully preserved.

Make sure of getting this flavor that is roasted in, by insisting on genuine White House Coffee. Then you can always serve coffee as good as the best cup of coffee you ever tasted. Don't accept a substitute.

WE NEED ROOM TO MAKE ALTERATIONS

The alterations which we have been planning to enable us to carry out our elaborate expansion program have now taken actual form. The builders and carpenters are now at work in our midst and have already begun to crowd us. We must make room for them to work and as we have no extra storage space for our merchandise we are going to put it into homes everywhere — into every home—into Your Home—at prices so astonishingly low that the public will quickly clear our floors. Lucky will be those who will benefit by this event!

PLAUT-CADDEN CO. BUY BIG BUSINESS BLOCK IN CITY CENTER

Negotiations were completed Friday between the Plaut-Cadden Co. and the heirs of the Henry Bill estate, Miss Jane E. Bill and Mrs. Florence Bill Selden, widow of Rev. J. H. Selden, by which the Plaut-Cadden company bought from the Bill estate two of the finest pieces of business property in the center of the city, the Quinebaug building on Main street and the Bill block on Shetucket street at the corner of Water street. The two buildings are on connecting plots of land and together make probably the largest area of business property in the city under individual ownership.

The Quinebaug building is a four-story brick block, 135-137-139-141-143 Main street, fronting 65 feet on this street, and extending through to Water street, with a depth of 120 feet. Adjacent to it on the east on Water street is the Bill block, a three-story brick building fronting 70 feet on Shetucket street, Nos. 29-31-33-35-37, and running for the same distance along Water street. Between the buildings is a great triangular area, 66 feet deep, which will be built up in connecting the two buildings, and there is a possibility that an additional story may be added to the Bill block, to bring it up to the same height as the Quinebaug building. Approximately three and one-half acres in the buildings will be available for the Plaut-Cadden Co. in the plans which they have under consideration towards the development of a truly great store to which many departments will be added. The plans of the company are taking into consideration the future possibilities of Water street for commercial purposes, and their frontage here comprises the property numbered 164-166-168, 170-172-174 Water street.

The extensions and enlargements that will be accomplished with the acquirement of this extensive and valuable property are the natural evolution and culmination of the vision of a great modern store for Norwich which has led the individuals of the company on from one progressive step to another in the last fifty-three years, since the late Abraham Plaut conducted a jewelry store at 200 Main street. In 1899 the Plaut-Cadden Co., a consolidation of the firms of A. Plaut and the Cadden Cycle Co., moved into the Main street location now occupied by Utley & Jones, where they put in a new front and made extensive enlargements. The business increased by leaps and bounds and the next step was the erection of the five-story building on Main street, opposite the Quinebaug building, to be the home of one of Connecticut's greatest stores. To this was added the Johnson building, and some time afterwards the firm moved across the street into the Quinebaug building which they have now acquired by purchase. A complete new front was put into the building, which was transformed into one of the most modern business structures in this territory. When the firm took over the Quinebaug building it was thought that the limit of development had been reached, but the people of Norwich and this trading center accepted the innovations so well that it was realized by the members of the company that they could develop further along lines not often attempted in a city of the size of Norwich. The result is seen today in the plans which the company is making in the purchase and the development of the Bill property. Their business plans will be carried out in connection with their large New London organization to make the largest commercial center in Eastern Connecticut.

Earnest effort is being made in many parts of the country to plant forests to provide lumber for the future. More than 35,000 acres is replanted every year, and about 1,500,000 acres of land has been thus restored. Fully three-fourths of this total area has been planted by farmers and other land owners. The federal government has replanted 12 per cent and the state governments somewhat less. Many municipalities are also engaged in the work. Among the other agencies engaged in forest planting are lumber land owners, operators of wood-pulp industries, railroads, pulp companies and mining companies.

WHEELER ENFORCEMENT BILL IS KILLED IN SENATE IN SHORT ORDER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Hartford, April 16.—Senator Hiram Bingham was a visitor at the capitol today and was warmly greeted by his many friends. He occupied a seat by the side of Speaker Darbie and as soon as Chaplain Lewis had ended his prayer, Judge Alling, house leader, moved that the courtesies of the house be extended to our junior senator, and it was unanimously adopted. The senator was introduced by Speaker Darbie, being greeted with hearty applause as he arose to speak. He said in part:

"The last time I stood in this place I little thought you were going to do me the great honor you have just paid me. I have always had the highest opinion of the general assembly of this state and during my three months' experience in Washington I have been aware of nothing to lower my opinion of this body.

"It is not true that there are no great issues dividing the country today. You hear it said that it is possible to tell a republican from a democrat; that they both believe in the tariff and think alike on other things. But there are great issues in conflict there in Washington. There is the issue of national control versus states' rights; there is government ownership versus individual initiative.

"The more I come to study these things, the more convinced I am that the real levening force in this country is the Connecticut idea. This idea is being fought against by the western idea, sometimes referred to as the Wisconsin idea. It is the idea of interfering with the rights of the individual rather than the protection of personal liberty."

The senator went on to say that he honed the members of the general assembly would do as had the members of previous assemblies and make it their care that there was no room in Connecticut for the constantly increasing demand for more action by the central government. He said that during the last session of congress 12,000 bills had been introduced. "You who have to struggle with a hundred bills in your committee can realize what that means," said he.

"My short experience," continued Senator Bingham, "has led me to believe that the Connecticut idea is the right idea and I trust you will continue to stop the use of burreaucracy and the growth of power in the central government which we all love so well."

Section 3758 of the general statutes that was repealed in a bill that passed the house today was one that forbids the selling of tickets at reduced rates, other than mileage or commutation.

Another railroad bill permits such trains to be run on Sundays as the public utilities commission may approve. The running of Sunday trains have been out of the state under the interstate act but has been unlawful where the starting and terminal points were entirely within the state.

The bill was explained by Chairman Pond of the railroad company. Changed conditions made it desirable that the roads be permitted to run Sunday trains. Automobile transportation had made it possible for many to spend the week ends at shore resorts and the roads should not be placed at a disadvantage with the auto competition. The utilities commission has power to control the operation of Sunday trains.

The bill allowing the city of Norwich to issue refunding bonds to the amount of $146,000 in conformance with the senate was passed in the house today.

The bill provides:

Section 1. The city of Norwich is authorized to issue serial bonds, which shall be denominated "Issue of 1925, Refunding Bonds of the City of Norwich," to the amount of one hundred and sixty-six thousand dollars, and such bonds shall be paid in equal installments, commencing not later than five years from the date of issue, and the total amount of such bonds shall be paid within a period of twenty-five years from said date. Such bonds shall bear interest at a rate not to exceed four and one-half per centum per-annum, payable semi-annually. The funds realized from the sale of such bonds shall be used for the payment of bonds already issued by said city and which shall mature June 1, 1925. Such bonds shall not be issued at less than par, and it may be stipulated therein that the principal and interest shall be payable in gold coin of the United States of the present standard of weights and measures.

Section 2. The court of common council of said city may provide for the sale and negotiation of such bonds and shall prescribe, subject to the limitations of this act, the several and aggregate amounts of such bonds, the form of the same, the rate of interest to be paid thereon, the times and places of paying such interest and principal and the person or persons who shall execute the same on behalf of said city.

Water Bonds Favorably Reported

The finance committee also reported favorably the bill introduced by Representative Cassidy permitting the city of Norwich to issue water bonds to the amount of $1,500,000.

The Wheeler bill was unfavorably reported in the senate today. Senators Beckwith of Niantic, Brigham of Granby and Hall of New Haven voted against the acceptance of the report. Speaker Darbie requested the chairmen of the committees to report the condition of business in their several committees.

The House

At 11:30 the house was called to order by Speaker Darbie and prayer was made by House Chaplain Lewis. U. S. Senator Bingham was introduced by the speaker and addressed the assembly.

Favorable reports were made on H. B. 457, an act concerning sale, importation, storage and slaughter of live poultry, and on H. B. 267, an act concerning voting districts in Stratford. Clerical errors were corrected in bills by the committee on engrossed bills.

Bills favorably reported and placed on the calendar were: H. B. 479, an act concerning agricultural interests, sent to the appropriations office; H. B. 713, an act concerning inspection of dairies and the production, care, handling, marketing and sale of milk and cream; H. B. 248, an act concerning the impounding of animals.

The finance committee reported favorably on [illegible] of the city of Norwich [illegible] ndar; also H. B. [illegible] the collection [illegible] act concerning [illegible] the superior [illegible] county.

Bills taken from the calendar and passed were: Substitute for No. 50. An act authorizing the city of Norwich to issue [illegible] stitute for No. 479. [illegible] the city of Waterbury to issue bonds; substitute for No. 515. An act repealing an act concerning the operation of railroad trains on Sunday; No. 516. An act repealing an act concerning fares on Sunday trains; No. 524. An act authorizing the Northwest School district of Hartford to issue bonds.

House at 12:10 adjourned till Tuesday at 11:30.

THE SENATE

The Wheeler prohibition enforcement bill, the most discussed measure before the present session of the Connecticut general assembly, was quickly rejected by the senate today. There was no roll call and only four of the thirty-two senators voted against the acceptance of the unfavorable report of the judiciary committee.

Senator Shaw of Redding presented the report which he said was the unanimous action of the committee.

The committee, said Senator Shaw, came to the conclusion that the bill would not help law enforcement. The federal law for enforcement is strict and the penalties high. The committee held a hearing on the bill on Tuesday and the members of the committee who had been previously furnished with copies of the bill had given its provision a close study.

The penalties were so strict that the law would be unenforceable. He thought the state and the federal government should work together for the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment. The enforcement officers were doing their duty, and he thought that in time there would be a more general observance of the law.

The committee could not see wherein the Wheeler bill would assist in securing that which the state's attorneys wanted. That was his personal opinion as well.

Senator Shaw alluded to some of the claims made at the hearing in behalf of the bill and said that it was stated as a fact that people are reacting against attempts to enforce the eighteenth amendment.

Senator Merritt asked if the committee had under consideration another bill for the purpose of clarifying the present law.

Senator Shaw said that some members of the committee were of the opinion that something ought to be done to strengthen the present enforcement law but he did not know that a bill would be presented to give effect to that opinion. A few members of the committee, he added, thought that some of the provisions of the so-called Wheeler bill should be embodied in a separate measure, but he could not say that that would be done.

Senator Merritt said she was in favor of clarification, but she was against the extension of the present law.

The absent senators were: Senators Woodruff of the fourteenth and Senator Cronin of the eighteenth. The latter was absent on account of sickness.

Senators G. E. Hall of New Haven, Fred A. Beckwith of Niantic, C. E. Brigham of Granby and Clarence H. Child of Woodstock voted against the rejection of the bill. Senators Doty, Merritt and Griffin of Hartford all voted for the acceptance of the committee report.

There was a report at the capitol this afternoon that one house member of the judiciary committee was not entirely in accord with the unfavorable report and had made inquiry as to whether the committee proposed to make any recommendation to the general assembly that would incorporate some of the asserted desirable features of the measure or in any way strengthen the present enforcement measure. The bill will come up for action in the house next week and the attitude of that member will then be awaited with keen interest.

REPORT OF INDUSTRIAL EMPLOYMENT CONDITIONS

Boston, April 16—Little change in industrial employment conditions in New England in March as compared with February was noted in the monthly report of the United States employment service, New England district, made public today. Practically all plants were reported in operation although part time prevailed in a number of industries, including cotton manufacture. Building operations were active in most sections. The report by states follows:

Connecticut: Industrial employment conditions showed an improvement in March. Majority of industries throughout the state are operating many of them on full time and there is little unemployment evidence. Hat industry reported increased activity. Building operations continue active and resident craftsmen in most localities are well employed. No farm labor problem at this season.

Rhode Island: Practically all plants are running, but many are on part time. Surplus of workers reported in the jewelry, metal and textile industries. Overtime obtains in the silk and braiding mills. Building programs under way keep craftsmen well engaged. Local supply of farm labor adequate for present demands.

Massachusetts: The industrial employment situation showed little change during the past month. While there has been an increase in the number of plants resuming full time operations, part time still obtains in many. Overtime prevails in the wireless equipment industry, and the shoe industry increased activities somewhat due to orders for Easter trade. A surplus of labor is reported from certain sections. Building operations continue active throughout the state and keep resident craftsmen well employed.

CHAPMAN IS HOPEFUL OF ESCAPING THE GALLOWS

Hartford, April 16—Gerald Chapman was buoyant and hopeful of his chances of escaping the gallows when seen at the state prison in Wethersfield today by his junior coounsel, Nathan O. Freedman, who brought word from him. The bandit convicted of the murder of Patrolman James Skelly and sentenced to hang on June 25, was pleased to learn that the probable effect of his preliminary appeal just filed would be to defer his execution at least until after the October term of the supreme court which is to hear the appeal. He also expressed himself well pleased with the efforts and enterprise of his counsel, Mr. Freedman, Frederick J. Grochl, of New York, Charles W. Murphy, of Danbury and Harold Evans, of Hartford.

Chapman's counsel have been granted an extension of ten days by Judge Newell Jennings for the filing of the request for a finding by the judge and the submission of a draft for the proposed finding, which are the next steps in Chapman's appeal to the supreme court from his conviction in the superior court. Under the law the last day for the filing of the papers named was today, but owing to the fact that counsel for Chapman had not received a transcript of the evidence until April 13, and the work of preparing the papers was extensive, the request for the extension was made by Mr. Freedman.

HELD FOR THE ILLEGAL TRANSPORTATION OF BEER

Milford, Conn., April 16—Henry Stratton, of 457 Pas. avenue, Bridgeport, was released in bonds of $500 today, following his arraignment in town court on a charge of illegally transporting beer. Stratton was arrested late last night by State Policemen William Silk and James Finnegan, of the Westport barracks, but news of the arrest was not made public immediately as the police hoped to make another arrest in the case before the owner of the truck, said to be P. J. Bennett of Bridgeport, should learn that Stratton had been arrested.

Bernard, however, was not located, so Stratton was arraigned in court and his case continued for one week to permit further investigation.

Suspicions of the state policemen were aroused by the fact that the truck was bearing cases marked "machinery, handle with care," consigned to the E. W. Lowe company, 59 Pine street, Providence, R. I., from the New Haven Machine company, 2240 Temple street, New Haven, but was traveling away from the general toward it.

When the "machinery cases" were opened they were found to contain barrels of beer, each of twenty-six gallons capacity.

TABLET IN BOSTON FOR JOHN SINGER SARGENT

Boston, April 16—The death in London Wednesday of John Singer Sargent was marked today by the appearance of a simple tablet, bearing only his name and the dates of his birth and death, at the head of the main stairway in the Boston Public Library the building which houses the opinion of many critics [illegible] samples of the famous painters [illegible] in this country.

Representative William A. Oldfield of Kansas, chairman of the democratic congressional committee and the party's "whip" in the house, was operated on in Washington for acute appendicitis.

RHEUMATIC PAINS GO SWOLLEN JOINTS VANISH

Rheuma—The One Safe and Quick-Acting Remedy for Rheumatism—Money Back if It Fails

Thousands of sufferers have freed themselves from the bondage of rheumatism; rid themselves of the torturing pain; reduced the swollen joints; thrown away canes and crutches, and from helpless beings became able to work and to be of use to themselves and their families.

They took Rheuma; the modern enemy of rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, arthritis, gout and chronic neuralgia.

Don't be sceptical about Rheuma. You will know in a few hours after beginning the treatment that the poisonous uric acid is leaving your system through the natural channels. You will feel better in a day; you will know you are going to be helped in less than a week.

Don't think because Rheuma is not expensive that it won't bring you back to health. There is no guess work about it. That's why Lee & Osgood Co., and good druggists everywhere sell it with guarantee of money back if it does not give quick and blessed relief almost at once.

Sciatica Rheumatism and High Blood Pressure Banished in a Remarkably Short Time.

Cannot Praise the Treatments of the Victor Health Office Enough

DEAR DOCTOR:

I suffered from sciatica for a long while, and in fact I had given up hope of ever getting any relief. The pains in my back, shoulders and head were simply fierce. The fullness in my head and dizziness were very severe. One day I was advised to call at the Victor Health Office. I did and I was certainly surprised at the kind and courteous treatment that I received. The examination that I received impressed me and I started to take treatment at once. Now in two months I am entirely well. I would advise any sufferer as I formerly was to call at the Victor Health Office and I tell you that they will help you. You can depend on it that they will. I would be pleased to answer letters or talk to anybody personally that will call to see me. Thanking you for the wonderful relief without ever taking a drop of medicine. I am yours for Health.

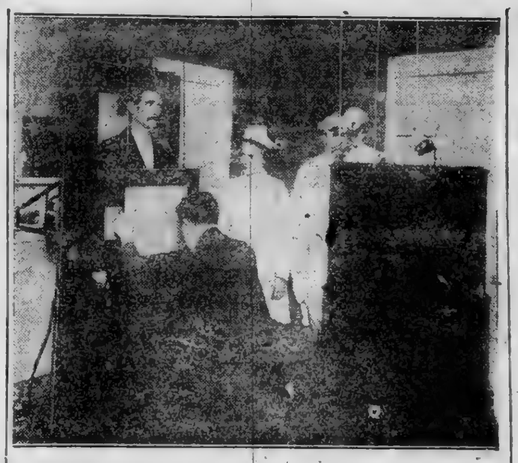
Received Much Relief After Many Years of Suffering From Rheumatism.

Had Come To Victor Health Office As a Last Resort After Many Disappointments

TO THE PUBLIC:

I have had rheumatism in my knees and ankles and in fact every joint of my body for years I could hardly walk, was very restless, and could not sleep. I tried doctors, patent medicines, chiropractors, all of no avail. I called at the Victor Health Office, 85 Washington St., Hartford Conn., and received a thorough examination and X Ray taken. They then informed me that they could help me. I at once started my treatments and after a few treatments I felt much better than what I have for years. I get around to do my work, walk much better and sleep better. I must also say that the treatments are painless and very easy to take. Will be glad to speak to those who suffer with rheumatism or any kindred diseases. Thanks to the Victor Health Office for so much relief.

Very Truly Yours,
Mrs. J. M. Orleanda,
120 Hope Street,
Willimantic, Conn.



The Fluoroscopic X-Ray Examination can best be compared to Motion Pictures—the Organs are shown actually at work. This examination differs from an ordinary X-Ray photograph, in that the X-Ray only shows a still pose.

Some Reasons For the Victor Health Offices' Wonderful Success

There are many people who feel sick without knowing just what is wrong with them. They may have tried to regain their health in different ways but failed. The Victor Health Office extends a helping hand to all these sufferers. They will clear up the uncertainty as to their condition and advise what can be done for them.

As a first step in putting patients on the Road to Health the Victor Health Office makes a very thorough examination, using the X-Ray in getting at the obscure conditions that cause the state of ill health and all its attending symptoms. When this has been done and they find that they can help the patient with their methods, they map out a course of treatments. They are administered by efficient attendants, under the guidance of experienced physicians, making use of the elaborate modern equipment of scientific physio-therapeutic devices and appliances for the special treatment of this particular case.

Year after year hundreds of wealthy Americans visit European health resorts for all kinds of treatment and for examination by experts. Here in Hartford the Victor Health Office has established and developed a system of treatment which closely approaches the demand made on the famous European resorts, without the great expense connected with such trips. The Victor Health Office fees are so moderate that even the small wage earner can have the benefit of this treatment.

The Victor Health Office has helped others and is helping them at this time—people who have suffered and are now being greatly relieved of the various ailments which are successfully treated by Victor Methods.

An entire building at 85 Washington Street, Hartford, Conn., is devoted exclusively to the treatment of the sick and is arranged so that men and women are taken care of in separate departments and individual treatment rooms are provided for every patient. There are men attendants for men and women attendants for women, thereby assuring privacy and careful personal attention to everybody.

No matter how severe your illness or of how long standing, remember that many old, stubborn cases, often regarded incurable, have responded readily to Victor Methods as practiced by the Victor Health Office.

When you come for a consultation you will receive a painstaking physical examination, blood pressure and hemoglobinometer tests, chemical analysis and the fluoroscopic X-Ray examination.

DEAR DOCTOR:

After suffering for twelve years from stomach, liver and kidney trouble with high blood pressure accompanied by dizziness gas pressure about the heart, severe constipation and attacks of acute indigestion and growing steadily worse under treatment of a large number of the best physicians, finally received more benefit twelve treatments at the Victor Health Office than during all the twelve years of doctoring in the usual way. Today I am such a different person that I cannot find proper words in which to express my gratitude to you. WORKERS ALL

One with ledger, ink, and pen; one with sledge and stone;
Yet we are toilers, builders both, and neither toils alone.
One at desk and swivel-chair; one in the flaming mill;
And so our world roars on, and man works out his conquering will.

Plodding hoofs and gleaming share that cleaves the flagrant loam,
Until the ripening wheat fields blaze in floods of amber foam;
As far as the stars that sturdy toil seems from our city's towers,
And yet our work is one with that, and it is part of ours.

Here the hand that bares the ore or fells the towering pine;
There the brai nthat molds the whole in one close-knit design;
One the throttle's wise control; one the speeding gear;
And who can name them, great or small, since both are needed here?

Mill or office, field or mine, hill hush or city din.
Each in his separate way we go, yet each to the other kin;
Workers all! with a common prize to share at the set of sun—
A dream of the goodly world we build, and the joy of a task well done!

NEW LONDON HUSBAND ALLEGES WAR BRIDE WON'T LEAVE QUAKER CITY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 16.—John M. O'Neill, 248 Connecticut avenue, was arrested this afternoon by Sergeant John J. Cavanaugh on a warrant issued by the authorities of Philadelphia and charging O'Neill with desertion of his wife and failure to support her. He is being held in bail of $1,000 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow morning, at which time, it is believed, an officer will have arrived in New London to escort the prisoner back, as O'Neill has signified a willingness to return to Philadelphia without extradition papers being issued.

O'Neill, who is employed by William Redden, contractor, and who married during the World war, declares that his wife refuses to come to New London and reside, but insists upon living in Philadelphia. O'Neill states that he has work here, which compensates him well and that only today two registered letters containing money orders for the support of his wife were returned to him, because his wife refused to accept them.

Mrs. Caroline Angelas, a patient at Lawrence hospital, was able to return to her home, 2 West Pleasant street, today.

The funeral of Roy Joseph, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Lacey, was held this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock at the residence of the child's parents. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

James Telford was engaged all day yesterday in laying floor tiling at a Norwich bank, he said today when he was presented in the New London police court. The prosecutor represented the story of Jimmy as to the effect that the latter worked long and late, but such labor was necessary to complete the job he had tackled and he was willing to accommodate even at his personal fatigue. He worked all day and continued his labors into the night. To show appreciation of that act of accommodation James was presented a couple of quarts of whiskey and a box of cigars, according to the story he told. That was the undoing of James. He was found intoxicated here by Policeman Hill and taken into custody. Judge Prince imposed a fine of $5 and Telford promised the money to settle.

New London is to have a birthday anniversary on the sixth of May next, but it is very doubtful whether the city will celebrate the event in other way than by shaking hands with itself and perhaps congratulating itself that the taxpayers are not to have to pay a higher rate than 26 1-2 mills a couple of months after the natal day has passed.

There is a prospect of much work for mechanics in this city in the spring and summer months. Fire destroyed or damaged considerable property of late and to restore the buildings which the flames tackled will take the labors of many men, and require the use of much material.

An automobile, owned by Lewis E. Monroe, New London letter carrier, was stolen this afternoon and Monroe is of the belief that the machine was stolen by Robert Brown, of Waterford. The New London police were not informed of the theft of the machine until seven hours after it was stolen and with the state police, Groton barracks, made an endeavor to locate the car. Monroe left the machine, a Gardner touring car, in front of his home, in Waterford, shortly before 1 o'clock and a few minutes later he discovered the car missing. He instituted a search for the machine but failed to make known his loss until much valuable time had gone by.

About 9 o'clock while Patrolman Michael Dorsey was making his rounds through Montauk avenue, near Pequot, he saw a Gardner touring car standing beside the highway where it had been since the officer came on duty at 7 o'clock, and without lights being displayed. The officer communicated with the police station and gave the registration, which was that of the stolen machine. FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS STRONG

New York, April 16—Stock prices turned reactionary today on selling inspired largely by the easing tendency of the commodity markets, although independent strength was shown by the Maxwell, Willys Overland and Nash Motor issues, all of which attained new peak prices for the year. Trading was on a broader scale, the day's sales running in excess of 1,400,000 shares.

Standard industrials worked upward during the early part of the session, but turned heavy towards the close, when United States Cast Iron Pipe broke nearly 14 points to 155, or 56 points below the year's high. Selling of this issue followed reports that dividends on the common stock would not be considered before the June meeting and that current earnings were running below those of last year, due to the competition provided by French pipe manufacturers.

United States Steel common touched a new high on the movement at 117 7-8 and then dropped back to 116 3-4 for a net loss of more than one point on the day. American Can closed fractionally lower at 173 5-8 after having sold as high at 174. Baldwin receded from 114 3-4 to 113 1-4, off 1 1-4.

Net losses of 1 to 2 1-2 points also were recorded by American Sugar Refining, American Linseed preferred, Bethlehem Steel, Cuba Cane preferred, General Electric, General Petroleum, International Combustion Engineering, Jordan Motors, Moon Motors, Pacific Oil, Pan-American A and B, Punta Alegre Sugar, Republic Steel, Royal Dutch, Savage Arms, Woolworth and Wright Aeroplane.

Butte and Superior was instrumental down nearly four points to a new low record [illegible] reflection of the sharp depletion of its zinc ore reserve. Most of the coppers lost ground in reflection of the established [illegible] of a new low price for the year for the red metal at 12 3-8 cents a pound. American Smelting closed 1 7-8 lower at 94, recessions in most of the others being limited to fractions.

Extra improved substantially on the declaration of a dividend of 75 cents, a [illegible] since January, 1919, when [illegible]

Motor issues [illegible] day, transmission [illegible] and Willys Overland issues [illegible] providing one-fifth of the day's entire business. Maxwell was lifted to a new high record at 106 1-4 and then eased off to 105 on 1 7-8, while the B soared [illegible] Overland [illegible] and [illegible] new tops at 16 3-8 and 64 1-4, respectively. Nash closed 5 points higher at 361, also a new maximum.

Oil shares were sold freely on reports that the daily average of crude output increased over 82,000 barrels in the week ended April 11.

United States Realty soared six points to a new high record at 135 5-8 and Western Pipe touched a new top at 129 3-4. Independent strength also was shown by Radio Corporation, Virginia-Carolina Chemical preferred, Southern Railway, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Famous Players and Otis Elevator.

Call money held steady at 3 1-2 per cent. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

The foreign exchanges held relatively firm. Demand sterling sold around 4.78 1-4 and French francs were [illegible] quoted above 5.20 cents. [illegible] exchange advanced 12 points [illegible] cents. Japanese yen touched another 1925 high at 42 5-16 cents.

BOND MARKET

New York, April 16—Renewed institutional buying of investment securities stiffened the bond market today and prices worked into higher ground. The outstanding strong spots were the U. S. government issues, several of which established 1925 high records, the French obligations and Virginia-Carolina Chemical bonds.

Jimmy Skunk Has a Shock

Obey the lady of the house,
If chance it be she is your spouse.
—Jimmy Skunk.

Jimmy has learned by experience. There is no teacher like experience. So when Jimmy discovers that Mrs. Jimmy has made up her mind to a certain thing he doesn't argue. He knows that that would be just a waste of breath. So it came about that when Mrs. Jimmy told Jimmy that she had moved from their old home where they had spent the winter together, sharing it with several of their grown children, up to this new home under Farmer Brown's henhouse, Jimmy didn't try to get her to go back to the old home. It was a perfectly good home, was that old one. Jimmy was satisfied with it. But if Mrs. Jimmy had made up her mind to leave it, that was all there was to it.

"Well," said Jimmy, when he had recovered a bit from his surprise at discovering Mrs. Jimmy at the entrance to that hole under the henhouse, "I guess that perhaps you are right my dear, and we do need a change. Suppose you step aside so I can have a look in and see what our new home looks like.

"It's very cozy inside—at least it isn't dirty now. It is my new home," said Mrs. Jimmy.

"Do you m—m—m—mean you don't want to live here?" stuttered Jimmy in shocked surprise.

"Certainly," declared Mrs. Jimmy. "This is my home and I don't want to hear of it and away you go. I want you around, but you must have a home. Now do nicely for you along now and don't longer." Mrs. Jimmy ...appeared under the Jimmy stood rather foolishly at the ... had disappeared. It ... more than ... the whole thing was so unexpected, that he didn't stop to think. Besides, he did want to see what it was like under that henhouse. So Jimmy hung around. He didn't quite dare to venture inside, but he hoped Mrs. Jimmy would have a change of mind and invite him in.

But Mrs. Jimmy didn't, and at last D-d-d-do you mean that I am not to Jimmy slowly ambled away. He was first grieved and then he was angry. He would show Mrs. Jimmy that it didn't matter to him in the least if she didn't want him about. He would go off and have a good time and forget all about her. You see, Jimmy was very like some folks you and I know.

But by the time Jimmy got back to his old home the next morning he was his usual happy self. By that time he had remembered. He had remembered that something very like this had happened before, and so he had quite recovered from the shock. It was spring, and he hadn't a worry in the world. So he thought, anyway, until it popped into his head that if Farmer Brown should discover that Mrs. Jimmy was living under his henhouse there might be trouble for her.

"She ought to have known better than to dig under that henhouse," thought Jimmy. "Yes, sir, she ought to have known better. If anything happens to any of Farmer Brown's chickens she'll be blamed for it. If she had to have a new home I wish she had made it somewhere else. It is useless for me to say anything about it to her. She will have her own way. She always has had it and she always will have it." Jimmy sighed. Two minutes later he was fast asleep

THREE NAMES ON GERMAN PRESIDENTIAL BALLOT

Berlin, April 16—(By the A. P.)—Only three candidates will appear on the ballot for the presidential election which is to be held a week from next Sunday. They will be Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, candidate of the United Right; Dr. Wilhelm Marx, representative of the People's Bloc, and Ernst Thaelmann, nominee of the communist party. The nominations closed at midnight tonight.

Dr. Marx today delivered a speech at a banquet here. In part he said:

"The formula of, monarchy or republic, which unfortunately was coined in this election, has excited a conflict of emotions as to whether the election will or will not change the country's political and economic policies. Reforms on a large scale are imminent—economic reorganization, proper distribution of the Dawes plan obligations, financial reform and regulation of our economic relations with other countries.

"In such a situation conflict and dissension are still further intensified by exaggerated political viewpoints, instead of making a call for unity our watchword. The internal economic development of our country is dependent upon the outcome of the election. Powerful circles abroad would welcome the possibility of a change in Germany's policy as an effective means of agitation. Also there are mighty foreign business groups which are anxious to reawaken the barely quelled suspicion of a feared competition."

Dr. Marx concluded his address with a warning that Germany's domestic economy still requires foreign help on a large scale and that foreign cooperation cannot be avoided on the road to freedom.

The united right block in a proclamation issued denies an allegation that it is an organization of industrialists and capitalists.

"The candidacy of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg," says the proclamation, "is supported by non-party electors and a majority of the German people. We expect everyone to lend the utmost financial aid toward Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's election. We expect all who have means to forward appropriate contributions. Every pfennig given toward the election of our Hindenburg will be a further step toward the peaceful resurrection of our fatherland."

The directors of the New Haven Dairy company approved in substance the merger proposal now being considered by four large dairy and ice cream companies of Connecticut, Massachusetts and Vermont.

YALE EXPECTING BIG CLASS REUNIONS

New Haven, April 16—Yale university is looking forward to one of the most largely attended and most successful class reunions, in connection with commencement week in June, in recent years, according to the Yale Alumni Weekly. The class meeting held in New York recently is characterized as the first gun in this return to the old type of large attendance and enthusiasm which for the past few years have been dimmed by the world and war conditions.

One of the most interesting features of commencement week will continue to be absent this year, however, no plans having been made for the Tuesday evening campus gathering with its torchlight parades, blaring bands, old songs, football marches and the mob of costumed and hatless men. Of late years, the Weekly says, this celebration has become listless through too many counter attractions.

SUMMARY OF YESTERDAY'S EVENTS IN WASHINGTON

The nickel plate merger hearing was continued before the interstate commerce commission.

Treasury officials announced their conclusion that the country has too many denominations of money.

The commerce department issued a compilation showing foreign securities in increased amount were absorbed by the American market during the first quarter of 1925.

President Quezon of the Philippine senate protested to the war department against the sale of the Pacific Mail Company's ships to the dollar interests.

The Swiss and Polish ministers inquired whether President Coolidge would appoint chairman of commissions for arbitration of possible future disputes between the two countries.

Two salmon weighing six pounds each, caught in the Quinault river, Washington, by Quinalt Indians, were received by President Coolidge.

BOBSEIN WINS PRIZE FOR "FINISHING FACTS"

Joseph Bobsein of Norwich won the prize in the contest for the selection of a name for the United States Finishing Company's magazine which is published monthly at Providence. In connection with the award the current issue of the magazine says:

"Many of the 90 titles received by the editor showed such thought and originality that it was difficult for the judges to select one better than the rest, but Finishing Topics finally received the majority vote of the judges as being the one most suited to our paper. This title was submitted by Joseph Bobsein of Norwich, who is awarded the prize of $5.

"Joe has been with the Company seven years, during which time he has worked up to second hand in the aniline department. He has made some valuable suggestions along safety lines which have been carried out and has served as secretary of the Norwich safety committee for three years. He represents the ideal employe which is the backbone not only of The United States Finishing company but American industry as a whole."

Another paragraph in the issue of the magazine says: We take pleasure in announcing the addition of Peter Farrell of the Print Calendar department of Norwich to the staff of the paper. His cartoons always hit the mark and add a touch of humor to our pages.

FINISHING CO. PRESIDENT SEES PROMISE OF BETTER YEAR IN 1925

Indications of a better year in 1926 than in 1924, which he described as a "black letter" year for all the textile industry, were announced by President Henry B. Thompson of the United States Finishing Co., in the annual report he presented to the stockholders' meeting held here on Thursday afternoon in the directors' room at the Norwich Savings Society.

The stockholders present were:

Shares represented at the meeting numbered 87,140, consisting of 25,326 of preferred stock and 31,814 of common stock, amounting to 75 per cent. of the total outstanding stock of 76,000 shares, consisting of 36,000 preferred and 40,000 common.

Directors were elected as follows: John G. Bausher, New York; Edward A. Greene, Passaic, N. J., John P. Huntington, Norwich; William T. Joyce, Providence, R. I.; Andrew C. Imbrie, New York; Henry F. Lippitt, Providence, R. I.; Jesse H. Metcalf, Providence, R. I.; George S. Mumford, Boston, Mass.; Henry B. Thompson, New York; Herbert J. Wells, Providence, R. I.; Charles A. Wimpfheimer, New York.

The annual report to the stockholders was made by President Henry B. Thompson as follows for the year ending Dec. 31, 1924:

The year ending December 31, 1924, will live in the memory of all connected with the Textile Industry—Cotton, Silk or Wool—as a "Black Letter" year, and in many instances income accounts will show "red figures." The Cotton Industry, passing through a period of extreme depression, constant throughout the year, has not lived under such adverse conditions in several decades. The results, for our own Company, are, in degree, a reflex of the entire industry, showing largely decreased earnings. The contrast between the past year and 1923 will seem almost a disaster, if we had not the consolation of a comparison with some of our less fortunate competitors. The outlook for the coming year is better, and we have seen constantly improving conditions since October, 1924.

During this period of depression we have continued our policy of capital expenditure for plant additions where we could see prospective new business as the result of such expenditure. We have invested in plant additions $682,546.99. The principal items are the completion of our Cedartown, Georgia, plant, additions to Norwich Branch, the building of a filter plant at Silver Spring Branch, a large addition to our Pawtucket Branch for Cotton and Silk and Artificial Silk printing and dyeing, and the addition of tenements and overseers' houses in Sterling Village. Judging by present results, all of these expenditures seem justified.

Our Repair Account amounted to $698,872.55. While much smaller than previous years, repairs have been adequate and well maintained. This saving of expense is the result of careful management and of the efficient work done by the Repair Department during the past few years.

We are encouraged by the results of our experiment in establishing a southern plant at Cedartown, Georgia. While a relatively small unit, compared with our five Connecticut and Rhode Island plants, its earnings already demonstrate the wisdom of our investment in a new and growing textile field.

We have made no changes in our management personnel during the past year, and despite a year full of discouragement, the morale and teamplay on the part of those associated in the active work of the company have been altogether admirable.

In 1924 policies aggregating $1,595,500 were carried at the Company's expense in The Equitable Life Assurance Society upon the lives of 2,559 employes—an increase of 301 over the previous year. This means that 75 per cent of our employes are now protected by life insurance (compared with 66 per cent in 1923)—the remainder not yet having served the necessary year's probation.

Mutual Benefit Associations, organized and managed by the employes themselves, are now in operation at all of our Rhode Island plants, and have a total membership of 1,198. These associations not only administer sick benefits but foster an increasing variety of athletic and social activities. Mention should be made of the summer outing at our Sterling, Connecticut, plant on July 18, 1924, attended by employes of our New England plants and their families—about 6,000 persons in all; an event in the annals of Sterling Village with its normal population of 800.

Our Safety Committees have exerted increased influence in preventing accidents and in urging prompt attention to seemingly minor injuries so that the number of "lost time" accidents has been reduced to an encouraging degree. The record of our Norwich Branch is conspicuously good.

Our five First Aid Stations, with trained nurses in charge, received in 1924 over 26,000 calls for treatment or medical advice, compared, for example, with only about 8,000 in 1921.

Arrangements were made toward the end of the year 1924 for the publication monthly of a company paper to be distributed to our 3,400 employes. The first number of "Finishing Facts" appeared in January, 1925. Its expressed purpose is "to further the spirit of friendship and co-operation among the employes of The United States Finishing Company."

Through approved employment methods increased care has been exercised in the selection, recording, instruction and training of employes, so that our labor-turnover has been substantially reduced during the year. We believe that such methods have contributed wisely to the stability and contentment of our working force.

Dividends: Four regular quarterly dividends of 2 per cent each on the Preferred Stock, amounting to $252,000, were declared; four regular quarterly dividends of 2 per cetn each on the Common Stock, amounting to $320,000, were declared; or a total of $572,000.

PATROL LEADERS RECEIVE TRAINING COURSE LESSONS

The second meeting of the patrol leaders training course was held on Thursday night at Scout headquarters, Shannon building with a large attendance. Nearly every troop in town was represented, assistant scout masters, senior patrol leaders, patrol leaders, and assistant patrol leaders being in attendance. A typical scout meeting consisting of three patrols was conducted by the scout executive acting as scout master, Edward Preston, senior patrol leader, Tom Baldwin, Earl Simineau and Irving Manning, patrol leaders, and Robert Schmidt, scribe. Patrol contests in knot tying and various work were held. Drill and presentation of colors followed. Practice of scout songs took up a considerable part of the time and troop yells were heard. After the troop meeting the scouts adjourned to the Y. M. H. A. hall and put in an hour in learning new and lively games, such as charity race, lock arm tag, snatch the hat and crows and cranes.

The next session of the course will be held Thursday, April 23. An interesting and instructive programme is anticipated for this meeting and a banquet will follow, for which weekly dues are collected. A certificate will be awarded to all successfully finishing the course.

SEEKS DIVORCE FROM HUSBAND IN ATLANTA

On the ground that her husband, Adelard Blanchard, was sentenced, on March 18, 1924 in the U. S. district court of Connecticut to imprisonment for not less than two years in the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga. Matilda Daze Blanchard of Norwich has brought suit for divorce from him. Blanchard was sentenced on an indictment alleging violations of the Mann act, which were crimes involving violations of the conjural duty, punishable by imprisonment in the state prison. The couple were married April 10, 1923. The wife asks that her name be changed to Matilda Daze. The suit is returnable to the superior court in May.

CONGRESSMAN FREEMAN TO TAKE TRIP ABROAD

Congressman Freeman of New London, recently returned to Washington from Panama, now plans to spend the summer abroad. If his present plans materialize, he and Mrs. Freeman will sail for France about the first of July. The Freemans left Washington Wednesday and, as the congressman's wife also is his secretary, his office will be closed until the December session of congress. Mr. Freeman's office has been moved. He was formerly on the north side of the house office building on the third floor. Now he has gone up one flight on the west side of the building and has taken the offices left vacant when Congressman Calvin D. Page of Southbridge retired from congress last month at the age of 76.

On the road to prosperity are numerous unsafe bridges.

LIONS VOTE PRIZE FOR BOYS' WEEK GAMES

Plans for Boys' Week in Norwich were described to the Lions club meeting at the Wauregan hotel Thursday at noon by Rotarian James L. Case and the Lions voted to donate a prize for the Olympic games programme, which will be held on the last day, Wednesday, April 29.

Max Hanover made announcement of the concert to be given Sunday afternoon at the Palace theatre by Mischa Elman, the world's greatest violin virtuose, who is coming here under the auspices of the Norwich Hebrew Institute. It is an unusual musical opportunity for Norwich, said Mr. Hanover, and it is anticipated the audience will fill the theatre, which is donated by the management for this event.

Speaks on Community Booster.

J. B. Caron introduced Charles W. Frink as the current topics speaker for the day, who gave an earnest talk upon "A Community Booster."

Mr. Frink spoke as follows:

Boosting, like charity, begins at home. Before you go out and praise your own community, you must really believe the things you are saying. So he who would benefit his neighborhood is the one who uses his boosting every day, at home, instead of saving it for special occasions. The true booster is the one, who, every day, in every way, tries to make this community better and better. Don't forget that knocking, in an individual, is just as much evidence of lack of power as it is in an automobile. If you lack the power to remedy the defects in your neighborhood, keep still. There is always room for constructive criticism, but never for the destructive variety. The real benefactor is the citizen, man, woman or child, who is continually striving to better his neighborhood.

The boy or girl who is busily engaged in trying to persuade his companions to go to Sunday school and church is a far better citizen than the preacher who stands there in the pulpit, predicting that the entire community is headed for perdition if it does not mend its ways. There he stops. He is a destructive critic. He must get out and actively combat the evils he hints at, if he wishes to be a member of the small band of true boosters.

The true booster knows that next to the church, the school is the most important institution in the community. There the citizens of tomorrow are receiving the training that is to fit them for the problems that will confront them. He knows that the better educated the community the greater its future. So he is continually interested in school affairs, even though he may have no children of his own. It is to his advantage to have the most efficient teachers, the best buildings, that the community can afford. He vigorously supports the school in every measure that his conscience tells him is wise.

He is vitally interested in the youth, because he knows that they are the men and women of the next generation, and the forebears of untold generations to come. He does everything in his power to improve their moral surroundings. His name is on th elist when donations are asked for playgrounds and athletic equipment. He is interested in the Boy Scouts of the community, and ready to assist them with his services or money because they discourage rodyism, discourtesy and ill breeding, and teach manliness, self-reliance, and kindness to man and beast.

It is the duty also of every good citizen to exercise the right of suffrage intelligently. By intelligently, I mean according to the dictates of conscience and not because of party affiliations or for personal gain. Most of the people you hear complaining about the administration of civic affairs are those who were "too busy" to vote at the last election. The good citizen is ever ready to sacrifice his personal affairs for the welfare of his fellows. He has no glib excuse when called for jury duty, and serves upon committees when asked. He accepts public office if the people demand it and he feels qualified.

He strives to succeed in his own business because any successful business is a benefit to the people and he does not forget that he owes his prosperity to the community. He is thrifty but not miserly. He must be tolerant, too. He has his opinions, but he realizes that others are entitled to theirs, and is willing to see their side of the question.

Prejudice, whether racial or religious, has no place in his creed; he realizes that it takes all kinds of people to make a world, and that others are as entitled to their place in it as he is to his. Prejudice means hate and hate is war—whether it be personal or national. National peace is impossible as long as the individuals that make up a nation hate the race or creed of another nation.

This is my ideal of a true booster, one who tries to improve his community and influence his associates by his own example, so that the rising generation will be better than their fathers, morally, educationally and physically. Such a man cannot help being a credit to the people among whom he lives, no matter what stratum of society he may occupy.

A rising vote of thanks was given by the club to the various speakers and entertainment committee.

Attendance Contest Prize.

The attendance contest prize, an attractive automobile clock, donated by Lion Rudolph Henschel, was awarded to Dr. Thompson and Chairman J. B. Caron of the entertainment committee for this month announced that next week's meeting would be almost entirely a musical programme which is being arranged by Lion Koppie Markoff with William E. Prisbie for the current topic speaker and George Cramer as song leader for the day.

The gathering closed with the singing of The Star Sangled Banner and opened with America.

CHILDREN GET WOODCHUCK FROM MONTVILLE TREE

Montville children, Elwood Sharpe, aged seven, and his sister, Beatrice, eight, went out the other day and had with them their dog, Carlo. They walked in the woods and soon Carlo barked up a tree. The youngsters hurried to the tree, and, perched on a limb, saw a woodchuck. Elwood climbed up the tree, his sister handed him a stick and soon he poked the woodchuck off and the animal had no sooner struck the ground than Carlo killed him and the two children took their game and started for him.

Master Elwood thinks they can raise some beans on the farm this summer, as this is the second woodchuck captured. The children are grandchildren of W. G. Sharpe, well known coon hunter, of East Lyme.

GERALDINE FARRAR WINS ACCLAIM IN ROLE OF CARMEN

(Special to The Bulletin)

Willimantic, April 16.—Geraldine Farrar, famous actress-singer, played and sang to a charmed audience, which crowded the Gem theatre here Thursday night. Her appearance and the contrasts in her music-drama of Carmen evoked salvos of applause from the delighted house. Her Carmen Fantasy of three acts presented against the foil of black and gold hangings of satin, appealed to ear and eye, accentuating the artistic beauty of Carmen.

Her triumph here was unquestioned. She is at the height of vocal form and there seems to be a richer and firmer texture to the depth of her voice. To those who have heard her before she seemed improved as she depicted the passionate, pleasure-loving and fickle gypsy, in her novel interpretation of Merimee's conception of Carmen. Her costumes, many of which are of her own design were magnificent.

Manager John R. Pickett of the theater was complimented on all sides as the audience left the theatre at the conclusion of the drama, for his efforts and success in securing Miss Farrar and her operatic fantasie for the local play house.

BURNING OF A COUCH CALLS OUT DEPARTMENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

Westerly, R. I., April 16.—Three pieces of apparatus of the Westerly fire department responded shortly before 7 o'clock, Thursday night to a call from Box 75, corner of Dayton and Pierce streets. The fire was at the home of John Terranova, in a lane north of Pierce street. A pouch had caught fire in some unknown way and was thrown out into the street where it burned up before the contents of a fire extinguisher was turned upon it. The flames from the front room ignited the mattresses on two beds in a bed room adjoining, but these were torn apart and the contents thrown out the window. A small garden hose was used to keep the flames down before the firemen arrived. The damage was not great.

Why Millions of Mothers Now Rely Upon Vicks

An "Outside" Treatment Bringing Quick Relief for Colds and Croup Without Internal Dosing

Modern mothers know that too much dosing is harmful to a child's delicate stomach.

Vicks comes in salve form and is applied externally—can be freely used without the slightest harmful effect.

For croup and children's colds you just rub Vicks over throat and chest and cover with a warm flannel cloth. The ingredients — Menthol, Camphor, Eucalyptus, Thyme and Turpentine — are released as vapors by the body heat and inhaled with every breath all night long. At the same time Vicks is absorbed through and stimulates the skin like a poultice or plaster.

Colds go overnight, croup is generally relieved within 15 minutes.

$9,744,899.94 SUIT FILED BY THE BETHLEHEM CORP

Against the U. S. Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation—Claims That Amount as Balances Due on Account of Construction of 86 Vessels During and Just After the War—Government Has Filed Suit for $11,000,000 Against the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation For Alleged Overpayments.

New York, April 17.—Suit for $9,744,899.94 was filed here today by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding corporation against the United States shipping board emergency fleet corporation, claiming that amount as balances due on account of construction of 86 vessels during and just after the war.

The filing of the complaint in this suit in the United States district court here was simultaneous with the government's filing of a suit for approximately $11,000,000 against the Bethlehem Shipbuilding corporation and subsidiaries in Philadelphia, in accordance with an agreement by opposing counsel. Summons in the Bethlehem company's suit had been filed in the state courts last May, but action is now transferred to the United States court.

Both Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of directors of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and the Bethlehem Shipbuilding corporation, and Eugene G. Grace, president of the former concern, issued statements today in denial of the charge made in the government's suit at Philadelphia that Mr. Schwab as director general of the emergency fleet corporation from April 16 to December 13, 1918, misused his powers in favor of his own companies. Mr. Grace pointed out that Mr. Schwab had accepted that post at the "urgent solicitation" of President Wilson and the shipping board "at a time of serious national crisis," and that he became director general of the emergency fleet corporation "upon the express understanding, reduced to writing, that he would have nothing whatever to do with the relations between the fleet corporation and the Bethlehem interests."

"Mr. Schwab faithfully carried out this arrangement," Mr. Grace stated.

Mr. Schwab issued the following statement:

"I have nothing to add to Mr. Grace's statement beyond giving out my letter to the government's emergency fleet corporation stating the understanding with President Wilson under which I took office. Those connected with the shipping board and the emergency fleet corporation know that I zealously observed the arrangement that I would keep hands off relations between the fleet corporation and Bethlehem. The charge now made that despite this understanding I should have affirmatively interfered in the relations with Bethlehem speaks for itself."

Mr. Schwab also published his letter written to the president and trustees of the emergency fleet corporation April 8, 1918, in which he listed 13 corporations in which he was interested and requested that all business between the fleet corporation and these companies be handled "entirely by such other officers or agents of the emergency fleet corporation" as the trustees might designate. A later resolution of the trustees accepted this arrangement.

The complaint in the Bethlehem Shipbuilding corporation's suit against the Emergency Fleet corporation makes a volume of 311 pages, listing 349 causes of action and exhibiting 33 contracts for ship construction on which the Bethlehem corporation's suit is based. The shipbuilding corporation alleges that it has not been paid the full amount due on any of these contracts, claims items ranging downward from the $1,635,000 alleged due on the cpstruction of six troopships built at Sparrow's Point, Md., contracted for in June, 1918.

The majority of the contracts in controversy are known as "fixed fee plus percentage of savings contracts," under which the builder was to receive the cost of the ship, plus a fixed fee, plus a percentage of any savings effected in the actual cost below the estimated cost of each ship, specified in the contract. The percentage of savings item is the principal point of contention.

Mr. Grace's statement said that the Bethlehem company in its construction of 86 ships for the government, effected savings of about $30,000 below estimated costs. He asserted that as far as he know no other shipbuilder succeeded in making substantial savings in this respect, hence this point had not arisen in payments on any other emergency fleet contracts.

Paul D. Cravath is chief counsel for the Bethlehem Shipbuilding corporation in its suit.

Bainbridge Colby, former secretary of state and vice president and trustee of the Emergency Fleet Corporation at the time Mr. Schwab became director general, today recalled the interview between President Wilson and Mr. Schwab in which the latter accepted the post in the Emergency Fleet Corporation.

During the entire period of his connection with the fleet corporation, Mr. Schwab scrupulously abstained from any participation in any matter affecting his companies with which the government was in the least concerned," said Mr. Colby. "There was no concealment at any time. The contracts out of which the present suits arose were urged by himself in the preliminary discussions as a possible disqualification. We brushed this consideration aside. The country needed Mr. Schwab and we reposed a trust in him which was always completely vindicated."

GOVERNMENT SUIT IS FOR UPWARDS OF $11,000,000

Philadelphia, April 17—The federal government in a suit filed against the Bethlehem Steel interests to recover "upwards of $11,000,000" alleged to have been distributed in overpayments on war contracts, averred that the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation Ltd., insisted upon contracts from which it was enabled to "derive excessive unreasonable and unconscionable profits."

The suit was instituted in the United States district court and besides the shipbuilding concerns the defendants are the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, Bethlehem Steel company, Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation of Massachusetts, and the Union Iron Works company of San Francisco, all dominated by Charles M. Schwab.

The amount claimed is alleged excess above the ten per cent profit allowed by the government on ship construction during the world war.

The bill of complaint pointed out that Schwab, at the time the Bethlehem concerns were working on war contracts, was appointed by the president of the United States, director general of the Emergency Fleet Corporation with authority to make new contracts for shipbuilding and to modify all existing contracts.

The complaint charged that when the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation bid for contarcts, its representatives told the government it was impracticable to estimate the actual cost of constructing ships and proposed that the work be done on a cost plus basis with a statement from the contractor of the "probable cost" of building a ship, and with a proviso that the builder was to receive one-half of any saving to the government below the estimated cost.

"Complaint avers," the bill charges, "that said representations were knowingly false in that the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Ltd., was in a position to know what would be the approximate cost of constructing vessels" and the amount stated in contracts were known by the representatives of the corporation to be very greatlyin excess of any costs which could reasonably be anticipated, based upon the wage scale then in effect and the existing costs of material.

The government also charged that while Schwab forced other shipbuilders to limit their efforts to ten per cent on ship construction and forced several to return excess profits, he took no action to have the Bethlehem companies adhere to the same rule of profits.

PRESIDENT DOUMERGUE TALKS TO WELLESLEY DELEGATION

Paris, April 17—President Doumergue today told a delegation from Wellesley college that he hopes when his term of office is completed to visit the United States. He promised, in that event, certainly to visit Wellesley because its sole honorary degree in fifty years history was bestowed upon a French woman, Madam Curie.

During his talk to the visitors, President Doumergue remarked: "I am now learning English, just as your ambassador, Mr. Herrick, is learning French." The delegation, representing trustees and graduates of Wellesley, was presented by Ambassador Herrick and thanked by President Doumergue for the aid Wellesley gave France during and since the war.

The president referred to the fact that General Pershing's wife was a Wellesley girl and recalled that subscriptio s from that college furnished the first ambulance sent to France from America during the war.

He presented to the delegation busts of Washington and Franklin which were made by the famous sculptor, Jean Antoine Houdin, and reproduced by the Sevres National manufactory. These will be sent to Wellesley together with an autographed photograph of President Doumergue for exhibition during the college's fiftieth anniversary.

General Gourand, military governor of Paris, and Jules Jusserand, former ambassador to the United States, attended tea given by President Doumergue to the Wellesley party. Former Premier Clemenceau was unable to be present but sent to Mrs. William Morton Wheeler, one of the delegation, and president of the French-American committee of Boston, pa autographed collection of his works.

INTERNATIONAL UNION OF AMATEURS OF THE RADIO

Paris, April 17—The first world congress of "listeners in" today reached the point of perfecting an organization to be called the "International Union of Amateurs of the Radio." Headquarters, it was decided, will be in the offices of the American Radio Relay league, at Hartford Conn.

At the same time an international committee of professional radio operators recommend action by governments and interested organizations to extend a radio transmission protection of author's rights in artistic and literary products.

The committee adopted a resolution recommending that radio stations be forbidden to reproduce literary and artistic productions without the author's consent.

These meetings were part of the international radio congress, which assembled here Tuesday in two sections, amateurs and professionals. About 230 radio operators were present representing more than 20 countries. Among the American representatives are H. P. Maxim, of Hartford, Conn., president of the American Radio Relay league; H. B. Warren, secretary of the league; James A. Morris, of Atlanta, Ga.; G. L. Hight, of Rome, Ga., and Lloyd Jacquet, of New York, editor of Amateur Radio.

POLICE PUT BAN ON THE HARVARD LAMPOON

Cambridge, Mass., April 17—The police of Cambridge and Boston ordered the removal of the Harvard Lampoon, monthly humorist college publication, from news stands throughout the two cities because of alleged improper pictures appearing in the current issue. Book stores and news stands were visited and copies seized. Dealers were notified that if more copies were displayed or sold prosecution would follow.

The issue is a burlesque of a weekly news magazine. Objection was raised to two different features—the cover design, a burlesque picture of Washington crossing the Deawlare, and the picture of a woman on an inside page. The use of the American flag on the cover was regarded as iNegal. The picture within, said to be a burlesque of a well-known painting, was said by the police to be in violation of the law relating to indecent pictures.

The police said tonight that the editors of the magazine had readily agreed to withdraw the issue from circulation when their attention was called to the alleged illegal illustrations.

It was considered improbable that prosecution would result. Although previous issues of the Lampoon have been withdrawn from circulation in the 49 years of its existence by editors and by order of the faculty, this was the first time action ever has been taken by the police.

Under the picture of Washington crossing the Delaware is the inscription, "Sit down, you're rocking the boat." Soldiers in the craft are variously engaged in feeding sugar to a polar bear, smoking and reading a burlesque copy of a Boston newspaper, shoving a boat hook into a shark's mouth, salvaging a bottle from the river while another is about to hurl a snow-ball.

The figure of Washington is drawn in a Napoleonic pose with a hatchet in one hand. The flag is held by one of the soldiers.

HARTFORD GIRL ARRESTED FOR RECKLESS DRIVING

Meriden, April 17.—A girl and a sedan bested Judge Thomas P. Dunn of the local city court and a telephone pole in a spectacular auto crash on North Colony street tonight.

Miss Grace Sloan, 20 years old, of 231 Palm street, Hartford, driver of the machine was arrested for reckless driving after the crash. She posted a $31 cash bond, all she had, to insure appearance in police court tomorrow morning, at which time Judge Dunn announced he will step down from the bench to take the witness stand while Deputy Judge Alfred B. Aubrey presides.

Judge Dunn said that Miss Sloan was driving about fifty miles an hour, and that before she struck his car a glancing blow she locked her brakes for 40 feet. The front of the judge's machine was badly damaged, but the car driven by the Hartford girl kept on, being stopped ten feet away by a telephone pole, which was split in two.

The only other occupant of Miss Sloan's car was an infant in the rear seat. No one was hurt.

Opening Of Trial Of Senator Wheeler

Government Introduced Piles of Documents and Two Witnesses.

Great Falls, Mont., April 17.—(By The A. P.)—Senator Burton K. Wheeler closed peacefully today while the government introduced piles of documents and the evidence of two witnesses in his trial, in its attempt to prove he accepted a fee after being elected senator for prosecuting claims of a client before the department of the interior. It was a dull session throughout and a cloudy day added to the inclination of spectators to take occasional naps.

Only two witnesses were heard, Louis E. Lincoln and John Copar, both of Lewiston, Mont.

Lincoln testified that he filed an application with the interior department for an oil prospecting permit at the request of Gordon Campbell, Montana oil operator, for whom Wheeler is alleged to have appeared before the interior department.

Lincoln said he assigned the permit to the California company, and was to receive a two and one-half per cent. royalty on all oil produced from the claim.

"Did you receive $266,000 for the permit?" demanded Federal District Attorney John L. Slattery.

"We object to that as immaterial," interposed Senator Thomas J. Walsh, chief of defense counsel, and he was sustained.

Cooper testified that he was present at a meeting in a Great Falls hotel in January, 1923, when Campbell, former Congressman Tom Stout of Montana, Wheeler and L. G. Wertheimer, a salesman, were discussing Wheeler's employment by Campbell.

"Did you hear Wertheimer say in effect that Senator Wheeler was there and that everything was all right?" Mr. Slattery asked.

Senator Walsh's objection was overruled, but Cooper was unable to recall hearing anything of the kind.

Under cross examination Cooper stated he never heard Wheeler say he would represent Campbell before the interior department.

The greater part of the afternoon session was taken up with the introduction of documents by which the government expects to trace various oil prospecting permits that were granted originally to individuals and later into Campbell's possession. The government charges that it was by Wheeler's influence before the interior department that Campbell was able to accumulate many permits and dominate the North Oil field of Montana.

There will be a short session of court tomorrow morning.

Seantor Walsh said today that Peter Nyce, Washington attorney, would not testify that he had been approached by Wheeler and asked to appear in Wheeler's place before the interior department to prosecute oil prospecting claims sought by Campbell. Nyce has been subpoenaed as a government witness.

The announcement was made after Senator Walsh received telegrams from Nyce's law partner, George E. Chamberlain, denying that Nyce would make such a statement on the witness stand.

Mr. Slattery in his opening statement yesterday said he would produce a surprise witness, a lawyer, who would give such testimony.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

Tales about it were as numerous as its dark, broken windows. Oaks shadowed it thickly; winds sucked through its halls. The shutters sagged and were ivy-enten—the windows giving in to an emptiness at once forboding, dreadful.

Excitement ran agog when the place was bought. School children huddled to watch the rooms renovated. A sign swung out: "Stop here for tea." Lights sprang up. It became a frequent pleasure to drop in for evenings. In time the townspeople loved the place. The inviting sign, the cleanliness, the light banished fear.

Bishop Manning Has Disciplined Dr. Brown

Former P. E. Bishop of Kansas Forbidden to Officiate in New York Diocese.

New York, April 17—Bishop William T. Manning, tonight forbade Dr. William Montgomery Brown, former Protestant Episcopal bishop of Arkansas, from officiating or speaking in any parish or mission of the New York diocese.

In another letter to Dr. W. N. Guthrie, rector of St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, Bishop Manning said that Dr. Guthrie's invitation to Bishop Brown to speak in St. Mark's next Sunday was in "open contempt and defiance of the authority and law of the church."

Bishop Brown was found guilty of heresy last year by a trial court of the Protestant Episcopal church. Later a court of review affirmed this judgment and ordered him "deposed from the ministry of this church."

Bishop Manning, as bishop of the New York diocese, announced that Bishop Brown "inhibited from officiating or speaking in St. Mark's parish or any other parish or mission in this diocese." Bishop Manning said such right was granted him by a canon of the church allowing the bishop to inhibit a minister coming into the diocese "under the imputation of having elsewhere been guilty of any of the offenses" within the heresy code.

In his letter to Dr. Guthrie, Bishop Manning reminded him that St. Marks had been deprived of Episcopal visitation or ministration on March 26, 1924, because of the eurythmical dancing rites performed there, and that under the canons of the church no bishop could exercise his office at St. Marks without Bishop Manning's consent.

"Your action, therefore, in inviting Bishop Brown to officiate in your parish," Bishop Manning wrote, "is in open contempt and defiance of the authority and law of the church of which you are a minister; and therefore, acting under the law of the church and by the authority vested in me as bishop of this diocese, I hereby forbid you to allow Bishop Brown to officiate or speak in St. Mark's church next Sunday or at any time without my permission."

Bishop Manning warned Dr. Guthrie that if the latter proceeded "in defiance" to allow Bishop Brown to speak, such action would be a "direct violation of the constitution and canons of the church and will be regarded as conduct unbecoming a clergyman."

PHOTOGRAPHS OF RUM ROW TAKEN FROM DIRIGIBLE

Washington, April 17—Secretary Wilbur today threw a screen of secrecy about the operations of the airship Los Angeles yesterday in visiting and photographing Rum Row.

He refused flatly to discuss the subject after other officials had professed ignorance of it.

The secretary said, however, that he might say something after receipt of an official report on the cruise. During the day he conferred with Rear Admiral Moffet, chief of naval aviation.

All questions as to whether the navy was assisting in this way in enforcing the prohibition act were parried by Mr. Wilbur.

Likewise, questions as to the authority for the photographing, the source of any requests for it, and inquiries concerning navy department policy in the matter were met with the incident at this time. It was added that the photographs had not been received.

DEFENDING SALE OF SHIPS TO DOLLAR LINE

Washington, April 17—The sale of the California-Orient line steamships to the Dollar interests, as authorized by majority vote of the shipping board, was defended in the District of Columbia supreme court through the filing of a voluminous statement contending it was made with due consideration of the law, of good business practices and the interests of the United States.

The action was preliminary to the hearing set for next Monday on the question of making permanent the temporary injunction staying the sale which has been obtained by the Pacific Mail Steamship company, which has been operating the five vessels involved for the board.

The plan was said to be similar to that used by machinists in Norfolk, Va., several years ago.

But the figure is likely to be added to, as many of the injured are in a critical condition.

Hospitals and clinics are crowded with the injured, some of them so badly hurt as to be almost unrecognizable. It has been found impossible to identify some of the dead, and these have been placed in a mortuary chapel.

With the exception of Minister of Interior Roussef, all the members of the cabinet, who were present at the funeral services, escaped with slight injuries. They owe their lives to the fact that the infernal machine was concealed in the roof, near the side of the cathedral, while they and the other prominent personages were assembled around the catafalque in the center of the edifice.

Among the identified dead are the Mayor of Sofia, M. Paskalef, former Minister of War General Davidof, Prefect of Police Kisso, M. Medelechef, Prefect of the Department in which Sofia is situated, and Deputies Colonchef, Ratchef and Lekarski.

It is the assumption of the police that the Agraro-Communists, to whom the authorities attribute the outrage, in assassinating General Georghieff, counted upon the assembling at the funeral of all the prominent persons attached to the existing regime, thus affording an opportunity for wiping them all out at one time.

They counted on the confusion in which the kingdom would be plunged, according to the police, to facilitate the installation of a Soviet regime in line with the terrorist plan of campaign prepared by the Communists and emissaries of the Third International, recently discovered by the police, and under which the revolution was to break out on April 15.

In pursuance of their campaign, in which the cathedral bombing was the culminating outrage, the authorities declare that the Communists within a brief period assassinated 41 police officers and men, and 120 mayors, priests and schoolmaster. Only last night unknown persons killed the chief of the penitentiary department in front of a cafe.

Since the cathedral was bombed the police have redoubled their activity, and they have already arrested several suspects. Martial law has been proclaimed throughout the country, no one being allowed to move from one place to another without permission from the authorities. Owing to these and other drastic measures to maintain order, there has been no panic. Sofia is quiet, and despatches from the provinces report that calm reigns everywhere.

BRITISH DIRIGIBLE R-33 BROUGHT HOME TO HANGAR

Pulham, England, April 17.—(By The A. P.)—The broken-nosed British dirigible R-33 was brought home to her hangar here this afternoon, after battling for thirty hours over the North Sea against a gale that tore her away from her mooring mast early Thursday morning.

Twenty Britons who brought the errant airship safely to earth were the nation's newest heroes tonight, in the minds of everyone except themselves. To a man they looked upon their victorious battle with the elements as just another part of their jobs. All of them refused to talk about their exploit in taming and bringing back to earth the runaway sister of the celebrated R-34, the airship to cross the Atlantic.

It was from the very spot where the R-33 was brought down in a business-like manner this afternoon that the R-34 rose on her epocal voyage across the Atlantic and back. Major Scott, who guided the R-34 to the United States, was the first man this afternoon to grasp the hand of Pulham's newest hero, Flight Lieutenant Ralph Sleigh Booth, who commanded the R-33 on her unexpected voyage, which began so badly and ended so happily.

LOS ANGELES TO BE AT LEXINGTON MONDAY

Washington, April 17—The dirigible Los Angeles was authorized today to proceed to Lexington, Mass., after her trip to Bermuda, to be present during the exercise Monday commemorating the opening battle of the American Revolution.

The commander of the Los Angeles will determine whether the craft will proceed to Massachusetts from Bermuda by way of Lakehurst, N. J., her home station, or go direct. In either event it is expected that she will pass over Boston on the flight and remain a short time over Lexington during the ceremonies.

The trip will present no additional difficulties, it is explained, as the Los Angeles under ordinary conditions can make Bermuda from Lakehurst in ten or twelve hours and at Bermuda will moor to the mast of the tender Patoka, which has ample fuel supplies aboard.

Decision to send the dirigible to the Massachusetts celebration was made on request of Governor Fuller of that state, after a consultation between Secretary Wilbur, Admiral Eberle, chief of naval operations, and naval air officers. It is understood to have the endorsement of President Coolidge.

Gotthelf Pach.

New York, April 17.—Gotthelf Pach, a pioneer in photography, who opened his first shop more than half a century ago with the financial backing of Ulysess S. Grant, before he became president, died in his sleep today at his West 95th street home.

Pach Brothers, the studio name, held a 58-year record of being the first to photograph every president in the White House, following inauguration. They were "official photographers" for the late Theodore Roosevelt and they were the only photographers who ever took a picture of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, with his permission. They were photographers for families of such social standing as the Astors and the Vanderbilts.

INQUEST ON DEATH OF MISS MADGE OBERHOLTZER

Indianapolis, April 17.—Taking of testimony was completed today at the inquest held by County Coroner Dr. Paul F. Robinson, to determine the cause of the death of Miss Madge Oberholtzer, 28, who in an ante-mortem statement accused D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan, of attacking her.

As the coroner's inquest was being brought to a close local officials started an investigation of a mysterious fire which caused $2,000 damage early today to Stephenson's home in Irgington, a suburb. Several receptacles ranging in size from one to twenty gallons, and all containing a mixture of gasoline and oil, were found in the home.

The Marion county grand jury recently returned five indictments against Stephenson in connection with the alleged attack on Miss Oberholtzer. Court attaches indicated new indictments might be returned as the result of investigations made since Miss Oberholtzer's death last Tuesday.

The inquest was concluded with the testimony of George Oberholtzer, father of Miss Oberholtzer, who declared his daughter quoted Stephenson as saying he had no fear of the consequences of the alleged attack and making the boast that "my word is law in Indiana."

Testimony of physicians given at the inquest has been to the effect that the young woman's body contained the poison which she told her parents she took at Hammond, Ind., following Stephenson's alleged attack.

Miss Beatrice Spratley, registered nurse, who attended Miss Oberholtzer described body bruises and lacerations which Miss Oberholtzer alleged were inflicted by Stephenson.

Dr. Robinson indicated he would return a formal verdict early next week.

DECIDED BODY WAS NOT THAT OF HER HUSBAND

Middletown April 17—Mrs. Sven Olson, of Detroit, Mich., who came here tonight with her sister, Mrs. Carl Johnson, of Hartford, decided, after an examination that the body of a man found in the Connecticut river here Saturday was not her husband. Olson was drowned on November 18, 1922, when he fell from a motorboat at Hartford.

Mrs. Olson came east after she had received parts of the clothing taken from the body and which Mrs. Johnson believed were those worn by her brother-in-law at the time of his death. An examination of the man's teeth proved, however, that the body found was not that of Olson. Coroner L. M. Smith had a dentist examine the teeth of the dead man and the doctor said that the man was at least 40 years old. Olson at the time of his death was 28 years old.

Authorities here had doubted that the body found was that of Olson as the clothing was well preserved and indicated that the body had not been in the water more than two years.

Coroner Smith tonight ordered burial of the body and will continue his search for relatives.

MRS. WM. BUTTS WAS VERY SICK

Gives Full Credit to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for Remarkable Recovery

Wellston, O. — "I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to make me strong. I was troubled with my back and sides hurting me till I could not do my work, and whenever I caught cold it made me irregular. Since I have taken the Vegetable Compound my sides and back don't bother me and I can do my housework and care for my children now, where before I did not feel like doing anything or going around. After my first child was born about four years ago I saw an advertisement in the paper about the Vegetable Compound. I knew it would help me, but I was afraid to try it because people said it would help you to have children and I knew I was having children fast enough. But I thought if it would help me it would be better to have a whole house full of children and have good health. I became stronger from taking it and my husband says I look like a live woman instead of a dead one. When Spring comes I am going to take your Blood Medicine as I am very thin. I will answer letters from any woman who wishes to ask about your medicine." — Mrs. WILLIAM BUTTS, Wellston, Ohio.

GOVERNOR PETERS WORKED ON OLD HORTON FARM

Willimantic, April 17—Clifford D. Cheney, of South Manchester, has purchased the Horton farm in Gilead (Hebron) from the estate of William H. Horton, in whose family it had been for more than one hundred and fifty years. It consists of over one hundred acres with house and farm buildings. It was on this farm that John S. Peters, afterwards governor of the state of Connecticut, worked as a small boy for his board and keep, when his father, an ardent Tory, fled to Canada during the Revolutionary War, leaving his wife and five year old son. Concerning his life at this time, Governor Peters has written in his memoirs: "I remained with my mother until I was seven years old. Then I went into the family of Joel Horton to tend children and do boys' work until I was fourteen years old. I then worked on farms in the summer and attended school in the winter until I was fourteen years old. I then commenced instructing a district school which I continued for five winters."

Elman's Rapid Growth of Popularity.

The Elman recital, which is to take place at the Palace Theater under the auspices of the Norwich Hebrew Institute on Sunday afternoon, April 19th, is certain to draw a large audience. The artist has steadily risen in the estimation of the musical authorities, many of whom look upon him as the greatest of the younger generation of violinists.

Elman is a native of Talnoje, Russia, and is now 21 years old. He first showed signs of extraordinary musical gifts at the age of 4 when he astonished his parents by playing a number of melodies on the violin. His father, who was a violinist, at once began to teach him. Eight years later he made his Berlin debut, playing the Tschaikowsky Concerto. His success was immediate and established his European reputation.

"I want to plough deeper for my public," says Mischa Elman, "I want to reach those people who have never heard good playing or good music. I want to get outside the circle of concert goers in order to increase the musical appreciation in the community. I want to create music lovers, for that is as much the work of a solo artist as to interpret the great master composers. The creation of numbers of new music lovers must have an effect upon the whole spiritual life of the community in that it brings with it a greater breadth."

Two Features at the Broadway Sunday

In The Swap Paramount has brought to the screen what is expected to be one of the outstanding successes of the year. Dimitri Buchowetzki, the famous Russian producer, adapted as well as produced, the picture from Ferenc Molnar's stage hit of the same name which ran for nearly a year on Broadway.

Anna Q. Nilsson, Ricardo Cortez and Frances Howard are featured in the principal roles of the production which comes to the Broadway on Sunday is the first feature.

The Swan is a satirical comedy laid in the royal courts of Europe. It is the story of Princess Alexandra, called the Swan because she is so majestic, earnest, holds her head high and conducts herself irreproachably, who puts aside rank and tradition to marry the man she loves, the tutor of the young princes, in spite of everything her mother does to marry her off to a no-account prince of a neighboring kingdom.

Some of the highlights of this Paramount picture are a Central European court ball, a royal reception and betrothal dinner, be a visiting prince, a sword duel fought at midnight in a dark corridor, a mountain rain and wind storm, and a great deal of charming court formality as well as intrigue. The director has interpolated in the story a picturesque allegory laid in Spain of the 16th century, using a separate unit of players for these scenes. This fantasy is done all in pantomime, without spoken titles, and the players include Elizabeth Schermer and Fritz Feld of The Miracle, Ivan Lipow and others.

In transferring the Molnar stage success to the screen, Buchowetzki is said to have lost none of the smart sophistication of the comedy, and he has added much in the way of elegance and beautiful backgrounds.

The gowns, settings and decorations for The Swan establish a new high mark for lavishness and splendor in pictures.

Helen Lee Worthing, of the Follies, heads the supporting cast.

The second feature has Eva Novak and William Fairbanks in the featured roles at the Broadway theater. This latest picture in the series made by this pair of thrill actors is The Fatal Mistake. It is a newspaper story in which a young cub reporter makes a terrible mistake and loses his job. In his efforts to show that the man who fired him was wrong he gets on the trail of a pair of crooks and gets a story the crooks and a girl all in one fell swoop.

It is a very excellent picture and should provide a very pleasant evening's entertainment. With the two lead players are Wilfred Lucas, Bruce Gordon, Dot Farley, Frank Clark, Harry McCoy and Paul Weigel. The direction is under the eye of Scott Dunlap.

Watch for Vincent Lopes' band coming Monday. Watch paper.

DANIELSON

Samuel Dolbey of Providence, head of the Dolby Ice Cream company, was in Danielson Friday and completed arrangements for re-locating his Danielson storage and distribution headquarters. Mr. Dolbey closed a deal, which he has been negotiating for some time, for the occupancy of a building on Mechanic street originally built for the Moran and Ennis garage. This property has been taken on lease, with option of purchase, and will be occupied by the Dolbey interests soon after May 1. At the present time motor vehicles and other equipment of the sales entomological department are kept there. The property is owned by Leonard P. Morrison of High street.

At the present time and since the concern started to do business here several years ago the Dolbey concern has had its headquarters in Union street in a building owned by Peter Jodoin. Growth of the business was a factor in seeking new quarters. The Jodoin property will be taken over immediately the Dolbey interests vacate by an automobile agency.

The Dolbey company is one of four that entered the past week into a great combine of ice cream companies covering the greater part of New England with their distribution service. Manager F. J. Arrigan of the local station said Friday afternoon that in the new quarters on Mechanic street the concern will have the more spacious quarters that it requires and that with increased motor equipment and other facilities will be able to give an ideal service through all the surrounding country which the Danielson station supplies. It is likely that a refrigerating plant will be installed in the new quarters here in the early fall.

The native egg market appears to have touched bottom for this season when prices as low as 33 cents retail were made. Higher prices are anticipated within a week in view of the fact that egg collectors out of nearby cities found as high as 33 cents a dozen on Friday and were taking all they could get at that figure. In some retail stores here on Friday the price for strictly fresh native eggs was 40 cents a dozen. The demand that sends the prices [illegible] but with buyers [illegible] Asking offers close to what the retail prices has been for some time that fact guarantees higher prices at least over the immediate future.

At the Foster Center church Friday afternoon at one o'clock, Rev. G. B. Foster of the North Scituate Baptist church conducted funeral services for Mrs A. H. N. Crossman, who died at the Backus hospital in Norwich. The bearers were Ernest Nye, Russell Wells, Arthur Sweeney and Henry Fuller. Burial was in the Spears cemetery at Foster Center. A. F. Wood was in charge of funeral arrangements.

It seems a bit of irony, that farmers, who are generally opposed to daylight saving in the years that it was in vogue in this section should complain to the inconvenience by the fact that large urban centers continue to adopt it for the spring and summer months. This comes about through the fact that most farmers who ship milk must have the milk ready an hour earlier than usual when the railroad company sets the running time of the trains an hour earlier to keep in touch with the daylight time schedules of the big cities. This means getting up not later than 3.30 for many farmers in this territory and in some cases as early as 3 o'clock. And by the time 9 o'clock arrives it means getting to bed early that ample sleep may be had for another week of work from this schedule.

The borough of Danielson, as well as the town of Killingly, has its unpaid taxes problem. Tax receipts [illegible] show that $87 [illegible] on the list of 1923 and $1,[illegible] the list of 1924. Now there is [illegible] that the borough could use [illegible] a heavy percentage of [illegible] the proposed new filter bed to [illegible] the borough farm, or it will take care of the greater part of [illegible] interest charges on the borrowing. But it is not unlikely that Collector Sidney H. Perry will make a [illegible] serious effort to get. His success will be applauded by those who pay their taxes within the specified time and who believes as of old, that nothing is surer than death and the payment of taxes.

The budget of the borough of Danielson for the current year is set at $[illegible] gross. Included in this budget are two fixed charges for the raising of which votes of the borough definitely fix a half mill tax in each case —$1,200.07 for the library and the same amount for the annual sinking fund for the automobile fire truck.

A note due this year will call for $1,200. $4,500 will be required for the police department, $6,000 for street lights, $4,500 for the fire department, $2,144 for hydrant rentals, $2,300 for interest on notes, $450 for Davis Park, $700 for insurance, $200 for the tax collector, $200 for the clerk and treasurer, $200 for the borough farm and other minor items. As an offset to these costs there will be receipts estimated at $5,005.72, including cash on hand of $500.92. The largest income will be from sewer assessments, these amounting to $2,260. Rents of the borough hall and farm will bring in $540 and collections by the police are estimated at $918.

KILLING OF CHILDREN

Attention is directed to the [illegible] that exists when children suddenly dart from the sidewalk into the street, the report of a Massachusetts judge in bowing an inquest into the death of a five year old boy found that the death was the result of the unlawful act of another.

[illegible] step is a slogan that should be on the lips of every man, woman and every tot. There isn't a place in the world who can run [illegible] the elderly person who can [illegible] disregard the necessity for [illegible] the highways. Whatever may have been the situation [illegible] conditions today engender danger and, unless due respect is given to it and proper efforts are made to avoid it injuries and deaths are bound to follow.

The Massachusetts judge, while [illegible] the unspeakably pitiful fatalities to children from autos in this [illegible] points out that all "have been caused by the child running suddenly from the curbing, crosswise to the street against the side of the automobile so closely in front of the automobile as to make it impossible [illegible] to avoid the accident." [illegible] responsibility so clearly [illegible] case the judge goes [illegible] says he is most fervent [illegible] pleaded that schools and parents impress vividly on the [illegible] of every child that to run crosswise of the street is likely to mean [illegible] or death.

[illegible] undoubtedly true that the [illegible] exerts a strong influence [illegible] the importance of [illegible] upon the children but [illegible] parents should relieve in [illegible] the responsibility that [illegible] upon the parents to keep the [illegible] out of the streets, and to [illegible] them the danger that exists [illegible] of the danger of the highway [illegible] greater than the responsibility of [illegible] parents in giving protection to [illegible] are no [illegible] much greater.

The Massachusetts judge does not pretend to excuse the reckless driver but he fully understands what is needed to prevent many needless deaths.

PROGRESSING THROUGH EXPERIENCE

[illegible] means to have different traffic signals in every city on every state has been appreciated in New York city where a complicated system has been tried out with the result that the police department has decreed its end and its replacement by the old time red and green signals, the former to stop and the latter to go ahead as is understood from one end of the country to the other under common usage.

Trying to impose a system of different colored lights, including yellow lights, dulled lights and the like created a great amount of confusion. Strangers in New York city were actually at sea when it came to interpreting such signals, while what would mean stop or go ahead in New York might be just the opposite in other states.

The effort in behalf of the motor car [illegible] machines, instead of the red, so that autoists would not confuse danger signals set in the street for automobiles, has never received any more support than the idea of requiring pedestrians to walk on the left hand side of the road and so to the left of the traffic they would be facing. It meant the upsetting of long established customs, even though it may be practiced in other countries.

New York city has apparently come to a better recognition of the importance of uniformity in dealing with automobiles. This may well be applied, as far as possible, to the laws, the lights, the rules of the road, the general traffic regulations as well as to the traffic signals. Automobilists today are not sticking to their own state. Interstate traveling is very common and there is no wisdom in trying to have drivers interpret a red light as danger in one state as safety in another and as only a warning of highway conditions in a third.

Through experience progress is ultimately made. Perhaps after states and cities have tried out their oddities long enough to see the folly of them they will get down to business and take the much needed step in behalf of uniformity. It cannot come any too soon.

THE TIKHON STATEMENT

Little wonder that the announcement from Moscow that Patriarch Tikhon, former supreme head of the Russian orthodox church had endorsed the soviet government, should be accompanied by the statement that his followers received it with amazement.

It is to be noted that the document which he is said to have signed, in which he praised the soviet government and urged the members of the orthodox church throughout the world to give it support, was dated not only the first of April, but just a week before the death of the patriarch. It was disclosed not at the time it was signed but after he was dead and buried, when of course there was no chance for him to either deny or affirm the authenticity of the document.

It will never be possible for most people to understand why any such action should have been delayed until he was on his deathbed if he signed it in good faith and in full knowledge of what he was doing. His attitude has been entirely different. His experiences have led to the belief that he would give no such endorsement. His opposition to the soviet government has been long and persistent, even though present day conditions have changed somewhat from what they were during the earlier days of bolshevism.

Patriarch Tikhon knew the soviet government, he knew what it meant to stand up for his church against it, he knew what imprisonment meant under soviet Russia and he knew what the church had suffered at its hands.

Had the right about face of the patriarch taken place during his life, when he had a chance to defend it, the amazement would have been no less surprising but he would have been able to dissipate any doubt about his change of mind. But when such a statement, signed on his deathbed, is given to the world after his death, when he has no chance to speak for himself there is little wonder that there are skeptics. The manner of its coming creates as much or more surprise abroad than it does among his followers at home.

POPULATION AND REPRESENTATION

Reapportionment of the members of congress according to the population of the country has been under discussion ever since the results of the last census were made known. It has just been indicated through estimates that the population of the country at the end of the first six months of this year will reach the total of 115,000,000. This represents a gain of about eight million since the 1920 census and over 11 million greater than in 1910 at which time the last reapportionment was made.

It would be an easy matter for the states which have displayed an increase in population to add such members as the gains would permit, but that would mean a large addition every ten years to the membership of the house, where it is felt that the present membership is large enough if in fact it is not already unwieldy for the best results.

Thus instead of boosting the membership attention has been given to [illegible] the basis for representation so that the states will be represented in keeping with the population which they have. This means a readjustment. There might be cases where states which had not gone ahead would experience a cutting down in their representation, while others which hold the increases which have been shown would get an increase.

This becomes evident that the task of reapportioning the representation in congress is not as easy as might be expected in view of the fact that congress must do the job and yet it is to be realized that a census is taken for the purpose of [illegible] the representation equitably. It is a matter which the next congress will have a chance to wrestle with.

LIKE TESTS, LIKE DEFECTS

From the experience which the British have been having with the [illegible] it would appear that they failed to give proper consideration to the similar test to which the Shenandoah was put, over a year ago.

The troubles were of the same character. Both were at their mooring masts when storms developed with wind of such strength as to tear them loose, leaving great gaps in the nose of the gas bags and subjecting them to the mercy of the 50 miles an hour gale.

Quite the same as the break away, the experiences of the crews of the respective ships were much the same. It was necessary to keep the dirigibles aloft to fight the gale as best they could without preparation and with broken noses. In the second as well as in the first instance much credit accrues to the manner in which the airships were handled under such emergency conditions.

Now it can be felt sure there will be steps taken which will strengthen the forward end of the R-32 after the method that was shown to be necessary when the Shenandoah had its wild flight. Perhaps it had been figured that this situation had been taken care of in the R-33, or that there would be no occasion for feeling it could not stand such a test. All that is over now. The test has proved a like weakness and what might have been anticipated and avoided has been made necessary by a spectacular demonstration. It was fortunate that it ended so favorably as regards the condition of the ship and the safety of those aboard.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Is there not a charm in spring that is quite its own? The other seasons have their fascinations also that are distinctively their own, hence there is no rivalry between them. Spring is charming in a way and along lines that forbid competition. This quite agrees with what Emerson says in his justly celebrated work, "Nature." "To the attentive eye, each moment of the year has its own beauty; and in the same field it beholds every hour a picture that was never seen before, and shall never be seen again. The heavens change every moment and reflect their glory or gloom on the plains beneath." If Emerson here had been writing on spring particularly he might have added that this clear cut "glory or gloom" of the heavens applies to the spring more than to the other seasons. This is largely due to the chill in the atmosphere. Without the shimmering of heat waves the cloud effect is most effective in spring.

Nowhere in all recorded history do two events so clearly contrastive as Good Friday and Easter came so near together. Still they are connected by a mighty underlying link, and the name of that link is love. The outward and visible points of unlikeness may be expressed by the word "death" as characterizing Good Friday, and "life" as expressing the thought of Easter. One of the greatest thoughts in relation to Easter is not the mere possibility of future existence, but its extreme probability. It is the necessary link to give coherence to man's innate belief in immortality. How shall we explain the amazing fact that no race of men has yet been discovered without some conception of the life beyond, if there is not such a life? Of course many of these conceptions are very crude, but in them all is the germ of the idea made perfect in The Resurrection.

It is impossible to find any analogies in the field of nature that are exactly akin to the features of Easter. If there had been no Christ how slender would be the threads upon which to hang the doctrine of immortality! No writer, living or dead, has brought this fact out more vividly than F. W. Robertson, the great English divine who lived about seventy five years ago. Robertson says in one of his great sermons: "There is a kind of resurrection when the spring brings vigor and motion back to the frozen pulse of the winter world. The return of freshness to the chilled earth is not less marvelous than the return of sensibility to a heart that has ceased to beat. If the one has taken place the other is not impossible. And yet all this, valuable as it is in the way of suggestiveness, is worth nothing in the way of proof." We must look beyond and above nature for the actual evidence of a resurrection.

Upon what hypothesis shall we explain the wave of criminality that is sweeping over the United States at present? Nothing is to be gained by hedging around the question and saying that it is largely a "figment of the imagination," or, an "aftermath of the war." The fact is clearly indisputable, and the question is, how is it to be explained? One has but to compare the number of murders in New York during the year 1924 with those of London during the same period to see that a very serious matter confronts us. Is civilization on the decline? Is the poison of bootleg whiskey a considerable factor in the case? Does the possibility of making more money than anywhere else urge on the unscupulous to adopt unlawful methods? Whatever may be the causes the tendency to crime is on the increase. It is a question that appeals to the church as well as the state.

It is probably true that we must always take the "bitter with the sweet." Pleasure is never and nowhere absolutely unalloyed. If we are having ideal days we must pay the price. With sunshine we must have in spring cold winds and dusty streets. The writer remembers the answer a butcher once gave to a customer who complained that the meat he had recently bought was terribly tough. "Well," said the butcher, "if I didn't sometimes sell tough meat people would never appreciate the tender." Back of that reply lies a principle that applies to the common experiences of life. Could we fully measure the value of the good things of life if they were wholly divorced from the bad? Who are the strong characters of the world? Those who have floated along on a pleasure barge most of their lives, or those who have "passed through bloody seas?" Does the biggest man grow out of the boy who has been brought up in idleness and has had all the money he wanted? White oak men like white oak trees must pass through the nursery of hurricanes.

Let us not forget how full the month of April is with events of great historical importance. It memorializes forever the discovery of that non-existent fact known to fiction as the north pole. It will never be pointed out in the British museum as a curiosity. We shall never stumble over it any more than we do the 40th degree of latitude. Yet Peary must have felt big when he picked it up somewhere in the north regions on a certain morning in April. It was in April when Jefferson took his first breath and Franklin breathed his last. These two men were vastly more important to the world than the north pole or any other pole. In April, Lexington and Concord began a spectacular show that called the attention of the world to that grand new song of political equality. This month also marks our first presidential tragedy in the martydom of the immortal Lincoln.

It may be that in time the wave theory will be explanatory of much phenomena that at present seems inexplicable. In one of our charitable institutions a teacher recently complained that she found it very difficult to train he pupils for a speaking contest, and that a recent mental test showed that the intelligence of those pupils was considerably below the average in several years. Was it merely accidental that a larger number of dullards had been committed to that institution than usual, or was there a more scientific explanation? Does the strength of intellect in children fluctuate, so that at some periods teachers have to deal with large bunches of sub-normal children? If so does the wave theory suggest an explanation?

Speaking of children committing to memory pieces for recitation, would it not be well—at least for the sake of variety—to commit some of the old historic hymns as well as some of the newer ones? It is generally conceded that Whittier has written some of the best hymns of all time, like The Eternal Goodness. Longfellow, Tennyson, Gladden and Katherine Lee Bates have struck a high note in hymnology. When one hears the drivel that pupils have wasted time over in trying to commit, this would be a delightful change. After the hymn had been recited let the school sing that hymn which would serve a double purpose. As some hymns are the result of some great human experience let that experience be related. In this way the quality of these exercises might be improved.

EXPEDITION TO MEASURE HEAT OF A SUNBEAM.

The National Geographic Society has announced that it will send, in cooperation with the Smithsonian Institution, an expedition half way around the world for a remarkable purpose—to make a daily measure of the heat of the sun.

To the layman such an inquiry appears an ultra-refinement of scientific research but, should the joint expedition work out the findings it hopes for from its studies, all civilized mankind will benefit by the results.

The observations will extend over four years. They will be made to determine a method of long range weather forecasting by which it is hoped a cyclone across our middle west, storms at sea, a week of rainless days for a county fair, or the last frost of spring can be predicted well in advance.

In Field Four Years

The expedition will be known as "The National Geographic Society's Solar Radiation Expedition, in cooperation with the Smithsonian Institution," according to the announcement of Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, President of The Society, and its purpose, as officially defined, is "to carry on for four years daily observations of the solar constant of radiation, in a manner suitable to measure the variation of the sun."

Dr. Charles G. Abbot, Director of the Smithsonian Institution's Astrophysical Observatory, who has been called the Isaac Newton of the laws of the sun, will be the expedition leader.

The work of solar observation has been carried on by Dr. Abbot and his associates at the Smithsonian's Astrophysical Observatory since 1902. At first observations were made for a part of each year at Mount Wilson, California. In 1918 a station was established in the nitrate desert of Chile and, two years later, a station was set up on Mount Harque Hala, in Arizona, which took over the work previously done at Mount Wilson. The new station will add to the value of the work of the two stations already established.

The results of these solar radiation strides have been acclaimed by the scientific world. The reason for making them was humorously put by a member of Congress who, advocating more appropriations for the work, which has been handicapped for lack of funds, said, "Well, since everything comes from the sun I think we ought to provide money to investigate that, too."

Dr. Abbot will make a preliminary survey of points in Asia and Africa before it is decided where to establish a field station for the proposed expedition.

The principle underlying the investigations is that the sun sheds its life-giving heat equally on every square inch of the outer surface of our planet exposed to it—only the outer surface in this case is the surface of the ocean of air in which we live, and not the surface of the earth on which we move.

To Reach "Roof of the Air"

The solar geographer's task would be easy if men, like fish, could arise to the surface of their air ocean. Since man cannot do that he must devise ways to overcome the interference of vapors and dust particles that affect a sunbeam the instant it strikes the outer rim of our air envelope.

It is to discount this interference that Dr. Abbot has spent decades in devising unique instruments, which the expedition will use, and in perfecting others which the late Samuel Langley intented. It has been recalled that an early impetus was given to the study of solar radiation by a former president of the National Geographic society, Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, when, in 1892, he contributed $5,000 to the Astrophysical Observatory of the Smithsonian Institution to start studying solar radiation. The National Geographic Society has set aside $55,000 to be expended in the four years' study which may bring the dream of long range weather forecasting to a practical realization.

Weather Depends on Sun

The layman usually is astounded when told that all our weather—the rains and the snows, the storms and the droughts—have their origin in the slight variation of heat we get from the sun. This variation over short periods is only 3 or 4 per cent; in the twenty years of Dr Abbot's study its outside limits have only been between 10 and 11 per cent.

The highly complex effects of this variation in different localities is the result of the earth's variegated geography. Air, like humans, is responsive to the company it keeps; and a change of heat imparted affects very differently the air over mountains, deserts, oceans, and plateaus. Whereupon the extremely fluid atmosphere seeks to readjust itself—and the various kinds of "weather" ensue.

In passing it should be noted that it is not merely temperatures of the sun rays that are to be taken, but the heat, which implies energy, so that the measure is in terms of calories— the standard adopted being a given number of 'calories per square centimeter per minute.'"

This means that if you had a cube of water the size of dice, and this water were blackened so it would absorb heat, and if you could carry it outside the atmosphere so the sun's rays could strike it "head on," those rays would warm it 2 degrees per minute.

Special Instruments

The first instrument devised to "take the pulse" of a sunbeam is a comparatively simple mechanism with a long name—the pyrheliometer. A long tube catches the sun's rays and projects them upon a blackened silver disk, which is connected with a thermometer. Obviously this instrument registers the sunbeam "F. O. B."—not as it left the sun but as it reaches the observer after its drive through the air has distorted it.

To discount this distortion, advantage is taken of the fact that different parts, or wave lengths, of a light ray are affected in different degrees by the obstructions they meet. An instrument of extreme delicacy has been devised to assess the intensity of each part of the spectrum—an instrument called the bolometer which registers a temperature change down to one-millionth of a degree!

The radio fan who likes to 'build his own" would be overjoyed at this "set up"—two platinum strips, not quite so wide as a hair and ten times thinner than that. Running the spectrum across a hair line aperture alters the resistance of one of these hair line strips to the electric current, and the result is automatically recorded.

A Unique "Adding Machine"

Five such measurements are made in a forenoon; as the rays grow intenser as they approach the vertical and by a system of elaborate comparisons and calculations the effects of the air on the rays can be overcome.

A casual visitor to the station may conclude that the explorers have taken along a xylophone for their musical needs. A closer examination will show that the odd-looking contraption is an extrapolator, which is a combination of eight slide rules. Formerly it took thirty hours to compute one solar observation. Now five observations can be computed in less than four hours—so that the result of the morning's work can be wired out by night.

There are other instruments—the coelostat, for example—which reflects a beam of light into the observatory in a horizontal, fixed direction so that it falls on the spectroscope.

Dr. Abbot will inspect sites in Balchistan, Southwest Africa, and Morocco before deciding upon the location of the expedition's field station.

Helen Gould, the Retiring Sister

While her romantic sisters was toasted and feted as the bride of a member of nobility, Helen Miller Gould quietly made her way in life alone.

Always she had been of a retiring disposition. Born in New York, the daughter of Jay Gould, the noted financier, she had all the advantages of riches, but she preferred to live modestly and prepare herself to be useful to the world.

So plainly was she dressed when she entered school that few of the pupils recognized her as an heiress to many millions. Studious, punctual and ladylike, she was envied for her virtues, but made only one friend, a girl who also liked arithmetic.

After two years' attendance, she was forced by weak eyes to quit school and continue her studies under private tutors at home. She never attended boarding school or college save for a brief period spent in the woman's law classes at New York University; so never had the girl friendships that most girls contract.

At the time of the death of her father, the Gould name was one of the most bitterly hated in this country. Then 24, she worshipped her father's name and her one hope was to make his memory shine. Deeply religious, she took an interest in the poor and unfortunate and her fine, sensible benevolences became known to the public.

The wedding of Anna Gould, her sister, to Count de Castellane of France, attracted world-wide attention but Helen took little interest in society, was diffident about meeting people, and lived quietly at her beautiful home on the Hudson.

When the Spanish-American war broke out she gave the Government $100,000 and gave personal care to the sick and wounded soldiers at Camp Wycoff, Long Island, donating $50,000 to the cause. Congress awarded her a medal and the world applauded and loved her.

A wreck on the West Shore road detained her private car, and her devotion to the wounded aroused the admiration of Finley G. Shepard, railroad official, student, athlete and musician. The admiration was mutual and when at forty-four Miss Gould became Mrs. Shepard the world wished them God-speed. Today she is one of the country's most beloved women.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Theodore E. Burton, who will be one of the two representatives of the United States at the International Arms Traffic Conference to be held at Geneva next month, is a former senator and present representative in Congress from Ohio. Mr. Burton is a noted authority on finance and international affairs. He served on the Debt Commission and was temporary chairman of the last Republican national convention. Mr. Burton is the son of a clergyman and was educated at Oberlin college. He studied law, practiced his profession, was sent to Congress in 1889, most of the time from that date until he entered the senate in 1909, he was a major figure in the house of representatives whenever it came to debate of revenue production, banking and finance. In the interval between his retirement from the senate and his subsequent return to the house he allied himself with one of the big banks in New York, thereby adding practical banking experience to his deep knowledge of the theories of finance.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

Faith and Imagination

When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy finger; the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained; What is man that thou art mindful of him? And the son of man, that thou visitest him? Psalms; 8:34. David considered the heavens, the work of God's fingers, and his heart, was drawn upward to find fellowship with the heart of God. And in like manner, all the Old testament heroes triumph in faith by the proper use of the imagination; for we read that they "endured as seeing Him who is invisible," and that they were willing to be pilgrims and strangers on earth because they "looked for a city which hath foundations whose builder and maker is God."

"As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." If we would know our inner selves we must examine the pictures which our imagination loves most to make and to dwell upon. If we would change our character radically we must begin with the imagination and make it work in the direction toward which we desire to travel spiritually; for whether we intend to do so, or not, we shall inevitably travel in the direction toward which our imagination points, we shall inevitably work out in our lives—within the limits of our ability to do so—the pictures which our imagination loves most to dwell upon.

John, when living in banishment upon the Island of Patmos, thinking over the promises and warnings of Christ concerning the glory of His kingdom on earth, and the trials and sufferings that would precede it, had gracious visions of coming events. But, greater and more helpful still, he saw on the right hand of Him that sat on Heaven's Throne "a Lamb as it had been slain," and he heard all Heaven shouting the praises of God and of the Lamb. How this sight must have filled John's heart with praises to God and with courage and hopefulness, for it showed him that the only defeat that his master had ever suffered on earth was the occasion of His greatest triumph in Heaven. It would help us to let our imagination dwell much on this picture.

Paul lived and worked always in the consciousness of Christ's presence, because he taught his imagination to keep before his mind the vision of Christ working with him and working in him.

And so it was even with Christ himself—the divine Man—He also triumphed over the weakness of the flesh by a right use of His imagination; for we read that He "endured the cross, despising the shame," for the joy that was set before Him. He pictured to Himself the coming day when He should see at the travail of His soul, and be satisfied; when He will bring home His ransomed sheep, calling upon all Heaven to rejoice with Him over the lost that have been found.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Farmer Brown Discovers the New Home

Suspicion is in haste to act
And almost always lacking tact.
—Old Mother Nature.

Jimmy Skunk kept away from Farmer Brown's henhouse, and Mrs. Jimmy, whose new home was under that very henhouse, was wise enough not to leave it until after dark and to be back in it before daylight. So the fact that she was living there was not known in Farmer Brown's house for some time. Then one day Farmer Brown happened, just happened, to go around back of the henhouse and at once he saw the sand in front of the entrance to Mrs. Skunk's home.

"Hello!" he exclaimed. "That looks

Farmer Brown's Boy went out and looked at the hole under the hen house to me like a freshly dug hole, and it looks, too, as if some one is using it right along. It is too big for a Rat and hardly big enough for a Chuck. Ha! there is a footprint! A Skunk's as surely as I live! And there is a black hair. A Skunk is living under that henhouse and that won't do at all! No, sir; that won't do at all. That is living too close to the chickens for their good. We'll have to get rid of that scamp."

So when he went back to the house he told what he had discovered. "How do you propose to get rid of that Skunk?" asked Farmer Brown's boy.

"I'm going to leave that to you, son," replied Farmer Brown. "I suggest that you set a box trap and carry that Wood Pussy a long way off before you let it go. I suppose it is useless to suggest that you kill it."

Farmer Brown's boy smiled. "Quite useless," said he. And he knew that, despite the things his father sometimes said, he felt the same way "But why not leave that Skunk alone so long as it behaves and doesn't get in mischief?"

"All right. Suit yourself. Those are your chickens out there, and if you want to feed Skunks with them that is your business. If they were my chickens I should feel a whole lot easier about them if I knew that that Skunk was a mile or two away," replied Farmer Brown.

"I haven't missed a chicken so far, excepting those the Rats from the barn got," said Farmer Brown's boy. "There is no way into the henyard where the chickens are, anyway."

"Perhaps not, now, but it will be as easy for that Skunk to dig out from under the henhouse into the yard as it was to dig under the henhouse in the first place," replied Farmer Brown. "Better get that big box trap ready, son, and set it up."

Farmer Brown's boy went out and looked at the hole under the henhouse and while he stood there looking at it Mrs. Skunk poked her head out. She looked hard and long at Farmer Brown's boy and he looked long and hard at her. Then she came out. She expected to see Farmer Brown's boy move off in a hurry. He didn't move at all. He stood quite still. Mrs. Skunk calmly turned her back and disappeared in her hole under the henhouse.

"I believe, old lady, that you are Mrs. Jimmy, and that we are going to be friends," said Farmer Brown's boy with a chuckle. "I don't believe you'll touch those chickens. I'm sure you won't if I bring you some table scraps now and then. And this is what I am going to do. It will be time enough to set the trap when you get into mischief. I wonder where Jimmy Skunk is."

But this, of course, Mrs. Jimmy didn't tell him.

CHILD TRAINING

BEING PLEASANT

Ethel G. Peterson

When a girl enters the school for telephone operators, the first thing she is taught is to use a pleasantly modulated tone of voice in answering calls. The telephone companies employ teachers with special training in elocution to drill the girls. Why? Because, with an invisible operator, the voice is all the subscriber has to judge by, and the companies have found that courtesy pays in actual dollars and cents. Also, that it is contagious, and a soft voice very often turns away wrath.

Have you noticed how, when mothers are tired and nervous, and "nag" at the children, the children in turn "snap back" in high-pitched discordant voices? Often we speak to children in a tone we should be ashamed to employ to a grown up. We may well take a lesson from the phone girls. Our boys and girls should be taught to speak in clear, pleasant tones, so that even passing strangers whose questions they may answer, will carry away favorable impressions of them.

A young mother of my acquaintance is determined that her children shall give her cheerful obedience. So when Junior and she disagree, and he has to yield to her opinion, and is inclined to be a bit huffy about it, she smiles sweetly at him, and says, "Smile at Mother," and though her little daughter is slower to respond to this than Junior, sooner or later the smile comes and the sunshiny atmosphere is restored to the home.

I have felt sometimes that it was a little hard for her children to have to smile when perhaps they were feeling aggrieved over not having their own way, but the psychology in itself is all right. The very physical act of smiling makes them feel more like smiling. Those children will be a joy to their teachers, and when they are adults will be unlikely to go around with an all-day grouch on. How many thanks this same old world will owe that wise mother!

GRIEG'S LIFE AND MUSIC INTERESTINGLY DESCRIBED

The regular meeting of the Women's Federation of Park Church was held Friday afternoon at the Osgood Memorial. Before the meeting began there was a food sale. Mrs. Samuel E. Smiley was in charge assisted by Mrs. Cyrus Woodman, Mrs. Maud Gallup, Miss Elizabeth Johnson and Mrs. Harrison Gray.

After the devotional exercises by the president, Mrs. Frank Hempstead, the reports of the secretary and of the treasurer were read and accepted. It was announced that plans for a May supper had been completed.

The meeting was reminded that the thirty-ninth annual meeting of the Woman's Congregational Home Missionary Union of Connecticut will be held on April 29th at Center Church, Hartford. Several of the ladies of Park church plan to attend and wishing to go by auto are to hand their names to Miss Edith Bliss when a place will be provided for them.

On the second Sunday in May, contributions for the fund for a tuberculosis hospital in Ahmednugur, India, are to be taken at the same time as the regular Sunday collection for the church.

The paper for the afternoon written by Miss Jane Bill, was read by Miss Hannah Crowell, the music illustrating it given most sympathetically by Mrs. Vandalia H. Bursy accompanied by Mrs. Charles A. Saxton.

Grieg's gift was inherited from his mother and so aided by her that his musical career may be said to have begun at the age of six, said Miss Crowell. School life was very distasteful but all nature called to him. His childhood's idol was the great violinist, Ole Bull. When he heard the boy Grieg play, Ole Bull insisted the child must give up everything and go to Leipsic and study music. There his intensive study brought on a serious illness that left him the use of one lung only. His progress had been so wonderful that at the time of Ole Bull's death Grieg was the organist at the funeral.

The rigid classicism of the German school repelled him and he decided to be a Norwegian in his music and devote his gifts to writing music illustrative of his native land. He studied Norwegian legends, folk tales, went among the peasants and learned their life until he was imbued with the spirit. All that is delicate and beautiful in nature Grieg expressed in music. The scenery in Norway and which he lived was such as to fill him with a love of the sublime and beautiful.

However much we may have admired his "ich liebe dich" we love it more when told it was composed when he became engaged to Miss Nina Hagerup whom he afterwards married, so too we see how closely he lived with nature when we hear "To the Spring," "The Wanderer" and "The Butterfly."

It is hard to get at Grieg's personality, he lived so remote from society. Gentleness and melancholy were the leading notes of his character. Many badges and honors were given him together with degrees from learned institutions, but he was indifferent to them all. Many flattering offers were come to the United States failed to tempt him, so great was his dread of the "dream and so real" was his fear of our "skyscraper" civilization.

As a writer of the future he excels [illegible] and the 125 songs he composed have been counted a few masters. When Ibsen wrote Peer Gynt he asked Grieg to write the music for it and among the gems we have [illegible] song.

Grieg was an impressionist, he belonged to the romantic school. His [illegible] was the influence of the ever-changing scenes of Norway as well as its wilder and wilder regions.

Among the instrumental pieces Mrs. Bursy played "The Wedding Procession" and "The Butterfly." At the close the reading Charles Dyer gave a few reminiscences of his meeting with Grieg then Bjornson and other leaders of the artistic and musical world of a few years ago. The paper and the music illustrating it were with so much feeling and appreciation that Mrs. Bursy made the afternoon at the Parish house one to be remembered.

No Boiled Eggs on Mars

Owing to the rare state of the air of the planet Mars, it has been shown by a Government scientist, water there will boil at a much lower temperature than on the earth. To determine the degree of warmth of the distant sphere the experimenter directs a ray of the planet's light upon two thin wires, thus setting up an electric current, which is measured by delicate instruments. The temperature of Mars, according to the scientist, is from 20 to 40 degrees cooler than that of the earth. This would make it impossible to boil eggs on the planet.

BARKING POLICE PUPPY POINTS OUT YOUTHFUL QUARTET IN HIDING

A three-months old police puppy, belonging to Rudolph Henschel, won his spurs, early Friday night when his barking led to the capture of four small boys suspected of the theft of about $9 from the cash register at the Henschel Tire and Rubber store, 331 Main street, and the attempt to steal a radio set. The youngest of the boys is 9 and the oldest 13, which brings them within the juvenile court age and gives them immunity from publicity at this stage of the case.

Entrance to the store was made by prying up a rear window in the office, which was reached by piling up some boxes. An attempt had also been made to get in by a rear door where a section of glass near the lock had been cut with a diamond in a shape to break out a piece large enough to make a hole through which to reach to the lock. For some reason this plan had not been carried through after the glass had been scored in the desired shape.

Officer Elmer Allen's alertness in noticing that a radio set was gone from its usual place in the store started the investigation that led to the arrests. As the officer was switching on the lights from the outside window switch early Friday night, he saw that a radio set which stood on a table at the rear, in plain sight of the front door, was not there. He called this to the attention of Stanley Henschel, son of the proprietor, who happened to be with him, and when they went in to look around, they found the radio set on a table in the office to which it had been carried to be in a position to hand out of the window. The cash register was open and had been cleaned of its contents with the exception of a few pennies. It is believed that the thieves who were in the store fled out of the rear window when they were surprised by the switching on of the lights by the officer.

Officer Allen and young Mr. Henschel notified the senior Henschel who came from his home at 332 Main street and had with him his young police dog, a puppy three months old. As they were looking around the store, Mr. Henschel opened the back door where the glass was cut. The dog immediately began to bark and Mr. Henschel told the officer he felt sure there was some one in the yard back of the store. Search by the officer and the younger Henschel revealed five boys there, one of whom got away but four were caught.

They were taken to police headquarters where they all stoutly denied having had anything to do with the burglary. They were allowed to go home in the custody of their parents, under the regulations of the juvenile court law.

James L. Case the campaign leader was the last speaker and he minutely outlined the plan of the campaign, and urged all the workers to "get into the game" with all their might.

Monday is the day set apart for the hustle for funds, and if the team workers find the usual interest in the assertion on the part of those whom they solicit the campaign cannot fail of success. Fish Swims on Back

Only one known species of fish has the habit of swimming on its back. This is an inhabitant of tropical waters, known as the globe fish. The skin on the under side of this fish is loose and can be filled with air at will. Y. M. C. A. CAMPAIGNS BEGINS WITH FINE ENTHUSIASM

The initial meeting of the annual campaign for current expenses for the local Y. M. C. A. was held at the "Y" building Friday evening. Promptly at 6:30 o'clock, the team workers gathered at the supper table where the women of the Central Baptist church served a most delightful supper which was greatly relished by all the men. This supper was provided by those who served it, and a hearty vote of thanks was extended to them. Shepard B. Palmer, the campaign chairman presided, and called upon Rev. J. H. Graham to offer prayer. President James C. Macpherson was called on for remarks, and he feelingly thanked the loyal men for their presence and interest, and expressed the belief that with the ability and enthusiasm possessed by the workers success would surely be attained. General Secretary Edwin Hill by request gave a brief statement of the real things accomplished by the association during the year in the various departments. James Murphy, the popular principal of the Greene-

NORWICH WILL PROTEST C. V. TRAIN TIME CHANGE

The Central Vermont railroad's proposal to change the time of the first north bound train out of New London, so that it will reach Norwich at 8:45 a. m., standard time, instead of 6:17 as at present, is expected to arouse a storm of protest which will break when a hearing is given next Tuesday at Hartford before the public utilities commission.

Serious disturbance to the mail schedule at the Yantic post office is one of the chief grounds for complaint over the proposal to set the time of the train two hours and a half later than it is now. The Yantic office has two rural carriers, one of whom covers 27 miles every day on his route. At present he is able to get started at about 7:30. If the new train time is made effective it would be about 10 o'clock or 10:30 before he could get started on his route.

It is understood that the management of the Palmer Bros. mill at Fitchville, the Gilman mill at Bozrah and the American Woolen Co. mill at Yantic, all of which will have their first mail delayed so long that their early morning business will be seriously retarded, will have representatives at the hearing to voice their protests. The Chamber of Commerce will likewise be represented to make its voice heard in protest to the proposed change of the train time.

ACADEMY PLAYS MARTIN TEAM TODAY IN BENEFIT GAME FOR PHENO TOMBARI

All roads will lead to the Academy campus this afternoon when the J. B. Martin team will journey from their noble village to the more nobler district in which the N. F. A. reposes. At two o'clock the umpire will announce the beginning of one of the greatest battles ever seen in Norwich since the Revolutionary war. The Martin men, composed of older and more experienced players, shun the idea of being beaten by the young Academy boys and are out to teach them a lesson as to how real baseball should be played and have the intention of bringing the bacon back to Taftville with them.

The contest is to be a benefit game for "Pheno" Tombari, the star infielder of the Red and White, who had his leg broken in a practice game a few weeks ago. "Pheno" has been one of the bright lights of the Academy nines for the past two years and may not be seen on the diamond again this season because of his injury. His absence from the lineup will no doubt be felt by the Academy team.

Coach Brigham has no intention of having his forces meet their Waterloo in this game and has put his charges through two days of hard practice. They have only played two games this year, but have shown enough stuff to convince the baseball fans of Norwich that they have a team worth supporting. The pitching staff is one of the most dependable that the N. F. A. has had for a long time and the infield and outfield are fast and can be relied upon at the most critical times.

The whole student body and all the local fans are expected to be there in full array showing due appreciation to "Pheno" Tombari who has done his bit for the Academy and Norwich.

LINDLEY IS DROPPED FROM YALE CREW

New Haven, April 17.—A. D. Lindley, stroke of the Yale championship crew in the Olympics last year, has been declared ineligible for the Yale crew this year because of his scholastic standing and has been replaced by Thomas I. Laughlin, '27, of Providence, R. I., as stroke of the varsity, it was announced tonight by Coach Leader. Lindley will do no more rowing this year, it was said.

Laughlin was stroke of last year's freshman eight and came to Yale from St. Paul's school, Concord, N. H., where he rowed on the school crew. He is 19 years old.

Prud'homme, who rowed on the varsity two years ago and who was ineligible to row in the Olympics last year because he is a Belgian, was moved up to number 2 in the varsity today, taking the place of Bunce, who had held that seat for the past few days. These were the only changes in the makeup of the varsity during the past week.

The crew which rowed today and which is expected to represent Yale in the mile and a half race with the University of Pennsylvania and Columbia at Philadelphia two weeks from tomorrow, is made up as follows:

Stroke, Laughlin; number 7, Spock; number 6, Kingsbury; number 5, Warren; number 4, Hudson; number 3, Wilson (captain) number 2, Prud'homme; bow, Peterson; cox, Sammond.

Rance is rowing number 4 in the varsity eight and Crosby has taken the place at number 5, Sweet going into Crosby's old place in the boat.

GIBBONS-TUNNEY BOUT ADVANCED TO JUNE 5TH

New York, April 17.—Jimmy Dehaest, matchmaker of the Polo Grounds, today succeeded in advancing the date of the Gene Tunney-Tom Gibbons light heavyweight bout from June 12 to June 5 when he appeared before the New York State athletic commission at its semi-weekly meeting.

This separates two of the three outdoor shows scheduled for the early summer by two weeks, the Italian Hospital fund program, with bouts featuring Harry Wills and Charley Weinert, being scheduled for June 19. However, the commission's decision puts the annual milk fund engagements at the Yankee stadium only a week ahead of the DeForest card, a matter which will be straightened out at the next meeting on Tuesday.

Tex Rickard is reported insisted upon May 26 as the date for the meeting of the light heavyweight champion, Mike McTigue, and Paul Berlenbach, the hard hitting challenger from Astoria, Long Island. It is said that the state officials will endeavor to have Rickard change to May 30.

The commission adopted a rule which requires that a substitution of a boxer in a main event must be approved by the commission 48 hours before a bout.

Representatives of Mickey Walker, welterweight champion, and Dave Shade, his California pursuer, were before the boxing body but action in the matter was delayed for a few days.

RUTH IS UNDER KNIFE FOR TWENTY MINUTES

New York, April 17.—Babe Ruth's promises and hopes for the greatest home run record he ever has compiled, appear to have been blasted. Tonight, after four days of the season had gone into history, the New York Yankees' outfielder lay upon a hospital cot recovering from an operation.

Ruth's illness, described as an attack of influenza, took on a much more serious aspect with the announcement that the appearance of abscesses on his back made surgical attendance necessary. For twenty minutes the star was stretched upon the operating table this morning under an anaesthetic, but was reported to be resting comfortably tonight.

Only a few days ago the great hitter felt that he could gain health in time to participate in the opening game of the American league season against Washington. That was on Tuesday. After the operation Ed Barrow, business manager of the Yankees, said that his return to the game would be delayed at least two weeks.

For two years Ruth is known to have suffered from a strain in his back, aggravated each season by the terrific swings he takes at a ball and his insistence on fighting for extra bases by sliding. Several times he has fainted and newspaper men who followed the Yankees through the south on the training trip believe that his injury caused his collapse at Asheville, N. C., more than a week ago.

Dr. Edward King, who has been attending Ruth, said that the patient possesses such remarkable vitality that his complete recovery should be speedy.

"It is hardly possible he will be out of bed for ten days and it will be more than two weeks before he can take any strenuous exercises," he added.

Ruth is reported to have lost considerable weight during his illness, but hospital physicians pointed out that there is plenty of flesh to spare and that the reduction may prove good for him.

CONN. AGGIES PLAY BROWN TEAM THIS AFTERNOON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Storrs, Conn., April 17—Coach Dole's Connecticut Aggie baseball team will cross bats with Brown at Providence tomorrow afternoon in what will be the opening contest of the season for the Nutmeg Aggies. Advance dope on the contest favors the Bruins, who will take the field a veteran team as against an untried Aggie combination.

Fourteen Connecticut players are making the trip, several of whom are making their first appearance as members of the Aggie varsity. Veterans who will start the game include Captain Ahearn, O'Brien, Wells, Makofski, Seymour and Gilbert. Wardle, who will start at catch was a member of the varsity last year, but did not play regularly. Schofield and Horne are both sophomores playing their first varsity game. Other sophomores making the trip include Ajello, Yardsley, Tiernan and Kramer. Nanfeldt will be taken as a relief pitcher, and Makofski or Schofield may be used in the box if necessary. Tracey Swem, Hartford boy, will be used in the infield provided Dole decides to make any changes in that direction.

Connecticut ball tossers returned early from their Easter recess last Monday, and the squad has been practising daily under Coach Dole's direction. The infield combination of Captain Ahearn, O'Brien, Schofield and Makofski is one that has shown up very well to date, and the work of this quartet has been a source of much satisfaction to Connecticut followers.

Brown's team that will take the field against the Aggies shapes up as one of the best in several seasons at the Providence institution. Every man that starts tomorrow has played at least one season with the Bruins, and most of them have played two and three. The infield of Hoffman, Ruckstuhl, Mitchell and Cutler played together last season, when it was rated as one of the best college infields in the east. Neuber is pitching his third year of college baseball, and with Welch backstopping, will make a seasoned battery. The outfield is also made up entirely of veterans. Captain Trumbower is rated as one of the leading eastern college center fielders. The lineups:

Brown—Ruckstull, 2b, Cutler ss, Trumbower cf, Hoffman 1b, Mitchell 3b, Williams lf, Bixon rf, Welch c, Neuber p.

Connecticut—O'Brien ss, Makofski 1b, Ahearn 3b, Wardle c, Schofield 2b, Seymour lf, Gilbert cf, Horne rf, Wells p.

AMERICAN WOOLEN COMPANY OVERSEERS' BOWLING TOURNEY

The Overseers of the Norwich Mill officially closed their Bowling Series with a dinner at O'Leary's, New London, Thursday evening, when F. S. Grieve was presented a green gold eversharp pencil as a prize for his high single, 142. Cornelius Hamill was also presented a plain gold eversharp pencil for high average of 93.99. The presentations were made by Thomas Bedford in a few well chosen words.

The merriment of the evening was a present to C. F. Piaskitt by Tom Bedford and John Weiler, of a mechanical hopping rabbit, which caused roars of laughter when it hopped over the dining table, to the astonishment of the waiters and other guests.

The evening was continued with entertainment at the Capitol theatre and closed with a bowling series at the Lawrence alleys, when Mr. Piaskitt, holding tight to the rabbit, bowled high single for 128. All voted that they had spent a most enjoyable evening.

BULKELEY OPPOSES MORRIS HIGH AT NEW LONDON TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 17.—Unless some unforeseen element takes a hand to spoil the gala opening of the Bulkeley High school baseball season of 1925, then the local school nine with one of the most powerful organized baseball nines in New England will engage in an inter-sectional contest with Morris High of New York city in the season's opener. With City Manager Holt on hand for the purpose of throwing out the first ball to give the season speed to success, approximately 2,000 people are expected to be on hand to witness the game.

The record of achievement by the Morris High nine is three victories and but a single defeat, beginning its season on April 17st. The lone defeat came at the hands of a prep school nine, and the New Yorkers only lost after leading with a comfortable margin. The Bulkeley record to date has nothing to offer for it is the opening game of the season for the Orange and Black. Only the three victories which made up the practice tilts for the local nine can be matched against the fine early season record which accompanies the team from the Big City here. The Morris High each year plays off the city title with George Washington High at the Polo Grounds on May 27 and 28. In the opening day battle over 30,000 witnessed Morris High breeze through to an easy victory over Brooklyn Prep.

Opposed against each other will probably be the twirling ace of the New Yorkers. Roemer of Madden each will be ready to assume the twirler's responsibilities in event that Ader fails to hold Bulkeley in check, however, this is unlikely due to the exceptional ability of the Morris High pitching ace. Captain Tillie Daniels, veteran of many close battles, and loser but once out of 15 starts in two seasons will be pitted against the Morris High aggregation. Upholding his end will be the hard hitting George Sheflott for the Orange and Black. Both are veterans and with the experience which these two men enjoyed last summer with the Duwells will no doubt stand them to good stead Saturday.

The infield is slightly changed over that of previous lineups. Edward Mansfield has been called in from right field to take care of first base and he has shown ability to accustom himself to the change. He is a veteran of two seasons, and his work before on the diamond is bound to be a benefit in his efforts with Bulkeley at the initial sack. At second base, Jumping Joe Barry will be stationed unless his arm which has been bothering him all week forces him to sit by peacefully. Barry's ability as a second baseman is well known in this section of the state. His average in hitting last season with the high school nine and together with his fine work around the keystone sack found him being drafted for duty with the Duwells of Norwich and the State Hospital nine during the summer. He will be given the lead off position in the batting order Saturday.

At the other two posts in the infield, Barney Hutchison at third and Joe Gaetano at short stop round out a veteran combination which has been functioning now with favorable results for two seasons. Both Gaetano and Hutchison are good hitters, dependant in the pinch to come through and to play an equally strong game in the field. Their work will be watched carefully for the fine results which is expected of them.

In the outfield, Geno Montali will be given left field to road, while Booth will be stationed in center and Falvey the only new comer in the ranks in right. This is a veteran gang of outer gardeners with the exception of Falvey, and the heavy hitting of both Booth and Montali is expected to count in the final outcome.

The lineups for the game will be as follows:

Bulkeley—Barry 2b, Hutchison 3b; Sheflott c; Booth cf; Gaetano ss, Montali 1b; Mansfield 1b; Falvey, rf; Daniels p.

Morris High—Nach 1b; Goldhammer 2b; Rosen or Banks ss; Myers cf; Riechmann, c; Chodoc rf; Singer of Duffy lf; Goebel, 3b; Ader, Roemer or Madden p.

Umpires—Sullivan behind the plate; Neilen on bases.

BIDWELL WINS NORTH AND SOUTH TENNIS TITLE

In the semi-final round of the women's doubles, Mrs., Batchelor, Forest Hills, New York, paired with Mrs. M. Brook Huff, of Philadelphia, defeated Miss Anna Fuller, of Boston, and Miss Penelope Anderson, Richmond, Va., 6-3, 6-4, to gain their bracket in the final round tomorrow.

The other match of the division was won by Miss Anne B. Townsend and Molly Thayer, both of Philadelphia, over Mrs. Benjamin E. Cole, Boston, and Miss Martha Bayard, of Short Hills, N. J., 7-5, 6-4. Miss Thayer is present nort hand south champion.

New London, April 17.—Smashing the pins with reckless abandon the Peerless two-man bowling team won the right to retain second place in the Eastern Connecticut bowling league standing in a replay of the tie between the New London and Taftville teams.

DETROIT WINS EASY GAME FROM WHITE SOX

Detroit, April 17—Chicago's pitchers were numerous and ineffective and Detroit won the final game of the series 9 to 3. HOXIE TO MEET SANDS IN GOLF FINALS

Pinehurst, N. C., April 17—A. M. Hoxie, Boston, the medalist, will meet Austin L. Sands, of Newport, R. I., here tomorrow in the finals of the mid-April golf tournament, following their semi-final victories today.

Hoxie came through the semi-finals with a 3 and 2 win over John Chapman, Greenwich, Conn., while Sands defeated P. S. P. Randolph, Jr., of Point Judith, R. I., 7 and 6.

The Rhode Islander, who has figured in many tournaments this season, was badly off, and his opponent made the turn six up, ending the match at the twelfth hole.

Hoxie was one up when he started home with Chapman. He won the match on the long sixteenth, with a par four.

BRASSCOS TRIM COLORED STARS IN SECOND GAME

Waterbury, April 17—Kitty Bransfield's Waterbury Brasscos registered their second victory over the Chapple Johnson's All-Stars here this afternoon in a free hitting contest by a score of 8 to 7. The colored invaders took a two run lead in the first, but fell behind the Brasscos who scored Jabrice in the third. The All-Stars knotted the count in the sixth, but in their half Waterbury scored three runs, but the visitors again tied the score in the half, only to lose when Sheety Long led off with a triple, scoring on Gallagher's sacrifice to center.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

News of general interest gave Norwich people much to talk about a half century ago. The weather came in for its share of the discussion as snow storms continued to visit the city almost daily, one storm bringing with it a fall of over a foot of snow.

Items taken in part from The Bulletin of 1875 are printed as follows:

Monday, April 12, 1875—The opera house movement is again revived. Norwich has lost many attractive entertainments in the past because of poor theater facilities and efforts are being made to take care of them before another season. An additional inducement to the plan is that the entire upper floor of a new structure may be used by the Masonic fraternity of the city, which is sadly in need of comfortable quarters in which to hold their meetings.

A petition is in circulation in the city to make the office of street commissioner an elective one. The unwisdom of such a procedure need not be explained to the average voter.

Business is very good this spring, better than during the past two years according to the merchants.

Norwich has the reputation abroad of being unequalled by any city of its size for church music.

Warren L. Goss of this city, president of the National Association of Andersonville Survivors, presided over the convention held in the Crawford House, Boston, Friday evening. Nearly one hundred conrades were in attendance.

Tuesday, April 13, 1875—A petition has been left with the Water Commissioners signed by a large number of prominent residents of Laurel Hill, asking the commissioner to carry their pipes over the hill. The petition intimates that a mistake was made in not carrying the pipes into the city.

The turn-table of the Horse Railroad company, on Franklin Square, was removed yesterday and the ice beneath it was found to have a thickness of over four feet.

The Norwich Croquet club has laid out its grounds on Laurel Hill and is getting ready for the spring play.

The receipts of the sale of slips at the Sachem Street M. E. church netted about $1,200 a large advance on former years.

Howes & Cushing's United States Circus is the first to promise an appearance in Norwich.

Norwich had its customary snow storm yesterday afternoon, although it was of short duration.

Wednesday, April 14, 1875 — The pleasant association of gentlemen who for some time have met weekly to bowl, has been organized as a bowling club with Jedediah Huntington, president and William P. Greene, 2nd, treasurer. The club has secured an alley and adjoining rooms which will be fitted up in fine style.

One of the heaviest snow storms of the year began at midnight yesterday morning and continued until midnight last night, covering the ground to a depth of several inches. An old resident says that the snow storm was not unprecedented. Thirty-five years ago today, he says, the snow was 22 inches deep in Norwich. Trains were delayed and at Palmer the snow was 24 inches deep on the level.

Henry Roath is high hook having taken about two thousand pounds of smelts in the Shetucket, in the rear of the railroad yards.

President Lincoln was assassinated ten years ago tonight.

Thursday, April 15, 1875—The ruling by the New Haven railroad, that no members of the legislature will be given free railroad passes this year comes as a pleasant surprise. Similar action will probably be taken by other roads of the state and this will probably mean that the legislators will vote themselves an increase in pay to cover the additional expense.

The City of New York and the City of Norwich were detained by the storm yesterday, the latter getting in about 11 o'clock. In the city travel by horse railroad was entirely suspended owing to the depth of the snow which is about one foot, and of the heaviest kind.

M. M. Comstock of New London has purchased the steamer Ida of Providence. The Ida will be run between New London and Norwich and will make a stopping at the Pequot and Edgecombe House.

Friday, April 16, 1875—A hundred years ago the Rev. Nathaniel Niles of this city wrote a number of verses on the Battle of Bunker Hill. They were set to the tune of American Hero, and were extensively known and sung during the Revolution. They were dedicated to the Putnam Phalanx of Hartford and have been reprinted and distributed in that corps, to be sung by them in their visit Monday to Bunker Hill.

Isaac Sanderson and H. D. Sydleman have bought the well known trotting mare, Lady Mitchell. It is known that she will make 2.30 or better and is one of the fastest trotters ever owned in the city.

Five lots on an adjoining the corner of Spaulding and Franklin streets were sold at auction yesterday for $4,025. This sale indicates no depression in real estate in Norwich.

The first shad of the season was caught in the Shetucket yesterday and weighed three and one half pounds.

Saturday, April 17, 1875—The owner of the black mare Vixen has doubted the statement of Messrs Sanderson and Sydleman that Lady Mitchell is the fastest horse in Norwich and have challenged for a race at $500 or $1,000 a side, to be run during May or June in this city.

The glass works in New London are a valuable addition to the industries of that city. Fifty-four are now employed and from 80 to 100 cases of various shaped bottles are being manufactured daily.

Gentle spring hailed considerably last night and it also snowed. Our April showers continue to be of the wintry kind.

Capt. Joseph P. Rockwell, formerly of Norwich, brother of Gen. A. P. Rockwell, Chief of the Boston Fire Commission, has lately been appointed Assistant Superintendent of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad. News of his appointment is highly gratifying to his many Norwich friends.

GALES FERRY

An alarm of fire was rung at the railroad station Tuesday morning at about 10.45 o'clock and residents rushed to learn just where the fire was located. It proved to be at the summer colony on the Bluff, where some of the cottage owners who are spending Easter week at their various cottages, had gotten permit from Fire Warden D. R. Povey to burn the leaves and rubbish that had accumulated during the fall and winter. It made a big blaze.

The April meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary society was held at the home of Mrs. John Harold; at the Submarine Base, Tuesday afternoon. The vice president, Mrs. R. Irving presided. The meeting opened with the hymn, How Firm a Foundation. Mrs. George Smith Brown at the piano. Mrs. Harmon L. Perkins conducted the devotions. Roll call, minutes of last meeting and offering was taken by the secretary, Mrs. Fanny A. Molthrop. The treasurer, Mrs. C. E. Colver, gave her report, which was approved. Mrs. Colver had purchased Silver Lake leaflets, which she sold at this meeting for the benefit of the Silver Lake social center in Providence. Papers were read, The American Indian Girls, by Mrs. Colver. Poem, An April Morning, Mrs. Molthrop; The Kingdom Without Walls, the last chapter in the study book, was read in paragraphs, by Mrs. Henry W. Hurlbutt, Mrs. M. A. Lawson, Mrs. Marie Cathcart, Mrs. Parker, Mrs. D. C. Perkins and Mrs. L. A. Hurlbutt. Poem, Blue Ridge Prize Song, read by Mrs. Rufus W. Hurlbutt, Mrs. Parker and Miss Satterlee, were appointed to arrange a mite box play to be presented at the mite box opening at the next meeting. The sigmas were under the direction of Mrs. Cathcart, who gave the numbers attached to Easter cards. During the social hour Mrs. Harold, assisted by Mrs. Cathcart and Mrs. Colver, served ice cream, cake and wafers.

Among the summer residents who have cottages on the Bluff and are spending Easter week there are Judge and Mrs. Alfred E. Steers, with two of the children of their son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. William D. Baylis, all of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Mr. and Mrs. Henry McLear and family also of Brooklyn.

Rev. and Mrs. George Smith Brown attended the wedding of the former's cousin, Miss Mildred Inez Pearson, of Hartford, and Edward William Mason, of Norwich, at the First Methodist church, Hartford, Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

A car of limestone arrived at the station Easter Monday and was switched on a siding for the convenience of the farmers and others, who are carting it away to fertilizee their land.

DESERTION AND CRUELTY MAKE GROUNDS FOR GIVING 6 DIVORCES

Desertion and intolerable cruelty were the grounds upon which six divorces were granted by Judge Edwin C. Dickenson in the superior court at New London Friday morning. The petitioners for divorce came from Mystic, Groton, Montville and New London.

Ferguson Rennie, Mystic garage proprietor, was awarded a decree from Esther C. Rennie of Bryn Mawr, Pa., on grounds of desertion. Mr. Rennie and the mother of his wife both testified that she had deserted him in August, 1918. The couple were married in Mystic on March 6 of that year.

Moses Wilbur of Groton, on similar grounds was divorced from Mildred C. Wilbur, formerly of Groton and now of parts unknown. The couple were married March 16, 1917 and have four minor children. Desertion was claimed since Sept. 1, 1921.

Madelyn (Sherman) Beekman, a saleswoman in New London, secured a divorce from Charles N. Beekman, who deserted her on Jan. 1, 1920, eight months after their marriage, she claims.

Beekman was a sailor attached to one of the war craft stationed at New London during the war, at the time he met Miss Sherman, testimony showed. After a courtship of about a year, they were married March 12, 1919. The divorce was granted on the grounds of desertion, and custody of a five-year-old daughter was given to the mother.

Mary Heaslip Gottschalk was given a decree from Henry Casamore Gottschalk on the grounds of desertion. The couple were married on Feb. 12, 1921, but separated six weeks later, when, according to the plaintiff's indecent actions revolted her, and made life with him impossible. Both are residents of New London.

On grounds of intolerable cruelty, Florence O'Burne Veinotte was divorced from Maurice W. Veinotte. Both are New London people. They were married March 12, 1918, and the acts of cruelty were alleged to have started Jan. 1, 1921.

On similar grounds Julia Sopola of Montville was divorced from Antonio Sopola, also of that place. The couple were married Jan. 20, 1918, and the husband was alleged by the wife to have begun to treat her with extreme cruelty shortly after. He is now confined in the Norwich State hospital.

FINDS SMITH DEATH DUE TO "INEVITABLE ACCIDENT"

Fred Smith, 69, employed as a cook at the Norwich State hospital, died there Friday morning as the result of injuries sustained on the evening of April 8th, when struck by an automobile below the hospital grounds.

Coroner J. J. Desmond of Norwich, upon hearing of the death of Mr. Smith, conducted an inquest at the state hospital. Robert Thomas Anderson, employed at the hospital and driver of the vehicle which struck Mr. Smith, was questioned as were a number of eye witnesses of the accident, including four children.

Testimony offered showed that Anderson, as was his custom, offered to take Smith to the hospital from the pavilion, but Smith elected to walk and went on ahead of the machine.

Anderson, driving a Moon roadster, and accompanied by Joseph Izbicki and Charles Dennis of Norwich, employed at the hospital, left the pavilion some time later. On the Military highway, near what is known as "The Pines," Mr. Smith was seen walking along the right side of the road over 100 feet away. At this time an automobile passed Smith, heading toward the Anderson car, headlights burning brightly. Just as the car passed him Smith was seen to dart toward the center of the highway.

Mr. Anderson, who had been driving at about 25 miles an hour, realizing that Smith was probably unaware that a machine was in back of him (Smith), turned sharply to one side and applied the brakes. The front of the machine cleared Smith but he was struck a glancing blow by the rear right fender and knocked down unconscious. Izbicki, seeing the danger tried to push Smith away from the car as it passed but was unsuccessful.

The injured man was picked up and taken to the Norwich State hospital where he died, Friday. He did not regain consciousness at any time after being struck, being in a daze. Death was probably due to a fractured skull and multiple injuries.

As far as can be learned Smith leaves no immediate relatives.

Coroner J. J. Desmond will make his finding within the next few days but in a statement to The Bulletin, Friday evening, intimated that Anderson would not be held responsible for the accident which was called, "an unfortunate, inevitable accident."

A number of members of the revived Mystic Grange were re-instated in the Pomona membership.

At noon a fine dinner was served by the members of the North Stonington Grange and in the afternoon the lecturer's program was held, the program being as follows: cornet solo, Brother Parker of Bozrah; A bird's eye view of the Postal Bill, Brother Goodenough, Ledyard; musical selection by the North Stonington Grange; talk on birds by Brother Perry of North Stonington; recitation, Sister Burdick of Mystic; Keeping our Boys and Girls Happy on the Farm, Sister Bliss of North Franklin; farce comedy, Mrs. Black's Pink Tea, women of Groton Grange.

HOOVER CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH WELCOMES PASTOR

At the Hoover parish house, Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, Rev. and Mrs. Dwight C. Stone were formally welcomed to the church and community by the members and friends of the Hoover Congregational church. The (illegible) were attractively decorated with potted ferns and flowers. At the reception (illegible) and Mrs. Stone were assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Hazen, Wm. S. (illegible) and Miss Helen Eadie, while W. G. (illegible), H. A. Adams and F. W. Lebourveau served as ushers.

Wm. C. Park as chairman of the committee called upon Wm. S. Lee, the senior deacon of the church, who welcomed Rev. and Mrs. Stone to the fellowship of the Hanover church. Rev. Mr. Stone responded, saying that he and Mrs. Stone were very happy to come to work together with the Hanover people for the things in life which will last.

A short musical program, given by several local artists added much to the enjoyment of the evening. Those assisting at the musical included Mrs. Thomas Bamford, Mrs. F. L. Smith, Miss Jane C. Gallup, Mrs. Wm. G. Park, Mrs. John Robish, Miss Gertrude Ladd and Miss Minnie Lord.

Following the program the guests were invited to sit down at small tables, where they were served fresh strawberry ice-cream, cake and coffee. All enjoyed a pleasant social time. Everyone felt that the reception was a success. It is the hope of both church and minister that in the future Hanover will be a happier and better place to live in because of this new relationship.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY Read

I saw Thy cross! 'Twas only yesterday
I came upon it in the market place.
A beggar (he had once been overseas)
Bore it. And mirrored in his sightless eyes
I saw Thy face.

I saw Thy thorns. They pressed into the brows
Of starving children. (Oh, that they, so small,
Should wear such crown!) And then —as childish lips
Moved pleadingly, while men, unmindful, passed—
I heard Thee call.

I saw Thy tomb—where crosses stretched for miles
Like wraiths o'er Chateau-Thierry. A stone lay
Before its portal carved in blood—thus: YOUTH.
And in its shadow men still planned for wars.
Christ—rise—TODAY!

Graveyards Rhymes

Lies slumbering here, one William Sykes.
He heard the bell, but had no brake.
At fifty miles drove Allie Pidd,
He thought he wouldn't skid but did.
At ninety miles drove Eddie Shawn,
The motor stopped, but Ed kept on.
Here he sleeps, one Johnny Fonker,
He rounded a curve without a honker.
Down in the creek sleeps Jerry Bass,
The bridge was narrow—he tried to pass.
Beneath these stones sleeps William Raines,
Ice on the hill, he had no chains.
And here what's left of Samuel Small,
He never saw "SLOW" signs at all.
That ash pile there is Billy Hatch,
He looked in his gas tank with a match.

WAYS TO USE HAM

Dear Social Corner Sisters: This week I want to tell you some good ways to serve ham.

Stewed ham, egg and eggplant: Remove the skin, cut the 1 eggplant in slices one half inch thick, sprinkle them with salt and pile on a plate cover with a weight and let stand two hours to press out the juice. Drain, dredge with flour fry slowly, first one side and then on the other to a golden brown. Lay a slice of boiled ham on each slice of eggplant, top with poached egg and serve with Hollandaise sauce.

Creamed ham and Potatoes: 1 cup [illegible] cooked ham, 2 cups [illegible] potatoes diced, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 and a half cup milk, [illegible] minced parsley, one teaspoon pepper, salt and pepper, [illegible] 3 tablespoon flour. Butter, add chopped pepper [illegible] and cook slowly for 3 minutes, stir in the flour then add milk and cook until thickened and smooth, add ham, seasoning and potatoes, cover and reheat over the fire in a very slow fire for 5 to 10 minutes, sprinkle with parsley and serve very hot.

Broiled Ham: One thick slice of [illegible] meat pan very hot—lay ham on it to reduce the heat and cook slowly, cover the pan to allow the ham to steam the last few minutes of cooking. When tender and delicately browned remove to platter and serve.

Ham a la King: 2 cups diced baked ham, one-half cup water, one-half cup evaporated milk, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 tablespoon butter, half teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, quarter teaspoon celery salt, one-half cup sauted mushrooms, 2 egg yolks, one tablespoon diced green pepper, half cup pimento cut into thin stripe. Put water, evaporated milk, egg yolks and seasoning into a sauce pan. Melt fat and then add flour which is added to the liquid. When the liquid has reached the simmering point add the diced ham, green pepper, mushrooms and lastly the pimentoe. Serve on toast.

Creamed Ham Patties: One half cup diced cold cooked ham, one tablespoon chopped pimento, 1 loaf bread (dry or old) one half cup cream sauce, half teaspoon salt and pepper. Mix, cut bread in six pieces trim off crust cut in squares and hollow out center. Add ham and seasoning to cream sauce. Toast the hollow bread squares or brown in deep hot fat, fill with creamed ham and serve at once. Garnish with parsley.

Denver Sandwich: Three-fourths cup boiled ham chopped very fine, one small onion chopped fine, 1 dill pickle chopped fine, 2 eggs beaten lightly. Beat all together and fry in pure leaf lard. Toast two slices of bread, butter them, put mixture between slices and trim. Serve with sliced dill pickles for garnish.

Ham and Egg Salad: One-half cup diced cold boiled ham, 3 hard-boiled eggs diced, three-fourths cup mayonnaise. Mix together and sew on lettuce heart. Garnish with stuffed olives and parsley. Serve very cold.

I want to thank the editor for the prize pin.

Maple Leaf, Lorna and many others sent me Easter cards and I want to thank them all. Also Eca for the Easter booklet.

DAILY DOZEN

Dear Editor and Corner Members: To Fanny and other members who will care to try my daily dozen, don't give them up when you feel a little lame, don't try to do them all in one day, don't try to do them in a closed room, always stand before an open window, or better still in the open air, don't wear tight clothes when doing any of these exercises, follow directions and watch the scales and I am sure you will be more than satisfied.

No. 1. Stand erect, head thrown back, and chest forward. While inhaling a long breath through the nostrils raise your arms above your head, [illegible] the air in the lungs from eight to ten seconds than exhale slowly through the mouth at the same time lowering the arms to the side of the body. This breathing movement should be taken every morning and evening in the open air or before an open window, starting with three inhalations, and increasing the number by one daily until ten are taken at each exercise. This breathing exercise is taken in connection with the reducing movements, and will also be found very invigorating if taken when slightly fatigued. Do not start the second movement until you have exercised the deep breathing one week.

No. 2. Stand erect, spread the legs two feet apart, hold the knees perfectly stiff, bend down so that the fingers touch the floor and rise to erect position. This reduces the abdomen and stretches the muscles of the back, legs and arms. Repeat this movement two times a day in the beginning, increasing two daily until ten are taken. Don't forget the deep breathing.

No. 3. Bring the feet close together, touch the floor with the palms of the hands, keeping the knees straight, then rise to erect position (this may seem hard at first, but if you do it slowly at first you will soon be able to do it very easily.) Begin with two movements a day, increase by one or two daily until ten are taken. Take deep breathing daily.

No. 4. Stand erect, spread the legs one foot apart, knees straight, touch the outside of the left foot with the fingers of the right hand and the same with the left hand on the right foot using a swinging movement. Do not move your feet. As this makes a rapid heart action at first do not do it fast until you have tried it at least a week. Repeat this movement two times a day (with each hand) in the beginning,—increasing one daily until six are taken.

No. 5. Stand erect, feet together, knees stiff, take a short stick or pencil and grasp it with both hands then swing them high to the right of you and then to the left twisting your body at the waist as far as possible. Do not move your feet. Begin with four movements at the start and increase one daily until ten are taken.

No. 6. Lie perfectly flat on the floor with toes up, hands above the head and raise the legs very slowly without bending the knees as far over your head as possible. Gentley resume the position of lying flat on the floor. Take the above exercise once a day, the first week, the second week increase to three, the third week and later increase to five. This exercise is strenuous but valuable if carried out carefully. Don't forget the daily deep breathing.

These exercises may seem long and hard but they are not. They will make you a bit lame at first, but that will soon pass, then the fun begins because its a lot of sport to do them. I have seen two people benefited by them, one myself, but with me I indulged too much and failed to watch the scales and consequently I took off a little too many inches. Even now I cant resist the temptation of trying them even though I know it is reducing.

Sassy: I wish you success. Don't get disappointed when you become a little lame because that goes with it.

Best wishes to all,

STANZA.

GREETINGS FROM EVELINE BURR

Dear Social Corner Friends: Owing to illness in my household I have had no chance to write of late or to attend the club meetings at the B. M. but so far have snatched a few minutes for reading the Social Corner page each week and to note the growth in numbers as well as in interest. As Social Corner pins have been provided by our thoughtful editor I would like to have one. A pin is easier to wear than a ribbon.

Jennie: As a child I used to look forward to a call at Quaker Billy Rose's farm as there was a splendid peacock there that would sometimes spread his wonderful tail for our benefit. We used to go there to have rag carpets and rugs woven.

Am sorry indeed that so many of our members are suffering from illness or accident. It certainly is a case of watching one's step on the street in these days.

Roxanna Keables: Do give us some more of those bright little stories. I have done my share of moving but never had a parrot on hand to make bad matters worse. I think my most trying experience was when we moved to a farm one very hot June day and on going to the well to get water we saw something floating on top which proved to be a woodchuck. How thirsty we were! Just about perishing for water, but that chuck, and no other well! Let me pause and leave the rest to your imagination. We certainly can survive a lot of unpleasant experiences, especially if we have a sense of humor.

With best wishes for our editor and all members.

TWO REQUESTED PIES

Dear Social Corner Friends: By request I'm sending two recipes.

Lemon Pie: Beat to a froth 1 teacup of sugar, the rind and juice of 1 lemon, yolks of 2 eggs at the last beat whites of eggs stiff and stir in with 1 tablespoon of sweet milk. Can use orange instead of lemon. Double the recipe for large pie.

Tyler Pie: 1 cup butter, 2 cups of sugar, 4 eggs, 1 cup of sweet milk, 2 tablespoons of flour, 2 teaspoons of ground cinnamon. Do not bake in too hot an oven.

I received the Social Corner pin on Thursday for which accept my thanks.

Whirlwind: You are quite excusable. Busy housekeepers can not carry out all of their good intentions. I fail to perform for others what I'd like to. Rather looked for you last Wednesday, April 8.

Bess Starbright: Appreciated use of shawl as it is cool riding in evening. Thank you kind lady. Virgil was disappointed at not getting home. Dr. advised his remaining in hospital another week making four weeks in all, but we feel we have much to rejoice this Easter.

Wee Wee: Glad to have had you with us April 8. Some people are well again before I know they are ill. I'm slow.

CRETIA.

GREETINGS FROM R. I.

Dear Social Cornerites: Greetings to Thirty Two. I too have just finished seven pages of local correspondence for the daily paper and thought I would write a few lines for the Social Corner. Think I have been a correspondent a longer time than you have. Part of the time I have written for two papers but now for only one. I never got any money that way, but am glad to get the paper.

To Bee will say I live nearer to the Connecticut line than I do the Shore Line, but not near any village of Connecticut — guess again. I think the pins must be very nice for the members who can meet others, but I do not feel like asking for one as I never see any of the members.

The tapioca dessert from Bee sounds good. As the Corner page is so well filled lately I will make my letter brief.

Best wishes to all. R. I.

CHATTY LETTER FROM CRIMSON RAMBLER

Dear Corner Sisters: I wish first, to thank the editor for sending me the pin and hope now all the sisters will wear them so we can recognize one another on the street when we meet.

Balsam Fir: I thank you for reading matter you sent me.

I wish to thank all those who sent me Easter greetings—True Blue, Lorna, Maple Leaf, Merry Widow, Anna Z, Mavis, Balsam Fir, G. E. M., Eca, Interested Reader and a lovely letter from Aunty No. 1. I thank you for all kind information. Savilla and Savilla's Daughter: Say yours is too cute for anything. Don't you think it very appropriate? I certainly do.

I also wish to thank the many readers of the Corner page for the interest they have shown me by their kindness outside the circle. It is all very much appreciated.

Aunty No. 1: I too will shake hands with you in regards to the earlier writers. We have indeed had many nice times when our family was in its infancy. The nice times we used to have at your former home in Franklin at Coventry Lake and at the home of our dearly loved Aunt Abby, are all times to linger in our memories and never to be forgotten, by any of the members who attended them. I shall always remember the nice time we had with you at the cottage near the Golden Spur.

Maple Leaf: How did you and your pal, Lorna, get home Wednesday night with G. P.? Say, he is some colt. Don't you think I would like to hold the ribbons over him. Next time you come take your old standby, Elizabeth. I think he must have been afraid of the moon? How about it?

Eca: Your letter at hand. Have the tatting all finished for you, also the sample you asked for, it is done in yellow, the Social Corner color. I hope you may be able to copy it. I will show you about it if it bothers you any. Hope you have a nice time if L comes.

Savilla and Savilla's Daughter: What a lovely chat we did have last Tuesday. Only sorry I had to go so soon.

Paula: How did you manage last Thursday? Was it dark before you reached home? Did you know I had a caller the next day? Why didn't you take your team and come too?

U. C. E.: Have patience. We have something planned for you. Maybe you won't want us to come again very soon. How are the little Social Corner flowers? Are they in bloom yet? I think you should call your home the "Social Corner Cottage." With those yellow flowers in full bloom it is very easy to find you. Have patience. They say good things are worth waiting for. With best wishes to all.

REMEMBERED BY MANY FRIENDS

Social Corner Sisters and Editor: I received a large number of Easter cards from different friends and they were all very much appreciated by me as well as the kindly feeling which prompted the thought which made the act.

Many of them were from members of the Social Corner. Among the first was one from Bug, a whole package, which she sent with the message that "knowing I could not get out to select any she was sending a few that I might have the pleasure of remembering and sending out to a few at least while she was doing likewise." It was very kind and thoughtful of her. Thanks. Then Scottie, Rosy Posy, Delight, Dick's Wife, Interested Reader, Student, Whirlwind, Mavis, and another from Bug with a nice message in her own hand writing. Beside more than a dozen from friends who do not belong to the Corner but are friends who did not forget an old friend when she was shut in. I had two from Florida. One was loaded with grape fruit, a perfect sight, and another from Atlanta, Ga., all mean so much to me. I want to thank all for the remembrance, and hope I have not missed mentioning any. If so please know it was not an intended slight but an indication that I must be growing forgetful and that I am not growing younger.

One card had a verse on it which I want to send as a message to each one of the Social Corner Sisters as it was what I would like to go to them:

"Across the intervening miles
I send this word to say
That I am hoping yours may be
A joyful Easter Day."

I have not heard anything lately from Just Me. How is your health now? Trust it is improved since last I heard.

Betsy Trotwood: You asked me to give the date of my birthday and I have not done it but will this time. June 2, 1855. I did not know until last October when we spent the day together that Jack's Wife was your cousin as well as mine.

I think, as one sister wrote, it makes the letters more interesting to sign your home town as well as your pen name to them so I will to this one.

Mavis wrote me to know if I knew Lucille. So I answer yes, a few years ago she was a member of my family for about two years and was calling on me at the time Mavis' letter came. I am very glad to have the Social Corner pin and thank the editor for it.

With best wishes to all the Corner members.

HIS FIRST CUSTARDS

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: I may be a wee bit late in asking for my pin, but was very glad to know we were to have one, I have been sick with the grip for three weeks. I little thought when I wrote my last letter that I would be or could be so sick two days after. The man of the house had it first. He had only just got out of bed when I was taken with it. So he did the housework and took care of me. One day he made some custards, I told him how but he thought maybe I had forgotten something so he came and said, "You sure that is all, no flour or baking powder?" He had very good luck so he couldn't wait for me to try one. Somehow I didn't feel like eating any after they were made, but he would keep bringing one to me, and I would tell him I couldn't eat it, and in a short time he would be back with another custard. So at last I said take them away and when I want one I will tell you. A neighbor came in and he tried to give her one. She tasted of it and said it was good but couldn't eat it as it would spoil her supper. So at last a man came in and he forced one on him. He ate it and told him it was good. So after he went he came to me so pleased and said he had got rid of one of the custards. At last I felt better and I ate some of them and told him they were as good as I could make. One day he made some junket dessert and after he got it made he said, "Well if that turns out to be anything I will be surprised"

And I said, "Don't you think it will harden?" and he said "no." To which I said, "Wait about 20 minutes and see," and reported then that they had hardened.

Aunt Mary Jane: Tried your lemon pie No. 1 and found it very nice. That was no job for hubby.

THE MYSTERY DEEPENS

Dear Social Corner: I have recovered from the shock received while reading Grace's last letter.

Grace: If you did not know Yantic before 1895 you do not know anything about my boyhood days for I was a full grown man at that time. You said that a good sister gave Uncle Charlie away to you. Now I am wondering if some good sister is not trying to give me away. You also refer to a wedding in N. M. in 1900. Yes, I was at a wedding in N. M. in 1900. Now, Grace, are you sure that you were at that wedding, or has someone told you that I was there? You also speak of Betsy Trotwood. I have made some inquiries about her. If the information that I have received is correct she at one time taught school in Yantic and I think married a Yantic boy. If this be true I met her at the wedding in N. M. in 1900. I was located in New Haven at that time and came very near missing the ceremony as my train was late. Do you remember that? I am just thinking that you and Betsy have put your heads together in this just to keep me on the anxious seat but never mind I have been on that seat more than once and have been proven to be a good setter so let the good work go on.

I hope that the editor will send me a pin for I think that I may need two or three after some of these good sisters find out just who and what I am.

ARBOR DAY

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: The first thing I want to tell is that I have received my pin and am much pleased with it, although I shall always save my yellow bow as a keep sake.

The name Barbara was mispelled in my last letter. I have just been reading what Theodore Roosevelt says about Arbor day on April 15, 1907.

"It is well that you should celebrate your Arbor day thoughtfully for the nations need of trees will become serious. It goes on to say that a people without children would face a hopeless future, a country without trees is almost as hopeless."

I have lost four nice maple trees in front where my house was. Two have already gone, and two more need to be cut down. There are things we can't appreciate until we have lost them. I like The Tree, by Joyce Kilmer, who gave his life in France.

I think that I shall never see,
A poem lovely as a tree.
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast.
A tree that looks at God all day,
And lifts her leafy arms to pray,
A tree that may in summer wear,
A nest of robins in her hair,
Upon whose bosom snow has lain,
Who intimately lives with rain,
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree.

INTERESTED IN SHORE LINE

Dear Editor and Sisters: I planned to attend the April meeting at the Buckingham Memorial but owing to ill health when the day arrived was not able to go. I should like very much to have a pin.

O. D.: I can't say whether we have ever met or not. It is hard to tell who is who. Did you have a relative that kept store at Browning Mill, R. I.a number of years ago?

R. I., O. D., Helitrope and Willing Helper: Are you interested in a Shore Line club and near enough to join? Unless I am very much mistaken there are enough members along the Shore Line electrics between Groton and Westerly to form a club. Please lets hear from you.

Crimson Rambler: No hard feelings. It is fun to find out who is who, ha! ha!

Billie: Did you call March 16? Was out celebrating a bit. As you don't have a phone, can't you call from one of the neighbors?

Noank Brownie: Don't forget that promised call. We want to talk over the Shore Line club.

It is a beautiful day (Tuesday) and old ocean and is grand as it sparkles in the sunlight. I can see it from my window as I write. Best wishes to all especially to the sick and shutins as I know what it is to be shut in myself.

I remain as ever,

INTERESTED READER.

GREETINGS FROM ANNA MELL

Dear Cornerites: I just came for a little chat to say I too would be pleased to own one of the pins that so many speak of and will say thank you to editor in advance. I also thank all Social Corner sisters who sent me Easter and birthday cards. Olga Lucille, Goldenrod, Whirlwind, Mary France, Olive, Black Eyed Susie and Wrinkle sent Easter cards. Some chicken, Wrinkle! It is large enough for an "Old Hen" and another thing she has shed her tail, so has none.

Birthday cards were from Jennie, Clio, Conawah and Nema. Thanks to Nema for contents of envelope. I also received a number from friends outside the Social Corner. If there are any. I have not mentioned thank you just the same.

Mary France: Hope you are still gaining so you may be able to come to our next meeting in Franklin hall.

Remember Me: Was glad to see a letter from you again. Hope your cold and cough are gone ere this.

Necia and Alma: Would be glad to see you at our meeting next month. I will now say adieu with all good wishes.

ANNA MELL.

PINEAPPLE BUTTERSCOTCH CAKE

Dear Corner Members: I have just tried a new dessert and as we think it good will give it to you.

Pineapple Butterscotch Cake: 2 cups flour, 3 level teaspoons baking powder, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 cup sugar, 1-2 cup butter, 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 2-3 cup milk. Cream sugar and butter, add eggs, beat well, sift flour, baking powder and salt twice, then add to creamed butter and sugar alternately with the milk. Have some butter melted and pour some into your cake pan so it will have a good coating, then sprinkle well with brown sugar. On this place half slices of pineapple with a marachino cherry in the center of each. Pour cake batter over this and bake about 45 minutes in moderate oven. After removing from oven let stand a few minutes then invert on a plate. Serve warm with or without whipped cream. I use an angel cake pan. One can buy a pan that has a larger tube in the center space when serving. When I wish to make a small dessert I use only about half the batter and bake the rest in cup cake tins. This sounds fussy and expensive but it really is not. It is very good with canned peaches or apricots. Hope some one will try it.

O. D.: Your pie crust recipe came out fine. Have had another recipe for pie crust given me. When I try it out if it proves good will send it to you.

Conondrum: I tried your cake made with cream and it is delicious. I see there is talk about a Shore Line club. I think that would be fine. I am quite sure I know of several Cornerites who would be eligible to it if they will only show their colors. Then members of other clubs would have a new place to go visiting. A little bird told me what one of the sisters on the Shore Line said she might do to help start a club so you who live on that line better let folks know it if you want to get in on the ground floor of something good. I received my Social Corner pin and say "thank you."

I am so glad we have them.

COFFEE MAKING AND REDUCING

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I see that my directions given a few weeks ago for making coffee the pure food or tricolator way was not quite clear to some of the social Corner sisters.

A leaflet of about a dozen pages giving and illustrating the pure food method of coffee making is printed for the tricolator and is very interesting. They are free either at the coffee stores or by mail.

The tricolator paper filter used in filtering the coffee comes ready cut in round shape and is called a silky filter. These silkey filters sell at five cents per fifty, and fit into any common coffee strainer. With a good coffee pot and a coffee strainer and a silkey filter for each time you make coffee the pure food way without the expense of a tricolator which in small size sells for $3.

I have heard from the stout lady I promised I would help by writing a formula that would reduce her without giving up the eats that she is so fond of and is not willing to give up. One of the sisters, I have forgotten her pen name, thought she knew of a way of reducing "eat or no eat" but I have not seen her way yet though I have looked for it.

The stout lady I wrote about has written in her letter to me that the French concoctions she is so fond of just naturally slip down her throat, even after my warning her to masticate her food until there is no pleasure in it and then spit out the bulk. She writes that there does not seem to be any bulk to the most delectable foods and she does not seem to lose any weight. So it has given up. My formula for reducing I guess is no good. There is no use in telling her what to eat or what not to eat, or to masticate her food and spit out the bulk or exercise or count the meters for she does not eat to live but lives to eat and an early grave is her doom.

Where shall we camp this summer?

ALOISE JANET.

ASKING HELP.

Dear Sisters of the Corner: Will some of the sisters please tell me how to keep a robe of brown bear skin through the summer months from moths?

Canterbury Bell: Do you take up the roots of tulips or leave them in the ground? I am coming up to see your wonderful flower garden this summer. I have been there once. Do not live very far from you.

Some are telling how they chose their pen names. I was always clipping something from the Social Corner page so I thought I would sign my name "Clip." Only wish I had time to try all of the things I have cut out.

I would like one of those pins, so much talked of. Will be on the look out now for members, by the sign of the pin.

I might get up enough courage to attend one of your meetings some day. If I go I shall have to go alone, and that is why I have never been before this I have all that house cleaning to do and lots of it too, but I too am waiting for the good warm weather and sunshine, when I can open up all the doors and windows, meantime I am busy at something else. There is plenty to be done.

Best wishes to all.

CLIP.

CHASED BY A BULL

Dear Social Corner Editor, Sisters, and Brothers: Here I am again with my best wishes to the new members. Coe often. My Biddy Ann says old folks can talk of nothing else except when they were young! Yes, I'm old. How old, I should hate to tell. This letter is a sort of second chapter, the first chapter appearing in the Corner page under date of Dec. 27 1924. Just a true story of things that happened to sister and I down on the farm. One day Sis was sent on an errand to the next farm. On returning home she took a short cut through the pasture and started to cross through the orchard where the bull was turned out every day for air and exercise.

Sis knew this and ought never to have gone. No doubt she forgot about the beast for when she was about midway of the orchard the animal spied her. He was a big fellow and very ugly. He put down his head and with a dreadful roar he ran straight for her. Sis was too frightened to think. She was too far from the fence on either side to make it. She couldn't climb a tree the limbs were too high. Sis was only twelve but she seemed older. She tore off her dress which didn't require much effort, threw it in the direction of the animal which attracted his attention. A little to one side and quite near the bars was an old well which was dry and partly filled with rubbish. Sis knew of this well and ran with all her might for it and had just time to fall in. It was about five feet deep. She looked up and over her head stood his majesty tearing and raving. Sis stayed in this hole until the hired man came for the bull. Poor Sis, she was more dead than alive as we helped her out. I carried her on the wheel barrow to the sawill house and helped her onto the bunk where the hired man slept. I then filled a cocoanut shell with milk coming down the trough from the milk house into a large tub where it was used to feed the hogs, gave it to her and it made her feel better. She saw a snake and ever so many lizards down the well. Sis got boolded for staying so long away. Nothing was said by any of us about what happened in the orchard.

We are all glad spring is here. Hope all the sisters and brothers will be able to get out and enjoy the nice weather.

Yes, Mr. Editor, I would like a pin, please.

Now a recipe for Biddy doughnuts and I will say good bye for this time.

Biddy Ann Doughnuts: 3 eggs, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup sour milk, 3 teaspoons melted butter, 1 teaspoon soda, pinch salt, 1-2 teaspoon baking powder. Flour to roll out. Flavor with nutmeg or lemon.

LULAR WYLIE.

SURE CURE FOR DANDRUFF

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: I am sorry Sister H. that you lost your Social Corner issue of The Bulletin in which I wrote about the hair and the cure of dandruff. In response to this same help one person has written as follows:

I have followed your advice about the care of hair and now I am rid of that awful mess of dandruff. I had my scalp sore from rubbing it. My small daughter has been troubled with dandruff and it is also doing her scalp good and I hope she will have beautiful hair now.

I thank you with all my heart."

Also a lady from Rochester, N. Y., stopped and thanked me for that letter concerning the hair. She said, "That was a wonderful letter."

There are people right here in the city who have cured themselves of dandruff through the help I sent to the Corner.

For the benefit of Sister H. and others I will repeat the sure cure for dandruff and a preventive for falling hair.

Few of us are free from the ills of the hair which isn't so astonishing when one stops to realize how little most of us know of it's structure and its needs.

I will help you greatly to understand what treatment your hair requires to make and keep it healthy and luxuriant if you will remember each hair is placed in a little bulb or flask which are called follicles, exist in the cuticle and that the bottom of each is the germ of the hair. The germ is called the hair papilla and upon it rests the bulbous roots of the hair. This is of course beneath the surface of the skin and the only part of the hair visible to us is called the shaft.

It is from the papillae that the hair receives its nourishment, which in turn is provided by a wonderful net work of blood-vessels. When a hair falls out, a new one should start at once or sprout at once from the germ of the papilla and until the papilla is dead, fallen hair can and will be replaced.

On each side of the follicle near the tiny opening through which the hair emerges from the scalp, the tiny sacks of oil called the sebacceous glands which pour their contents into the follicle and out along the hair, to keep the latter from becoming dry and brittle and giving it the satin smoothness which most of us covet.

If the scalp is not kept clean and healthy, the oil dries about the tiny orifices in the scalp, adds to itself the flying dust of the atmosphere, creates the condition we call dandruff, chokes up the follicles, affects the health of the sebaceous glands, and so, in turn finally destroys the vitality and life of the hair itself.

A shampoo once in two weeks is essential for the ordinary hair. Take soap tree bark, 2 tablespoons, steeped in a quart of water three hours, strain and, wash the hair with it. Rinse it well.

To have thick glossy hair and to keep your scalp free from dandruff there are just four things you must claim for yourself, good blood, free circulation in the scalp, unclogged follicles, and the normal amount of oil from the industrious little sebaceous glands.

Feel of your scalp. Does the skin cling close to the skull and refuse to move and forth upon it at the touch of your fingers? Then the little blood vessels are shut tight and prevented from doing their work, and soon you will see your hair will fall out and you will find dandruff.

Scalp massage is the agent to employ here and should be applied night and morning. Press the finger-tips (close together) to the scalp and with a gentle pressure rub the scalp in a circular manner causing the scalp to move. This will prevent dandruf, stop hair falling out and make it grow. The object is to loosen it as much as possible and bring a warm glow to it by causing the blood to flow to the surface. When this is accomplished, move the fingers to another spot, and in this way go over the whole scalp. If the hair is very dry, a very small amount of vaseline may be rubbed in by the fingers but applied to the scalp only, as any grease will cause the hair to lie flat, if applied to the hair itself.

Keep your brushes washed clean, also your comb, and give yourself a ten minute rotary massage night and morning. Any man or woman whose hair is not entirely dead and who will keep the body in fair condition can cause a new growth of hair to appear, can thicken and lengthen the hair already possessed and can give it life and color and vitality so that it will begin to have that look which we call "life."

Surely this ought to be incentive to warrant expenditure of ten minutes nightly and in the morning.

Remember I say that there is almost no ill which may not be benefitted if not entirely cured by the persistent application of scalp massage and I know it will positively cure dandruff and hair falling out—if you are afflicted with it now. And if you are free from it just keep up your massage night and morning and you will never have it.

ANSWERING ROLL CALL

Dear Editor and Sisters: I think we are having roll call again so will say "present." Would be pleased to have a club pin.

I think I know Mary Sunshine and she took the right name all right. What has become of your sister E. Don't remember her pen name. Maybe I. J. B. will tell me. I have started housecleaning and have got my garden started, have eleven young broilers and find time to go after artubus which is one of my favorite flowers.

What a grand day for Easter Hope every one enjoyed it as well as I did, and hope all the shut ins were remembered in some way.

Best wishes to all.

AURALEE. (Dec. 5.)

ANOTHER CORNER MEMBER

Social Corner Editor: I would like to join the Social Corner and will take for pen name, M. E. B. (May 25.)

WHY NAME PRUDENCE WAS TAKEN

Dear Editor and Social Corner here: I have not written in quite a while. Perhaps the members would like to know why I took Prudence as my pen name. Prudence is an island off the coast of Rhode Island, and is a very beautiful spot, where I have spent many happy days there with an aunt and my late husband, who have both been called to a higher life. In memory of those loved ones and the many happy days I spent with them on this island I have taken the name of Prudence. May I ask the editor if my name has been registered in the Social Corner list?

Please reserve a Social Corner pin for me? Those who cook may be interested in a recipe for

Buckwheat Cakes: 1-3 cup fine bread crumbs, 2 cups scalded milk, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-4 yeast cake, 1-2 cup lukewarm water, 1 3-4 cups buckwheat flour, 1 tablespoon molasses.

Pour milk over crumbs, and soak 30 minutes; add salt, yeast cake dissolved in lukewarm water and buckwheat to make a batter thin enough to pour. Let rise over night, in the morning stir well, add molasses one fourth teaspoon soda dissolved in one fourth cup lukewarm water, and cook same as griddle cakes.

WHEN YANTIC WAS AT ITS BEST

Dear Social Corner Friends: Have read your letters each week, and do my bit. I understand there are some Social Corner pins (or buttons.) I think it is fine that we have at last got a pin or button, now if the Social Corner members will only wear them. I for one will wear mine (when I get it.) I have been much interested in the letters of N. O. T. Uncle Charlie and others who knew Yantic in its best days. The village was my home for 16 years and though I have been away from there many years I always think of Yantic as home, very few of my old friends are there now, and the village doesn't look much as it did 20 years ago.

Grace: Did you ever hear N. O. T. sing, "I am dying for someone to love me?" I did more than 20 years ago and the memory of the singer always makes me smile.

Ma of Greens Gables certainly has "beat us all out" at house cleaning. Am glad she has been so lucky. I wish it never had to be done. How we do dig and clean and fight dirt day after day. I often think of a neighbor one of my relatives had who was an "easy going" house keeper and did not fight dirt much. One day she was scolding a neighbor because she worked so hard, and was always fighting dirt. She said, "There's no sense in cleaning all the time to get rid of dirt. Why, sometime you will be buried in dirt after you are dead, and the neighbor said, "That's all right, but I don't want to be buried in dirt before I am dead, and I will be if I don't keep cleaning all the time."

The easy going housekeeper had four in her family while the one who was always cleaning had ten children.

Now it seems that some of the sisters think that our sister J. E. T. was in the accident at Harland's Corner a few weeks ago. I understood it was a sister-in-law of J. E. T. who was injured. I hope J. E. T. will write to the Social Corner and let us know.

Joan: Did you ever live in Yantic? Perhaps I knew you. I left the village soon after the stone bridge was built. Were you there at that time?

GREETINGS FROM SCOTTIE

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: I hope you are well this nice spring weather. I should have written before, but have been housecleaning and doing some extras too. Hope I am not too late for a pin. It is very good of the editor to present each member with one.

Red Clover: Glad you are doing so well and hope to see you soon. Cheer up it will soon be time for you to get into that chair you spoke of.

Anna Mell: Don't think I have forgotten you, but have mislaid your address. Will find it soon.

I meant to write soon after we were up there at Club No. 1's anniversary and tell Practical Polly, Theoda, Elsie Jane, and the other helpers how we enjoyed it all, except the accident.

Delilah Deal: Will write you soon. Sorry you have had such a hard time all winter.

Best wishes to all.

SCOTTIE.

MANY EASTER CARDS RECEIVED

Dear Social Sisters: I wish to thank those sending cards for Easter—Black Eyed Susie, Bug, Lo, Calla Lily, True Blue, Scottie, Delight, Maple Leaf, Marigold and Lucy Acorn and, if so any others.

What a delightful Easter we did have—a perfect day.

Red Clover: I hope you are recovering from your misfortune. I know it will take a long time. I thought I would get to see you, but something happens each time.

Scottie: I thought you would go to N. L. the 15th but was told you were not going. I think it worth while to go.

Lucy Acorn: I would love to see your little white chicks. They must be lovely. My lemon tree is blossoming so perhaps I will have a lemon. I did not have one last year.

Best wishes for the Corner.

NECIA.

"BETTER NEVER LATE"

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: I think it about time I answered present to the roll call. They say better late than never. But an old English lady told me once, better never late.

I have been shut in over a week, with a grip cold, the third one since Christmas and think I have had my share.

Crimson Rambler: How are you? Sometime when you are calling on Maple Leaf get her to bring you over and see me.

Maple Leaf and Lorna: You have got us all beat in getting around, for you are out calling on all the sick and afflicted ones. Good Samaritan.

I hope the editor will not forget me, when he passes the pins around as I should like very much to have one.

As the sisters are giving out riddles, I am going to ask you all, what is smaller than a little red ants mouth? If you don't know, I will tell you in my next.

Best wishes to all.

G. E. M.

SHRINK CLOTH FIRST

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: I want to thank the editor for my yellow slip of quite a long while ago but I didn't write for I ran a paring knife into my wrist trying to open a hubbard squash. Had it in a sling for a while but it's all right now. Thanks True Blue for Easter card and Honey B, Mrs. F. B. and Scottie. I am quite busy now trying to take care of little chicks with the other work and sewing some.

How many of you when making a gingham dress take the cloth and put into a pan of cold water with a little salt (the salt sets the color) and then hang loosely on the line? It takes a little time but I had rather do the extra work before than after it shrinks.

How is Red Clover?

EFFIE M.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC CORNER MEMBER

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: First I must say I want to answer the roll call which I should have done before. I was away when my name was called so will answer present now. I would like to say I think our Social Corner gatherings are very pleasant and entertaining, with each one trying to do all the good possible with a kind word and smile and a hearty hand shake. I know I always feel so pleased and happy after I have been to a Corner meeting. Am so glad we can help our sisters sick in the hospitals and do hope Red Clover and Catnip will be with us soon as we miss their smiling faces. So good to see Ga Ga again with eyes all well.

Would be so pleased to have a Social Corner pin.

ALL THE SIGNS OF SPRING

Dear Social Corner Friends: Just a few lines. We had a wonderful Easter day and I attended church at Grary. We have a smart speaker, a Mr. Brown from New Brunswick.

Spring is here for fair. I gathered arbutus three weeks ago. It is also so nice to hear frogs.

Have been having horse radish from our garden.

Enjoyed the full page and would like to know how I am to get a button. Many thanks for Easter cards.

NEW LONDON VOLUNTEER FIRE CO. REACHES DIAMOND ANNIVERSARY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 17—Nameaug Engine company is to celebrate its anniversary as the oldest fire organization in New London Saturday evening at its station on Masonic street. The event is expected to bring out members who were active in the organization many years ago, some of them having had membership more than fifty years. The mayor, city manager, members of the city council, officers of the fire department in executive positions and members of other fire organizations will be present. The anniversary is the 75th. There was a time when no other company in the fire department had the membership that Nameaug had, for it numbered the business and professional men of the city. Its fire-house was furnished elaborately, chiefly at the expense of the members and it was a semi-independent organization. The company began as the Independent Blues. The War of the Rebellion drew largely upon its membership for the army, but younger men succeeded those who enlisted in the ranks and the rolls of the company never decreased much. There is no member in official position in the company now who was there some years more years ago, but on its membership roll are several who date back from forty to fifty years and have some who were associated with the company as members a longer time than that even.

John M. O'Neill, who has been residing in Philadelphia, where he has a wife and two minor children of five and three years, is under arrest here as a fugitive from justice, in that he left Philadelphia, deserting his family and came to New London. He is now employe of the Robert Gair company at Montville. Mrs. O'Neill was Agnes Shea before her marriage. O'Neill was presented in the police court this forenoon. His attorneys resisted extradition, but the necessary papers will be forthcoming on the 20th inst when officers from Philadelphia will come here with Gov. Trumbull's authority to take O'Neill from the state. The case must be fought out in the courts of Philadelphia, as the alleged failure of O'Neill to provide for his wife and children was committed in that city. He is held here in a bond of $1,000. The accused man declares that he forwarded money to his wife and that she declined to accept it. Evidently the whole story has not been told and upon what it will depend the almost immediate future of the case in the local court.

To the police, when Mrs. Smith reported the absence of her son from home, she declared that she would not be surprised if her son had committed suicide. Mrs. Smith declared that her son was mentally weak and on several occasions recently he had intimated that he would bring about his self-destruction. The son was about his home as usual Wednesday, but during the afternoon he disappeared and since that time Mrs. Smith has been unable to obtain any information as to the whereabouts of the man. She instituted a search herself, and failing to obtain any clues, decided to go to the police station and seek assistance in locating Smith. The missing man is described as being about five feet, 10 or 11 inches in height, medium stout, has blonde hair, light brown eyes, one or two moles on his face and tattoo decorations on his chest, shoulders and arms.

If I have him guessed right, his mother and I were great friends, both times. I lived in Yantic, as a girl, in my teens, and later, after I was married. FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS STRONG

New York, April 17—Another outburst of strength in the motor issues was the outstanding development in the rising stock market. Maxwell Motor B was the spectacular feature, soaring over 9 points to a record high at 87, against a price of about $10 a year ago, as shorts scurried to cover. Mack Trucks was lifted up over four points to 149 1-4 also a record top. Trading was in moderate volume, the day's sales approximating about one and one quarter million shares.

Standard industrials displayed a strong undertone despite the easing of basic commodity prices and the spotty condition of business generally. U. S. Steel common closed more than a point higher at 117 1-2, Baldwin climbed nearly two points to [illegible] and American Can showed a fractional gain at 123 1-4. The recovery in the general list was aided by the firm ruling in grain prices and the continued ease of money rates, which enabled pool operations. International Harvester jumped [illegible] points to 108 1-4 on reports that the demand for [illegible] equipment was unusually heavy. Otis Elevator was bid up 5 1-2 points to a new peak at 114 1-2 on the announcement that the company had [illegible]

CURB MARKET

New York, April 17—Stock prices showed considerable irregularity in today's curb market, but with the exception of the domestic oils, which were heavy in reflection of unfavorable trade developments, the main trend was upward. South Pennsylvania Oil broke ten points to 155 in response to the recent cut in Pennsylvania Crude prices and then rallied to 159. Losses of about a point each were recorded by Penn-Mex Fuel and Prairie Pipe. South American oils were strong under the leadership of American Maracaibo which crossed 7 to a new high record for the year on reports of important developments.

Chief interest in the public utilities centered in the brisk demand for Electric Power and Light which touched a new high record at 48 7-8, closing slightly below the top for a net gain of more than one point.

Radios took on a new lease of life when Dubilier was pushed up over three points to 19 and Liberty Chain Stores was bid up within a small fraction of the year's high.

Industrials were mixed. Duz rallied a point and Nizer Class A common, which was offered yesterday at $35 a share sold as high as 39 3-4. Continental Baking A sagged a point. The new Dodge Brothers Class A common was admitted to trading, opening at 25 1-8, advancing to 25 1-4 and then selling down to 24 1-8.

BOND MARKET

New York, April 17—Rising prices again characterized today's bond market, which was featured by a brisk upturn in French obligations in response to the creation of a new cabinet headed by Premier Painleve. Although the advance was not uniform, it embraced most of the representative railroad and industrial issues. United States government bonds failed to follow up their recent gains.

Recoveries of the French issues from the extreme lows reached on the temporary depression ranged from two points for the republic's 8s to almost six points for the 7 1-2s at today's best levels. Gains averaging about a point also were registered by the municipal, railroad and industrial obligations. The quick rally in French francs contributed to the strength of the bonds.

Although fresh signs of ease in the money market developed, liberty bonds barely held their own and some of the government's securities slid back from their 1925 peak prices, achieved this week.

Railroad liens continued to make progress, with trading stimulated by the good demand for the carrier stocks. Norfolk and Western Convertible sixes, New Haven 4s, St. Louis Southwestern fours and Chicago and Terre Haute Income 5s moved up a point or more. An advance in Atchison General 4s to a 1925 top price of 9, indicated the trend of the high grade rails.

Contrasting movements marked trading in the industrial list. American Writing Paper sixes and certificates sold 3 1-2 to 4 points higher and Virginia-Carolina issued extended their gains one to two and a half points. Magna Copper 7s, however, yielded 5 points on the company's announcement that the bonds would be called for redemption.

New offerings, including $26,000,000 Missouri Pacific sixes and $10,000,000 Columbia Gas and Electric 5s, were promptly absorbed.

IN MEMORIAM

In Memory of Our Dear Little Boy
ROBERT H. RICHMOND
Who Passed Away April 18, 1923
Aged 3 years, 8 months.

He is not dead—the child of our affection,
But gone unto that school
Where he no longer needs our poor protection,
And Christ himself doth rule.

In that great cloister's stillness and seclusion,
By guardian angels led,
Safe from temptation, safe from sin's pollution,
He lives whom we call dead.

MOTHER, FATHER,
BROTHER AND FAMILY.

IN LOVING MEMORY of my Dear Husband

The models were Norwich girls and the show was given on the raised platform which went out through the drill shed of the armory giving a fine view of the models for a distance of over 100 feet as they displayed the gowns and wraps.

Among the models were the Misses Dorothy Messier and Amie March, the others having been mentioned previously.

ROTARY FALL CONCLAVE FOR EASTERN POINT AGAIN

At the spring conference of the 26th Rotary district held Friday at Pittsfield, Mass., it was voted to hold the annual fall conclave at the Hotel Griswold, Eastern Point. The conclave will be held either the last week in August or the first week in September and will be attended by between 1,000 to 1,200 Rotarians from Connecticut and Massachusetts.

The New London delegation did considerable campaigning to get the conclave again and due to their efforts and the fact that the delegates from other places remembered the good time they had last summer, New London won.

HEAVY SNOW, CYCLONIC WIND VAGARIES OF APRIL WEATHER

Many Buildings Were Unroofed in Pennsylvania and Ohio—Ten Persons Were Injured Near Wheeling, W. Va.,—In New Hampshire Five Inches of Snow Had Fallen Up to Sunday Afternoon—Traffic Was Hampered and Minor Accidents Have Been Reported—Deluge of Rain and Snow Throughout New England.

Wheeling, W. Va., April 19—A severe storm swept Eastern Ohio and the West Virginia panhandle early this afternoon and wrecked business buildings and residences at Wheeling, Weirsburg, W. Va., Martins Ferry, Ohio, Woodsfield, Ohio, and a dozen other small Ohio and West Virginia communities.

Ten persons were injured, two of them seriously at Wheeling and unconfirmed reports from Ohio indicate many injured. No deaths have been reported.

Wheeling's streets were littered with debris. Roofs were blown from buildings and in some instances carried one hundred feet away. A heavy cornice was twisted from the Union Trust Company building and five automobiles in the street below were caught in a falling mass of stone and timbers. Among those caught in the cars were Dr. W. P. McLain, city health commissioner; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Parkinson of Bellaire, Ohio, Louis J. Holmes and John Engler of Wheeling. All were injured.

One automobile was blown through a plate glass window.

Several manufacturing plants were damaged in the river front section of the city.

ELECTRIC LIGHTS WERE PUT OUT OF COMMISSION

St. Clairsville, Ohio, April 19—A terrific wind and rain storm visited this section, putting electric lights out of commission, unroofing buildings and breaking windows. Light frame buildings were carried far from their original sites.

CHURCH WAS UNROOFED DURING SERVICES

Woodfield, Ohio, April 19—The roof of the Christian church, five miles from here, was ripped off and carried one hundred yards into a field during a heavy wind storm. The church was filled with worshippers but no one was injured.

SNOW CURTAILS TRAFFIC AT SARANAC LAKE

Saranac Lake, N. Y., April 19—Sleigh bells jingled in the streets here today as sleighing parties took advantage of nearly a foot of snow left after a storm which began this morning and ceased only tonight. The snow was one of the heaviest on record here for April.

Motor traffic was curtailed and many activities were stalled. Railroads were affected.

The snow was wet and heavy and made drift. It was expected the storm would cause mountain streams to flood the valley again.

SEVERAL HOUSES MOVED FROM THEIR FOUNDATIONS

Williamsport, Pa., April 19.—Several houses were moved from their foundations and a number of trees uprooted today by a severe wind storm near Lamont, between State College and Lock Haven. Motorists reported that one house had been completely overturned while nearby an entire orchard of large trees was destroyed by the wind. A heavy downfall of rain accompanied the storm.

No one was injured.

BUILDINGS UNROOFED AND POLES BROKEN

Greenburg, Pa., April 19.—A severe wind storm, accompanied by hail and rain, descended upon Greenburg and the surrounding country early this afternoon leaving scores of unroofed buildings, broken telegraph and telephone poles and shattered store windows in its wake. No loss of life has been reported here, but the damage to property is heavy.

The storm attained its greatest fury in this section at Irwin, where roofs were lifted from several buildings and carried considerable distances; barns were twisted from their foundations and trees uprooted. At the home of Frank Hessner two planks, carried by the high wind, were driven through the house with such force that they pierced the opposite wall. The family was not injured.

Loss at Lewiston, Pa.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 19—A score of houses and farm buildings were unroofed by a heavy wind storm which swept down the Kishocoquillas valley west of Lewiston this afternoon. At Belleville, the plant of the Belleville Flour Mills company caught fire during the storm and was destroyed with a loss of $100,000. A locomotive shed of the Kishocoquillas Valley railroad at Belleville collapsed, pinning two locomotives in the wreckage.

Five Inches of Snow.

Concord, N. H., April 19.—A snow storm which swept over this section of New Hampshire today in gusty flurries had piled up five inches by early evening. The storm, which began shortly after noon, was increasing at nightfall. Unusually heavy traffic due to the holiday week end was much hampered and several minor accidents occurred. An automobile operated by Mrs. Ethel Pittou, Marlboro, Mass., and containing her husband and child, plunged off the road near the bridge over the Merrimac river, down a 25-foot embankment and lodged between two trees at the water's edge. The occupants escaped injury.

SUPPER CLUBS CONSENT TO BEING PADLOCKED

New York, April 19—Federal Attorney Buckner tonight announced that the remaining five supper clubs and restaurants of the 14 against which he secured evidence of liquor law violation immediately before taking office, had consented to be padlocked for 30 days. The orders will be signed by Federal Judge Hand tomorrow.

Among the five is the Lido Venice restaurant which was visited by the prince of Wales. The others to be closed are the Club Mirador, Club Thearville, the Colony restaurant and the Monte Carlo. The Colony will be closed on April 30 and the others on April 3.

Mr. Buckner in announcing the padlocking, asserted that unless many new judges are appointed to this district and his staff greatly increased, the time spent in prohibition enforcement must be greatly reduced in justice to many other federal laws which have been very seriously neglected.

"The wide open and indiscriminate selling of liquor to all comers who have the necessary cash can be stopped immediately," he said, "if these groups who are so interested in the enforcement of the prohibition law will devote a few hours to the purchase of liquor instead of spending all their energies upon mass meetings and magazine articles."

Padlock complaints were filed by me against these restaurants on March 6. Within six weeks every restaurant has voluntarily accepted a padlock of one month or six weeks.

The time of our overworked judges and partially paralyzed courts has been saved, an average of one minute to each case being required of the court in signing a consent degree.

There have been no arrests, no bail bonds, no technical delays, and yet these proprietors who have talked to me have estimated their direct loss in pay-ing rent, maintaining organization and losing business at from $7,500 to $9,000 for the padlock period.

The demonstration has been complete."

DIED FROM SUFFOCATION IN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

Middleboro, Mass., April 19.—Jennie Hemmeteman, of Rose Bay, Lunenburg county, N. S., whose body was taken from the wreck of an automobile here Friday died of "suffocation in an automobile accident" in the opinion of Medical Examiners C. E. Morse of Wareham and A. C. Smith of Middleboro who completed a five-hour autopsy today. They sent a sealed finding to District Attorney Winfield M. Wilbur.

The girl's body was claimed by Mrs. [illegible] Smith of New York who said she would make arrangements for the funeral. Mrs. Smith is a half-sister. The [illegible] are looking for another girl said to be Celia Herbert of Lawrence, who was in the accident and has since disappeared. Augustine G. Daly of Lawrence, driver of the car, which was returning from Cape Cod will be arraigned on a charge of manslaughter in the district court tomorrow.

TO INCREASE POWERS OF NATIONAL BANKS

Washington, April 19—Four proposals designed to increase the powers of national banks have been placed before the membership of the United States Chamber of Commerce for a referendum vote.

The recommendations were drafted by a committee of the national chamber, which reported that "it is widely held that the national bank act of 1863 is in need of revision in order to clarify and modernize it and bring it fully into alignment with the federal reserve act."

The proposals, made public today, would provide that national banks, under regulation of the comptroller of the currency, be permitted to have branches within their own cities where state banks are permitted branches; that they be given indeterminate charters, subject to forfeiture for cause and termination at the will of congress; be authorized to deal in investment securities on a basis "not inconsistent with the generally recognized principles of sound banking practice," and also be authorized to make mortgage loans on city real estate for periods not in excess of five years.

TESTING QUICK LONG DISTANCE RADIO MESSAGES

Washington, April 19—Extensive tests of the possibility of high frequency radio communication over long distance will be conducted by the United States fleet in the Pacific in the next few months, including the period of the present Hawaiian manuevers and the trip to Australia.

During the stay in Honolulu, the fleet will endeavor to communicate with amateurs in Australia and the Philippines. They will use the signal code.

The navy for some time has been experimenting with high frequencies in the hope of reducing interference and improving transmission, and the tests this spring to be conducted probably from the umpire ship Seattle, as other radios in the fleet are "sealed" for this period, are looked to for important results.

ONE DEAD, SEVERAL INJURED WHEN CABLE SNAPPED

Baltimore, April 19.—One boy was killed and seven other persons were injured this afternoon when a cable snapped on a suspension bridge at Orange Grove, about 13 miles from this city. The bridge is 400 feet long and is used by pedestrians over the Patapsco river.

According to witnesses, 42 persons were crossing the span when a number of the children in the centre were jumping to make the bridge vibrate. A large cable snapped and most of the pedestrians were thrown into the river, a drop of 25 feet. The water is about five feet deep and jagged with large rocks.

Sherman Hunt, 13 years old, was killed when hit by the falling cable. Other persons suffered broken arms and legs in falling upon the rocks.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

Prince of Wales in Nigeria

Minna, Nigeria, April 19—After having danced until midnight last night at Kano, the prince of Wales left here this morning on the way to Lagos. He spent a comparatively quiet Sunday. The prince evidently received much benefit from the polo game in which he played yesterday. This was his first ride since March 28. The heat at Kano slightly affected the prince and some members of his staff, but not seriously.

Leak of Important Document

Paris, April 19—The leak of an important confidential document in which M. Francois-Marshal, while minister of finance last year, set forth the difficulties of the treasury and the borrowing expedients resorted to by the government, has caused a great stir in political circles here. There is much speculation as to who allowed the important document to fall into the hands of the press.

REVOLT IN LISBON WAS QUIETLY SUPPRESSED

Lisbon, April 19—Lisbon's latest revolution was short lived. It sprang into being Saturday morning, and after violent fighting throughout the night, the rebellious troops gave up their arms this morning and were confined in barracks.

Estimates of the casualties vary, but all agree that they were comparatively high for such a brief period of activity. There are numerous dead, and the wounded are reported at "some hundreds."

The actual revolt was under the leadership of Major Filomena Camara, who was supported by cavalry, artillery, and infantry, several hundred strong. Major Camara's first act was to overthrow the directory, the governing body, and to place a number of the officials under arrest.

President Teixeira Gomes and some of the ministers took refuge in the main barracks, and shortly afterwards, loyal troops surrounded the rebels at their meeting place, the Paco Da Rotondo. In the meantime serious disturbances occurred in various parts of the city, where bombs were thrown and many persons killed.

The actual leader of the movement is believed to have been Former Premier Cunha Leal. He is now a prisoner in the Carmo barracks of the republican guard. Another of the leaders arrested was the head of the nationalistas.

Not long after the revolt broke out on Saturday loyal troops had drawn a cordon around the revolutionary headquarters, cutting off reinforcements from the outside. At three o'clock yesterday afternoon, troops opened fire on the revolutionists and dropped large quantities of shrapnel into their stronghold. After all-night fighting, the rebellious troops hoisted the white flag in reply to the government ultimatum and surrendered. They explained later that they were unable to offer further resistance through lack of ammunition. Many of the revolutionists were killed or wounded, and General Sinel Cordes was taken prisoner.

A government announcement says that the revolutionaries had planned to place Cordes at the head of their ministry. A few of those most prominently concerned in the movement have taken refuge in the Spanish legation.

The whole country is reported now to be quiet, though meager news of sporadic risings in the provinces has filtered in.

LIQUOR SALE CHARGED AGAINST MONTVILLE WOMAN

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 19—Julia Wendt, of Montville, was taken into custody at 3:30 o'clock this morning when Sergeant Clifford Gorgas, Groton state police and Officers Caron, Nelson and Parrott raided the Wendt home following information the officers had received that liquor was sold there. The woman was brought to the New London police station and made a prisoner over night and this morning she procured a surety on her bond for her appearance before a justice's court in Montville Monday.

The arrest of the Wendt woman resulted, it is understood, by Andy Pachioda of Montville, revealing to the officers that he had purchased liquor at the Wendt home Saturday. Pachioda was arrested Saturday afternoon by Officers Caron, Nelson and Parrott but he was too drunk then to talk intelligently with the officers. Saturday night the officers queried Pachioda in his cell at the New London police station, and it is understood Pachioda then informed the officers that the Wendt woman sold him the liquor on which he became intoxicated. The arrest of the woman followed.

Faneuil Hall Was Rededicated Sunday

Governor Fuller Recalled the Events of 150 Years Ago.

Boston, April 19.—Calling on the American people to fulfill their obligations to the past and to posterity, General John J. Pershing, chief speaker at the re-dedication of Faneuil Hall, today recalled the events of 150 years ago now being celebrated in this city, and urged the maintenance and improvement of this country's institutions. Vice President Charles G. Dawes asked for the people's rededication to the ideals "which our forefathers died to establish."

"Our influence in international affairs has surpassed the most fanciful vision," Gen. Pershing said, "but with this has come an increase in our responsibilities. We must maintain and improve our institutions. If we fail, we shall revert to government by force of power. But we shall not fail. The courage of the American people, handed down by our forefathers, is a guarantee. Human liberty is ours to maintain, by force if need be, and to hand down inviolate to our children's children. Let us then so live as individuals among men and as a people among nations that through our example may be hastened the day when when freedom, justice and peace shall come to dwell among us."

Vice President Dawes received from the city of Boston through Mayor James M. Curley the presiding officer, a gavel made from a Newel post preserved from the original Faneuil hall, destroyed by fire in 1761. A roar of laughter in which Mr. Dawes joined, went up when Mayor Curley said that the vice president might find it useful in his dealings with the United States senate. General Pershing received a similar gavel.

"I am here not as an individual but as a representative of the government of the United States," Mr. Dawes said after the presentation. "I am glad that the greatest living American soldier is to make an address here today because the atmosphere of Faneuil hall is militant and full of fight. This has been a great battle ground, this country.

"This is a great occasion. I wonder if we cannot all rededicate ourselves and resolve to maintain the Constitution of the great republic, to maintain what our forefather died to establish."

The day's ceremonies had begun with a military parade including in its ranks Mr. Dawes and Gen. Pershing a squad of men in the uniform of the "Minute Men" of Lexington, the Ancient and Honorable Artillery, and representatives of patriotic societies. On reaching Faneuil hall, the minute men and color bearers marched down the aisles and the program began with the grouping the colors. At the end of the ceremonies, General Pershing presented a medal to Scout Thomas J. Smith of East Boston, for heroism in rescuing a comrade from beneath the ice in Boston harbor.

Other ceremonies of the day were exercises at the decoration of the graves of Paul Revere in the Granary burial ground, and of William Dawes, Jr., the vice president's famous ancestry, in the burying ground of King's chapel. The site of the home of William Dawes, Jr., was marked with a tablet presented by the city of Boston.

Tomorrow the rides of Paul Revere and Dawes through Middlesex county in 1775 to alarm the countryside will be re-enacted, General Pershing accompanying the impersonator of Paul Revere and Vice President Dawes that of his great-great-grandfather. Parades and exercises in Lexington, Concord and other towns connected with the ride will round out the celebration of the anniversary.

The graves of Revolutionary soldiers buried in Concord cemeteries were decorated today, after a parade, with 200 children of the American Revolution taking part. The Rev. Revere Frothingham of Boston delivered an address at commemorative exercises in the afternoon and there was a patriotic meeting in Monument hall tonight. At Lexington, a memorial guard and flags of the 48 states were stationed around Battle Green and exercises were held in the town hall by the Lexington Hosiorical society and Sons of the American Revolution.

BISHOP BROWN DID NOT SPEAK AT ST. MARK'S

New York, April 19—Bishop William Montgomery Brown, convicted of heresy last fall, did not speak this afternoon at St. Mark's in-the-Bouwerie, where he was scheduled to appear in spite of the inhibition laid upon him by Bishop Manning of the New York diocese of the Protestant Episcopal church.

Attracted by the statement last night of the Rev. William Norman Guthrie, rector of St. Mark's, that Bishop Brown would speak, although Bishop Manning had written Dr. Guthrie forbidding it, large crowds filled the church, and about 2,000 persons were turned away. No announcement of the change in programme was made until after the services.

Dr. Guthrie said that the failure of Bishop Brown to speak as advertised was "out of courtesy to Bishop Manning."

During the symposium of heresy, at which Bishop Brown was scheduled to speak, Dr. Guthrie condemned the trial of the bishop before the trial court of the church last fall as well as the recent inhibition placed on him by Bishop Manning, who forbade him to speak in any parish or mission of the New York diocese.

MEMORIAL AT SEEBRUGE TO BE UNVEILED APRIL 23

London, April 19.—A magnificent granite column 70 feet in height, erected at Seebruge to commemorate the heroic storming of the Mole and the blocking of the Bruges canal by the British navy—one of the outstanding events of the war—will be unveiled by the king of the Belgians on St. George's day, April 23, in the presence of a distinguished party of Britishers.

DIRIGIBLE LOS ANGELES READY FOR FLIGHT TODAY

Lakehurst, N. J., April 19—The navy dirigible, Los Angeles will be walked from its hangar at 5 o'clock tomorrow morning in preparation for its flight to Boston to attend the patriot's day celebrations it was announced tonight. Thunder showers tonight caused officers to withdraw plans to have the airship spend the night at its mooring mast.

Poisoned Seven Of Her Own Family

Mrs. Della Sorenson Has Made Confesison in St. Paul.

St. Paul, Neb. April 19—(By the A. P.)—Mrs. Della Sorensen, 38, of St. Paul, who was arrested yesterday on charges of killing by poisoning seven persons, three of them members of her own family, over a period of seven years, today signed a complete confession to the crimes before County Attorney Dobrey, he announced.

MAN SHOT AND SERIOUSLY WOUNDED AT BENWOOD, W. VA.

Benwood, W. Va., April 19—One man was shot and seriously wounded, another is in a hospital unconscious from having been beaten and 22 men are in jail at Moundsville for questioning, following an attack here today at the home of John Scott, a negro. The attack occurred at Glendale, six miles from here, and was participated in, reports reaching here said, by more than one hundred coal miners and their wives.

Police, state police and deputy sheriffs were called out to quell what for a time threatened to become a riot and rescued Scott, who had barricaded himself in the house. A crowd had gone to Scott's house and demanded that he come out. He refused and when stones were thrown at him a shot from the house wounded Jack Samochiew, the crowd fell back but again pressed forward when Andrew Lane, a negro attempted to enter the house. He was knocked down with a club by some one in the mob. State police and deputies arrived soon and took charge of the situation.

NAMEAUG ENGINE CO. NOTES 75 YEARS' SERVICE

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, April 19—Nameaug Engine company members participated in one of the most enjoyable gatherings in the history of the organization, Saturday evening when more than 100 members sat down to a turkey supper at the house of the company on Masonic street in celebration of the 75th anniversary of the organization. A good number of the veteran members of the company were present and a large attendance of the younger element on its roster. Guests included Chief Charles Rose, Chief Howard L. Stanton of Norwich; Chief Egger and his assistants, Westerly; City Manager William A. Holt, Councilors Edward L. Streeter, Jr., and William C. Fox and Judge Cornelius C. Costello, of the Groton town court. William Leckey was toastmaster and was in a happy vein in his introductions. He called upon Samuel T. Adams as the first speaker and that speaker set the pace for the others. They were City Manager Holt, Chiefs Rose, Stanton and Egger; Councilors Fox and Streeter, Judge Costello, Representative J. James Floyd and Edwin C. Ford. The speakers reviewed the history of the Nameaug company and praised the work of the volunteer department. Chief Stanton was interesting in that he said the Crocker house fire which gave the department five hours' hard work a fortnight ago, was as well handled as any department could have done and it was subdued with the minimum of loss. The celebration was pronounced by all the most enjoyable the company ever held.

NAVAL OFFICERS TO BE GIVEN SEVERE TESTS

San Francisco, April 19—(By the A. P.)—Severe tests are undergone nightly by navy watch and navigation officers of the United States fleet enroute to the Hawaiian Islands for a simulated attack on fortifications there. In fact, night is a time of thrills aboard every vessel. Darkness not only curtains the vision against possible submarines and destroyers, but makes exceedingly difficult the prevention of collisions among the 171 units of the fleet.

Danger of collisions is made greater by the maneuvers of the ships enroute. The smaller, speedier craft are required to weave in and out among the larger ships as a means of protection against suppositious mines and "subs." This is difficult enough in the sunlight because of the nearness and number of ships. At night with ships darkened, it requires the utmost skill and caution. When danger of submarine attacks is not great, the ships carry on their stearns, purple blue battle lanterns, visible only a few yards away, as a safeguard.

"General quarters," the navy's call to the battle stations, coming at unexpected hours of the night, brings perhaps the greatest thrill of the manouvers. All of the 40,000 officers and men, at this call, are required to drop whatever they are doing, or to arise immediately if sleeping, and man their stations, as in actual warfare.

BRITISH AIR FORCE USING BOMBS IN MESOPOTAMIA

London, April 19.—The British air force in Mesopotamia, says a Bagdad despatch to the Daily Express, engaged at the week end in two bombing operations in which three airplanes and some men were lost. A plane bombing villages in the Sinjar area on the Syrian frontier to punish a native chief who refused to make peace with a rival chief, drew an intense rifle fire from the tribesmen and was brought down in flames, the two occupants being killed.

Two machines attacking villages near Sulimanyeh for the murder of three Mesopotamian police crashed through some unknown cause, and the fate of the airmen is not known.

FORGER SURRENDERED TO POLICE AT PEMBROKE, MASS.

Pembroke, Mass., April 19.—A man who said he was W. H. Smith of Rockville, Conn., and that he was wanted for forgery and passing bad checks in Hartford and Rockville, Conn., and Boston and Kingston, Mass., was arrested and held in the Whitman town lockup today until his record can be checked up. Mrs. Ellen Regan saw Smith on her lawn here and when he told her he was "about ready to give myself up to the police" she volunteered to call the chief. She said he agreed that it "would be a good idea."

STRESEMANN SUPPORTS THE CANDIDACY OF HINDENBURG

Foreign Minister Corrects the Impression That the Election of a German President Will Determine the Future Trend of Germany's Foreign Policy—Declares That "Republic Versus Monarchy" is Not an Issue.

Berlin, April 19.—(By The A. P.)—In a personally signed statement appearing today in Die Zeit, the official organ of the German people's party, Dr. Gustav Stresemann, the foreign minister, definitely put an end to conjectures over his position in connection with the current presidential campaign. Dr. Stresemann squarely endorsed the candidacy of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg.

In the statement Dr. Stresemann characterized as erroneous and unfounded the impression aparently current abroad that the election of a German president will determine the future trend of Germany's foreign policy. He asserted that his own party emphatically rejects the motion that the question of "republic versus monarchy" is an issue in the forthcoming election.

Discussing the events which ultimately led to the nomination of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, Dr. Stresemann said his party was consistant in its demand that the nationalist bloc retain Dr. Karl Jarres as its candidate, and that it made no concealment of its scruples with respect to the selection of Von Hindenburg, both with reference to the internal situation and foreign reaction.

"Now that the choice has fallen upon Field Marshal Von Hindenburg," said the statement, "the German people's party has not alternative but to give him its complete suport, and all rumors to the contrary are at variance with facts."

The statement proceeds to eulogize Von Hindenburg and defends him against the imputation that he is likely to become the tool of an unscrupulous camarilla in the event he is elected. It added that the German people's party sees in the field marshal's reputation for probity and in the steadfastedness of the character sufficient warrant that as president he would be guided solely by thoughts of the Futherland's welfare and respect for its constitutional institutions.

The coming election, said Dr. Stresemann, will not decide the fundamentals of Germany's foreign policy, which cannot be governed by partisan or personal feelings, but will be determined solely by the development of the international situation which has arisen since the collapse of Germany.

"His own party's attitude on the question of restoration of the monarchy, Dr. Stresemann summed up as follows

"As chairman of the German people's party I desire to say most emphatically that we refuse absolutely to consider the present election as being a consider he present election as being a contest between adherents of the republic and a monarchy. De ilegsprove of a division of the German people into two camps on this question and are equally firm in refusing to make our confession to the republic or exhibition of byzantine lip service or to permit others to dictate the formula for our government.

"But we are equally opposed to all illegal efforts to alter the republican form of our government or to indulgence in unconstitutional experiments."

Dr. Stresemann said he hoped Von Hindenburg could be victorious at the polls and that, as president he would be permitted to be of further service to the German people.

INSTRUCTION IN NEW FOREIGN SERVICE SCHOOL

Washington, April 19—Twenty-five aspirants will begin tomorrow a course of study in the government's new foreign service school, created recently by President Coolidge to provide trained personnel for the American diplomatic service.

From the Frenchman who composes the first class of the new school, selections probably will be made for posts at home and abroad, including possibly an ambassador or minister, certainly, such others as secretary of embassy or legation, counsellor or some consular designation. The twenty-five beginners already are the survivors of about 200 candidates who were examined in January.

The first course of the school will terminate with examinations in July. The survivors of that test then will commence a year of intensive instruction and encounter yet more tests before finally being assigned to posts abroad. Even when assigned, the statesmen will be probationary, to be determined in the end by results of work performed in the field.

Much criticism of the American diplomatic service has been encountered from time to time by responsible officers in the Washington government. Critics have pointed out what they held to be unpardonable results in American diplomacy.

DR. HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK ADDRESSED YALE STUDENTS

New Haven, April 19—"I refuse to be bound by the authority of any church, of any creed, of any teacher of any book," declared Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick to a gathering of Yale students here tonight. "I believe that ministers, like scientists, should be allowed to examine the facts of the case and then be allowed to follow them out to their own logical conclusion."

Dr. Fosdick declared that all the finer and better parts of the full grown man, such as joy, conscience, love, mind and hope, cannot reach their full development without religion. He believes that religion is a necessity in life, that a man is not a man and the fullness of life cannot be reached without religion.

"Happiness is surely a necessity in human life," he continued, "but if we assume there is no God, that we are just a clever mixture of chemicals, that all people in the past who believed in God were fools, we find that something has happened to our happiness."

Speaking of conscience, Dr. Fosdick said that men should fear nothing but their conscience and that conscience is only real in a world where righteousness is woven into the structure of creation.

The funeral was held at her home, Saturday afternoon and attended by many relatives and friends and the Rebekah lodge was well represented. Rev. Lowry McLennan, her pastor, conducted the service. There were beautiful floral tributes. Burial was in Elm Grove cemetery.

Palace Theatre

A mammoth seven act vaudeville bill and a wonderful screen classic will be seen at the Palace Theatre today, Tuesday and Wednesday. It is claimed to be the best bill of vaudeville the Palace has ever offered and a large attendance is expected at the Boosters Matinee this afternoon.

The vaudeville will be headed by the Six Sensational Rockets, six artists in a whirlwind of stunts from beginning to end. This act is claimed to surpass the Sie Tahar Troupe, that played recently. Adams and Thompson Sisters in moments of song and dance. Connors and O'Brien in a study of Black Face, dancing and funny stories. Marriage vs Divorce, a Minature Musical Comdey, with a thousand laughs. Leonard and Willard the sunshine spreaders, right off the big time. George Dunn in 15 minutes of funny stories. The Surprisers, in tons of fun. The feature attraction will be If I Marry Again.

If I Marry Again, deals with an age old question in a new interesting manner. In it is shown the contrast between the successful business man who is a failure in his domestic life and the failure who makes his home life a place of ideal happiness.

Doris Kenyon is seen in the leading role in "If I Marry Again," and others in the cast include such screen favorites as Lloyd Hughes, Anna Q. Nilsson, Frank Mayor, Hobart Bosworth, Myrtle Stedman and Baby Dorothy Brock. John Francis Dillon, whose work in "Flaming Youth" and "Lilies of the Field," carved for him a niche in the directorial hall of fame, directed the picture under Earl Hudson's personal supervision.

In its revelation of the hard and fast traditions of the self-appointed American aristocracy, "If I Marry Again" will surprise many movie goers. Because his son married the daughter of a notorious woman in San Francisco's light life, old John Jordan, proud of his name and social prestige, exiled his son and his bride to the tropics, placing him in charge of rubber plantations in a land of terrific heat and terrible fever.

Circus at Y. M. C. A.

One of the big events of the local Y. M. C. A.'s physical department program is scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of this week, when the gym members will enact the part of "white top" performers and put on their fifth annual "Barnyard and Balehay" gym circus. If the gymnites have their way there will be nothing lacking in making the "circus grounds" one of the busiest places in the city and they have arranged many stunts that will afford the spectators a busy and enjoyable evening.

The program in the "big tent" will consist of a variety of gymnastic and athletic work presented in real circus fashion and accompanied by Swahn's Orchestra. Special features expected for the big tent show are the gymnastic exercises by the senior gym leaders club, the folk dance numbers by the N. F. A. girls and the lively capers of the frisky clowns who are to come in for a big share of the program.

Special bleachers are being set up in the gymnasium to accommodate the spectators and the gym decorated to resemble the interior of a circus tent.

Good interest is being manifested in the coming of "Barnyard and Balehay's" and there is every indication to believe that there will be the usual big crowd of men, women and children lined in front of the ticket wagon next Tuesday and Wednesday.

Parrots should be taught to speak only in polysyllables.

The Strand Theater

It is to laugh. I wonder how many theatergoers remember the history of that expression. Twenty years ago it was on every tongue, and as popular as Yes! We Have No Bananas, is today. I'll tell you. Louis Mann was playing the comedy character at the old Herald Square theater, New York, in a musical play called The Girl From Paris. He portrayed one of those impossible Half Breed Germans, with a choice selection of sadly dislocated German - Jewish-American phrases. His language was a cross between a state sardine and a loaf of pumpernickle. His make-up depicted nothing human. His Dear Old Mothers came to see him accompanied by other members of the family. When Louis appeared, the faces of his friends and family, were a study. The absurdity of his character was so flagrantly nonsensical that they did not know whether to applaud or feel ashamed. But-here is where mother saw the situation and came to the rescue in a way that made history. It is to Laugh. Said she, and she did, as did also the entire family and an overflowing audience. That simple phrase was ample apology for the absurdity of his make up and all else. The saying became famous the world over and helped keep the play for many months. That is the full explanation of Bringing Up Father in Ireland which comes to the Strand theater Monday.

Breed Theater

One of the latest novelties which motion pictures are everlastingly devising for our amazement is a pole match between a bevy of bathing beauties. It forms one of the highlights of A Thief in Paradise, now at the Breed theater.

Four pretty blondes and as many equally pretty brunettes form the opposing teams and they ride and battle each other as furiously as men. However, the girls soon discovering that their one-piece bathing suits did not offer the same protection from the stirrup straps that boots do. As a result, Producer Fitzmaurice bought up all the brown velvet available and had the straps wrapped with it. Then the game continued.

Doris Kenyon, Ronald Colman and Aileen Pringle are co-featured in this Goldwyn - Fitzmaurice picture, being released through First National.

The Pathe news, a cartoon and a roaring two part comedy complete the bill.

Broadway Theatre.

Another big special programme of vaudeville and pictures is announced by the Broadway management for the first half of this week. The name B. F. Keith has always been called and is synonymous with "the world's best" in vaudeville, that is why you are not taking any chances when you see a vaudeville programme at the Broadway and when you can see such acts and Paramount Pictures, which without doubt is the best possible available you should never miss a Broadway programme. There are seven acts for the first half of this week and a Paramount picture, "The Swan."

The management has been very fortunate in having secured at great expense Jack Linton and his Cadet Orchestra, which is presented by Vincent Lopez, the musical genius. It is requested that you not confuse this band with some of the mediocre kind that you have heard in the past. This orchestra consists of ten specialists in music in a new novel and entertaining manner. There is a reason why they have received unanimous praise from the press and public, and when you hear them you will know what this reason is.

The other acts scheduled are as follows:

Howard Nichols, "The Ace of Hoops," in an artistic novelty.

Warman and Mack, "The Two Magnetic Chaps" have an offering with a personality.

Grace Leonard and Dolly St. John the reel kids, as Wesley Barry and Jackie Coogan have an amusing comedy act to offer. Burns and Francis in Perfect Nonsense provide abundance of fun. They are first comedians and their act is constructed for hilarious humor. Watts and Reingold in Their Own Way are considered the best among colored entertainers. They sing, talk and dance and as a result there is comedy, harmony and dancing as only their race can dance. The Apollo Trio are a clever trio of acrobats and their routine is done in time with the music. They term the act "reproductions in bronze of famous Greek and Roman masterpieces."

Adolphe Menjou, Ricardo Cortez and Frances Howard are featured in the new Paramount picture, "The Swan," a Dimitri Burchowetzki production now at the Broadway.

The picture is an adaptation of Ferenc Molnar's stage play of the same name which ran for nearly a year on Broadway. It is a delightful satire on royalty. The action is scintillating and lively. It centers around Miss Howard as the princess. Menjou as the prince and Cortez as the court tutor who loves the princess but realizes the gulf that separates them and contents himself with worshiping from afar.

To sum up, "The Swan" is an unusually pleasing comedy-romance in a royal setting.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

In Providence county, a new trial has been ordered by the superior court for Rhode Island in a suit brought by Francis Sayegh, of Pawtucket, vs. Frank A. Davis of this town. In this case Sayegh in the superior court was awarded damages of $180 for injuries sustained in an automobile collision November 10, 1922, on the state highway between Harrisville and Woonsocket.

The supreme court, in an opinion prepared by Justice Elmer J. Rathbun, sustained defendant's exception to the granting of a new trial on the question of damages alone and remitted the case to the superior court for a new trial on all the issues.

In view of the strike at Willimantic the following relative to the American Thread company's development at Dalton, Ga., where the concern is building one of the most modern textile plants in the south, is of interest as set forth here, as follows:

The routine of material in this new plant is unique. The cotton in bales will be carried in an elevator from the upper floors of the warehouse to the bale breaker, located in the opener room on the first floor. After going through the bale breaker, it will be conveyed to bins in the first floor of the picker building by means of a cotton blowing system. Adjacent to the bins in the picker building will be the pickers. The laps from the pickers will be trucked through the passageway to the card room, located in the first story of the mill. From the cards the material will work north along the first story through the silver lap and ribbon lap machines, combers, drawing frames, slubbers and speeders, to the elevator located at the north end of the mill. From the elevator at the second story it will be worked through the bridge to the conditioning room in the second story of the picker building; then pass back to the second story to the winders and twisters. The yarn received from the reels and warpers is to be packed and shipped to the northern mills of the American Thread company.

A wet Sunday and the usual discussion that a rainy day brings relative to Dark Lantern hill, brought forth the venerable question as to "What's the matter with that hill?" It appears there is an answer to that question. It is improper construction On the first downward grade the road surface is built so that the slant is away from the curve instead of with it. Stand at the top of the hill and watch a score of cars go down. The construction is such that even a carefully driven car will edge off toward the south side of the highway and in many cases the rear wheels will start bouncing around in a manner to threaten disaster. It is held by the competent observers that if the surface was graded up on what may be termed the outside—or south side of the hill going down that the chances of accidents would be greatly reduced. As the road is today it is a very simple proposition to have a car skid and possibly turn over. The hill is dangerous not because of the steepness of the grade, but because of the manner in which the state highway was built.

DAWES AT WORK

From the moment when Vice President Dawes launched his opposition to the senate rules at the convening of the special session of the upper house of congress there has never been any question regarding his sincerity in seeking reform, or in his determination to wage a fight in keeping with the goal he has in mind. He is conscious of the gross injustice done by the senate rules which make any one of the 96 senators during the last days of the sessions of congress a power greater than the veto power of the president of the United States." He is outspoken against it. He believes that there is strong opposition against it in the senate, and interprets the resentment displayed in his initial address to the senate directed more against the manner in which he sought the reform than the demand he made in its half.

It must have been an encouraging response the vice president received in Boston when he, contrary to expectations, set forth his views on this subject which is so close to his heart and received such overwhelming support from his hearers.

At the same time he made it plain that his plan for a whirl around the country between now and the opening of congress, for the purpose of presenting this very thing to the people that they may have an opportunity to bring the matter home to their senators, is a real one.

Certainly he has not undertaken this matter of reform in a half hearted manner. He is in dead earnest and he is plain spoken. He isn't finding it necessary to hedge his addresses with a lot of fine words and only hinting at what he believes should be done. He talks straight to the point and he hits hard.

Perhaps there is nothing surprising in the fact that he should get so enthusiastic a Boston endorsement. He will undoubtedly find many other states and their senators heartily in favor of just such a reform. He nevertheless does not underestimate the job that is ahead of him.

GETTING AN EDUCATION

Just how much attention was attracted by the item of the past week which told of the 150 students of Michigan university having signed contracts to contribue blood for operations where transfusion is necessary is uncertain but it has evidently disclosed one of the new fields which the young man in search of an education finds open to him. In this particular instance it means an exchange of blood, if opportunity presents itself, for an education, or at least part for part.

There are reasons to believe that there is not quite the same attraction in such a sacrifice as there is in the various other ways of working one's way through college, and yet there are 150 who are willing to do their part when and if they are properly qualified.

Getting through college, or getting a college education, is not restricted to a few in these days whose family is able to provide it. There are bureaus of self help at the various institutions which are giving much valuable assistance to the students who must work, and who are willing to, if they are to reach the goal they have set for themselves educationally. Even the number who register in such bureaus and find their time well employed in rendering the many services that are desired it is evident that there is a desire to aid in the exchange of dollars as funds to be applied to a college course for work performed in a great variety of ways, the latest of which is aiding in the saving of life.

That such a service should be highly remunerative is to be expected. That there should be a restricted number of instances when an individual could render such a service is to be inferred. Just how much dependence a student can place upon this indicated willingness to serve is unknown but there is displayed the extent to which students are ready to go for the sake of an education, and it is that which attracts attention in this particular instance.

BULGARIA

When the assassin gets started in Bulgaria there's no telling where the slaughter will stop. One slaying simply leads to others, and by the time the semblance of order is restored there is much taking of life and spilling of blood.

Bulgaria cannot be rated as a peace loving country, or a place where there is a disposition to settle differences by the ballot instead of the bullet. It is the seat of much trouble in the Balkans and is frequently in some sort of squabble with its neighbors if not participating in a family scrap of its own. It is the latter which is getting the attention of the outside world at the present time, with one assassination leading to another, and the plans for wholesale killings being successfully carried out.

The present trouble dates back to the rule of Premier Stambulisky, when the agrarian party was in power. His overthrow by a coup d'etat and his death was followed by a military government with General Gheorghieff in charge of the military forces which were distinctly obnoxious to the people who were loyal to the former premier. His assassination was only one of about 40 since last August. There was give and take, and when there was a large number of the military assembled at the funeral of the assassinated general it was just the opportunity sought by the users of bombs and infernal machines to get in their dastardly work. But along with the few that it was desired to reach there were killed many more. But that is characteristic of the assassin. It was only by the narrowest chance that the king of Bulgaria escaped a similar fate last week.

Bulgaria has been placed under martial law, but that country is simply experiencing a repetition of history and there's no reason to expect that the deplorable spectacle that has recently been presented there will put an end to such practices.

It has taken the nations of the world a long time to make an organized fight against war. It may take Bulgaria as much longer to change its mind regarding assassinations.

150 YEARS AGO

The 150th anniversary of these impressive historical days at Lexington and Concord furnishes an admirable occasion for observance on the part of those particular places and such others as were closely associated therewith. It was the initial blow in behalf of liberty, for the throwing off of oppression and the termination of the highly objectionable taxation without representation.

It was an occasion which put the colonies to the supreme test. The fact that they were facing a strong empire, organized and well trained fighting forces, while there were big handicaps to be overcome here, did not deter them. It was a move that required courage and sacrifice, but they were to be found in liberal amount as developments proved.

There was sacrifice, there was courage and there were hardships. There were great discouragements and much distress and it was only after a long and persistent struggle in behalf of what was viewed as right by the colonists that victory was won and the beginnings of this government were made possible.

Thus it is only proper that there should be a fitting observance of this great patriotic demonstration a century and a half after its opening. It was not a well organized resistance that represented all the people in the colonies but the spirit of Lexington and Concord soon fired the most of the people and brought them into a ragged but valiant fighting force in defense of firmly fixed principles. As we visualize that picture of 150 years ago and pay honor to those who took part in it it is impossible to overlook the effects of that beginning and the changes that have taken place in the meantime.

PASSPORT VISAS

Even though the war ended years ago there has been continued the practice of paid visas for passports. Those who have traveled through Europe know well what that means. Not only are passports required but it is necessary to have them scanned and endorsed almost everytime a person turns around, and with the endorsement it is necessary to pay a substantial fee. What is done to Americans in visiting Europe for business or pleasure is of course done to Europeans coming here, but there's a decided difference in the number of times such a fee is exacted in this country and the many times it has to be paid if one visits the countries of Europe.

The desirability of abandoning such a fee has long been advocated it is in fact part of the immigration law, the provision being that reciprocity should prevail in such respect. While it is required for immigrants, this country is anxious that it should be lifted for the business and pleasure tourists, and it will be interesting to note the success that follows the communication addressed to the European countries with such an end in view.

The change would involve visitors, and when it is understood that Europe is desirous of increasing the number of visitors from this side of the water the opportunity of offering this additional inducement would seem to be such as to bring about early and general approval. What would accrue to the benefit of Americans would react to the benefit of European travelers also as they come west.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Silver and steel articles should be dried as soon after washing as possible.

The leaky washboiler makes a splendid kindling wood carrier for the kitchen range.

Chicken fat can be used for all kinds of cooking in which the finest quality of butter would be ordinarily used.

Save celery tops and dry them for soup and stew flavor. They give more flavor dry than they do when fresh.

Just before serving cream of celery soup, pour it over a well-beaten egg, stirring vigoureously while pouring.

Just for a change, instead of toasting cheese sandwiches, try frying them in part vegetable fat and part butter.

An onion, green pepper and a tomato stewed together and put through a sieve, then chilled and added to well-chilled mayonnaise in equal quantity gives a superior flavor to Russian dressing.

In selecting a soup for a meal remember that creamed soups should not be served when there are creamed vegetables or creamed fish to follow.

To skin a finnan haddock cut the fish into halves and hold it in front of a brisk fire until it begins to curl up. Then start at the tail of the fish and pull the skin off gently.

The success of frying depends upon two things—having enough fat to completely cover the articles cooked in it and having the fat smoking hot.

Boiled potatoes will never look dark if you add a little milk to the water in which they are cooked.

You can keep yolks of eggs fresh by keeping in the refrigerator in a cup, covered with cold water.

Before putting away spare silver clean it thoroughly. Wrap it up in a dark-blue paper, with a few camphor balls and when the silver is unwrapped even months afterward, it will be found to be as bright as when placed away. Filagree ornaments should always be kept in dark-blue soft paper.

SERVING GRAPEFRUIT

Probably no more complex problem has confronted etiquette experts on dietetic technique than that of how to properly eat fresh grapefruit. The juice of the fruit which gives it its healthful food value is also responsible for its natural, annoying squirting proclivities. How to enjoy grapefruit without getting it in the eye, so to speak, has been the great eating problem of the age.

For serving the fruit in its fresh state, cut in half and remove seeds with fork or sharp pointed knife. With a small, thin knife cut each segment separately from the bitter membranes and rind. Do not cut through the membranes. Grapefruit is served best this way, as the fruit segments can then be easily removed with a spoon. The bitter membranes are left in the fruit.

Many people make the mistake of running a knife around the inside of the rind. This actually makes the fruit difficult to handle, as there is then nothing to hold the bitter membranes in place when the segments are extracted.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Borax water does not harm the hands as harsher cleaners do.

Dry toast, short rations of butter, small portions of fish, vegetables, stew fruit or milk pudding, with a limited allowance of five ounces of liquid to a meal constitute the recognized diet for sufferers from "senile heart."

When young people suffer from toothache they may be the victims of parental neglect. They should be taken to a dentist at once, as much can be done by a careful dentist to save and strengthen the teeth. The teeth should be brushed from babyhood, and too much attention cannot be given to keeping one's mouth clean and healthy, as much disease is fomented and infection started within the mouth.

Before sitting down to a meal, make a definite effort to compose your nerves if they are jumpy. Lie down and relax completely for a few minutes. If you are excited or angry, or depressed when you eat, the secretions of the stomach and intestines suffer a chemical change, so that they become unable to prepare the food properly for assimilation. Indigestion and various forms of stomach troubles result, so that no matter how scientific your diet, the food cannot nourish your body.

ADDS LUSTER TO EYE

Considerable luster and sparkle can be added to the eyes, by the very simple process of bathing them three or four times during the day with a solution of boric acid. According to one authority found that by bathing her eyes regularly she not only made them look more brilliant, but rested them and thus gained decided freshness for the entire face.

RETAINS THEIR COLOR

Colored handkerchiefs require a little more care in washing than plain ones. They should first be soaked for ten minutes in a basin of tepid water to which a teaspoon of turpentine has been added. This will insure their retaining their color, and after the soaking they can be washed in the usual way.

HOW TO WHIP CREAM

Cream to be whipped should be as cold as possible—likewise the whipper. Put them both on the ice for several hours and your battle is won before you start. Beat slowly at first and increase in speed as the cream thickens. Sweeten after the cream is thick.

WHAT HO! AN ONION!

Should your aluminum pan get burnt while cooking try boiling an onion in it. The burnt part will rise to the top and leave the pan bright and clean.

LEFTOVER FISH

Find some way of using the leftover fish the next day. It should never be kept longer than that even if it looks all right, as the decay starts close to the bone and no sign may be visible.

BATTER FOR FRITTERS

One cup flour, one-half teaspoon baking-powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt, two eggs, one cup milk. Sift dry ingredients, add well-beaten eggs and milk and beat until smooth. Add herbs and onion seasoning for fish or meat.

DICTATES OF FASHION

New versions of cretonne coats have the design outlined in silver cord and the ground cut away. In some fine black silk braid.

Wide ribbons in bright colored striped and plaited designs suggest any number of interesting possibilities in the way of decoration for frocks or hats.

Very new and delightfully smart are ensembles for the younger girl. These consist of a frock of English print and a straight little coat of natural colored cashmere lined with print.

Instead of fastening in front, the latest shoe exhibited here is buttoned or buckled at the outer side. It offers a distinct comfort to stylish stouts who do not do their daily dozen.

A new pearl necklace consists of two-toned strings, the design of which suggests the pattern of old lace. The effect is new and lovely.

The newest golf shoes are of the brogue type, with broad low heels and wide toes. They have no tongues, however, and are cut away between the eyelet holes through which the laces pass, to show the design of the golf stocking.

The embroideries done in leather threads are scoring a distinct hit as decorations for the smaller spring hats. The brighter colors are used and attractive embossed effects are secured. Some of the new hatpins have heads surrounded by a small leather fringe.

Black faille and bengaline continue to be among the most favored materials for the ensemble costume. Often they are combined with bright colored printed chiffons or silks but quite as often the only touch of color is supplied by the accessoires.

The vogue for dresses with long, tight sleeves coming well down to the hand has been responsible for the designing of a new daytime glove. This is of glace kid, has a rather long wrist and is fastened with three buttons. It is without a cuff, and is ornamented with self-colored stitching on the back.

For years the spring suit has been associated with woolen fabrics, but in 1925 silk will be equally popular for tailored costumes. Some of the frocks are composed of two layers of chiffon. Others are of printed silk crepe georgette. The frocks usually are set off by pleated jabots and lace collars.

BODICES STRAIGHT

Bodices are straight with insertions in pointed or rounded movements; some points in front going up from the belt and indicating a higher waistline. Still many yokes and narrow scarfs. The waistline is lower than the normal waist but high enough and slightly tightened by narrow belts or by vertical buttonings at the bottom of the bodies. The sleeves are straight slightly full with narrow wristbands.

COOKING HINTS

One egg will thicken a cup of milk for cup custards.

To measure molasses quickly, dip the measuring cup or spoon in scalding water first.

When cooking cereal which must remain in double boiler overnight, turn one cup cold water over it just before leaving. This will prevent any hard crust forming on top. In the morning the water may be turned off.

To test the temperature of the oven for cake made with butter, use a piece of white writing paper. If the oven is the right temperature the paper should turn a deep yellow in five minutes; for sponge cake the paper should turn light yellow in five minutes.

Cold mashed potatoes can be used for savory croquettes. Reheat them, season with butter, salt, paprika, celery salt and a little onion juice, add the beaten yolk of an egg and shape into balls or cones. Dip in egg and crumbs before frying in deep fat.

For crisp pork. Take an old wire toaster and lay across the top of the pan in which beans are to be baked. Slice pork down as far as the rind and lay across wires. The grease cooks out of the pork and drips down into the beans, leaving the pork crisp but not hard.

CLOSETS

An ample closet for the linen, conveniently placed with reference to the rooms which it supplies, is almost indispensable in the moderate-sized house. The linen may be placed in wide but shallow sliding drawers with the fronts almost entirely cut away to facilitate handling of the linen and also for ventilation. Beneath are deep drawers for the larger and less frequently used articles.

A small closet for each bathroom is useful for keeping a supply of towels, a clothes-hamper and the overflow from the medicine-cabinet. This closet might be provided with glass or china shelves which are kept in place with nickel - plated pins fastened into the wall. The door also might have a mirror panel.

SHIRTS SAVE LAUNDRY BAGS

Men's shirts make rather unique but very satisfactory laundry-bags. The shirt should be sewed together at the bottom and more than half way up the front. The body of the shirt then becomes a receptable for the larger garments and the sleeves may be used for smaller articles such as handkerchiefs, collars and hose. Put one of these improvised bags in every bedroom closet, and each member of the family will keep his soiled clothes in his own particular laundry-bag.—Delineator.

Cowie Did Not Want to Be Laughed At

After giving up what he most desired to do, Robert E. M. Cowie did the next best thing and as a result found himself a stranger thousands of miles from home with only $5 in his pocket.

It was with the hope of getting away from an irksome vocation that his first plan was made. Born in Aberdeen, Scotland, the second of six sons of a poor minister, he attended public school and had to help at home. Complying with his father's wishes, he prepared to study law, and at 16 passed the examination that qualified him to take up legal studies. But the prospect of five years in a barrister's office at a meagre salary before starting at the bottom of the ladder of a career looked so dreary to him that he decided to join a young friend and go to Natal to engage in ostrich farming.

Finally winning his father's consent and financial support, he enthusiastically prepared for the venture—his friend backed out. Having boasted of his expected success, Robert did not want to be laughed at as a quitter and determined to go somewhere alone.

Not having enough money to go to Natal, he went to Boston, Mass., and bought a railroad ticket for a point as far as his funds would take him, arriving in Cleveland with $5. Answering a "Porter Wanted" sign in the window of the American Express company office, he was told he was too small, and he so plainly showed his disappointment that he was referred to the superintendent, who gave him a job as office boy at $30 a month.

Then began his slow rise. Often reprimanded for asking questions, he persisted and learned the business. Next a mail clerk at $60 a month and finally chief clerk, he was sent to fill in as private secretary to the general superintendent of the company. A little more than a year later he was promoted to the assistant superintendency and from there he climbed to the office of president of the American Railway Express, with its 150,000 employees at [illegible] and today at [illegible] Little [illegible]

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

MANGANESE

From Paris it is announced that a United States firm has won the concession for the Tchiatur manganese mines, biggest in the world, so America can shave in the morning with a steady, untroubled hand.

"There is a very intimate connection between Tchiaturi, deep in an arid ravine under the Caucasus snow peaks, and the cutting edge of the daily razor," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its headquarters at Washington, D. C.

"Razors are steel. Steel is iron. But steel also is carbon and silicon and sulphur and phosphorus and manganese; for steel is an alloy just as surely as bronze or aluminum are alloys. Gary and Bethlehem and Pittsburgh can get iron from Minnesota and most of the 'seasoning' for their steel in the United States, but they must go abroad for much of their manganese.

"Georgia, not the United States commonwealth, but the Soviet republic which is federated with Russia, lies along the southern slopes of the giant Caucasus Mountains which cut it off from Russia like the Pyrenees cut off Spain from France. Oil is Georgia's chief mineral resource and manganese is second. Oil at Baku, on the Caspian sea, did much to build the Transcaucasian railroad from Baku to Batum, on the Black sea, back in the eighties, but manganese found use for it first.

"A few miles west of Tiflis, which is the capital of Georgia, a narrow gauge branch railroad now winds through the deep cut of the Kwirila river. Its terminal 25 miles from the main line is Tchiaturi, which is about 150 miles from the ports of Batum or Poti. Round about Tchiaturi are next to the largest known rich deposits of the rare earth called manganese ore. Although this region is supposed to have 200,000,000 tons awaiting the pick, Brazil is said to have a mountain of it, but this particular Brazilian deposit is so far inland that its exploitation is impracticable at present.

"Before scientists discovered that manganese would facilitate the process of making steel and before they found that a certain per cent made steel wonderfully hard, the Tchiaturi mountain district was inhabited by a few scattered herders. In prosperous times 4,000 miners now work the hills. A herder of sheep knows little about mining so at first Italian miners were imported to work the strata. But the mining is easy and comparatively safe so the Georgians soon caught on and now the great majority of workmen are natives.

"Before the World war much was done to maintain good living conditions for the miners. Homes were built for them together with an institution for hot baths, so dear to the Georgian heart. Electricity came into the mountains for the mines and the villages. Manganese even brought a theater to Tchiaturi.

"When the branch railroad reached the deposits there was great rejoicing because previously all ore had to be taken over perilous mountain paths 25 miles to the main line. Seldom more than a ton could be carried by bullock cart at one time. The old Russian government built the branch line but freight charges were so high, it is said, that they paid the railroad's cost in two years.

"Up to the time of the World war, Georgia led the world in production of manganese except for the periods of depression in 1907 and 1908. Then its rival, India, passed it. Closing of the Bosporus in 1914 practically sealed the Georgian mines.

"The United States has always imported manganese heavily from Brazil where the mines are in Minas Geraes, about 300 miles northwest from Rio de Janeiro. During the war America developed her own manganese resources and is using them today to some extent. The principal steel producing countries have in the past each drawn their chief manganese supplies from a different source: Germany from Georgia, England from India, where it is found in the presidency of Madras and in central India, and the United States from Brazil. Montana, the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia, Arkansas, Colorado and our own state of Georgia, are the sources within the United States.

"Many radio fans also rely on manganese. Grades of ore coming chiefly from Phillipsburg, Montana, are important constituents of the dry cell or dry battery."

STORY TELLING FOR CHILDREN

Julia W. Wolfe

To sit among a group of eager children with shining eyes and expectant faces is an inspiration to any storyteller. One is filled with ambition; to fail would be disastrous.

We hear much about the kind of story we are to tell, and with regard to this wise ones differ. Let us study the child first—then the story.

Some people think that myths and fairy tales should not be told to children, that they cause them to become visionary rather than practical. In a very few cases this may be true, but it does not prove that this very strong love of the child is generally harmful or to be discouraged.

What a dry, dull world it would be if the children were cut off from all imagination! It peoples the world in which they live with a distinguished company, and entertains them right royally. The ancient myths of the Old World are ever fresh and new to them, in fact they fascinate both young and old alike—all who love the mysterious and the beautiful. Our Indian legends, too, have charm, and there will be found plenty to agree that many of the more modern fairy tales are very much worth while.

Said a noted educator: "Much of the selfishness of the world is due, not to actual hard-heartedness, but to a lack of imagination."

The faculty of putting oneself in the place of others is of great service to the cause of morality, and this faculty may be cultivated by means of fairy stories. As a rule, children are in sympathy with all creatures: as they share the joys and sorrows of Ulysses, Snow White and Rose Red or the Ugly Duckling. It is the exception when we meet a child who has not his share of imagination.

Occasionally we do meet a Peter Bell, to whom

"A primrose by a river brim
A yellow primrose was to him,
And it was nothing more."

While developing the imagination is desirable, too much of fairyland is to be avoided. Lead the child to see beauty in commonplace things. A piece of coal, a drop of water, a bean, each has a life history which in the hands of a skillful teacher becomes as beautiful and mysterious as any fairy tale.

If our nature stories do not bring the children closer to nature, their object is lost. "They do not so much need 'Nature as she is taught,' but Nature as she speaks while we are silent." Let it be to each child as it was to Hiawatha:

"He learned of every bird its language,
Learned their names and all their secrets."

Stories are extremely valuable as a means of moral training. There are no wrong inclinations or weak points that may not be reached by the story, if skillfully told.

Very important is it, that we have genuine fun in our stories. While life is serious, there are certain rights inherent in childhood, of which one is genuine mirth. While we quicken the wits and impart sound wisdom, let us teach the science and art of happiness.

Stories That Recall Others

Nearly Right

Johnny was on his way down town when he was met by a neighbor who asked: "Where are you going, Johnny?"

"To the library to get a book for my daddy," was the reply.

"What's the name of the book?" asked the friend of the family.

"A Thousand Legs Under the Sea."

Already Free

During the Sunday school lesson the teacher made reference to a passage of Scripture reading, "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

A little girl in the front row exclaimed: "I am already free, I'm free and a half."

24,000 MORE CARS REGISTERED IN STATE

Twenty-four thousand more cars were registered for use on the highways of Connecticut at the end of the past quarter than in the corresponding period of last year, according to statistics given out at the state motor vehicle department. Twenty-eight thousand more operators were licensed and department receipts increased $425,134 or 12.9 per cent.

Up to the first day of this month, 148,163 motor vehicles had been registered and 185,945 operators licensed by the department and the income of the department for the quarter reached $3,714,377, all of which was turned over to the state highway department through the state treasury for the improvement of roads. Of the increase in receipts, $318,731 is attributed to the increased registration income and nearly $90,000 to the gain in operators. Examinations were given to 585 operators who did not hold Connecticut licenses last year.

Two hundred and forty-seven less fines for violations of the motor vehicle laws were imposed in the quarter than in the first three months of 1924 and the receipts from such fines dropped correspondingly from $37,404 for the first quarter of 1924 to $32,446 for the quarter just passed, during which 1,138 offenders were fined.

Sixty-nine less motorcycle operators were licensed in the quarter, the total on April 1 being 599. Eleven aviators were licensed, whereas four were licensed in the first three months of 1924. Motor vehicle transfers increased from 6,593 in the first three months of 1924 to 7,107 in the quarter just ended.

Feel All Worn Out?

ARE you dragging around day after day with a dull, constant backache? Do you feel stiff and achy; weak, nervous—all played out?

You should know, then, that these troubles are often due to imperfect kidney action. When the kidneys lag, there's a slow poisoning of blood and nerves and an upsetting of the whole system. Your back aches; you have sharp, stabbing pains, headaches, dizzy spells, and often annoying kidney irregularities.

If your kidneys are inactive, help them with a tested diuretic. Use Doan's Pills. They are recommended the world over. Ask your neighbor!

HERE IS NORWICH PROOF:

MRS. JAMES E. MORAN, 28 Second Street, says: "A cold settled in my kidneys and weakened them. My back ached continually for some time and I could hardly get around to do my housework. My kidneys didn't act right at all. I had known of Doan's Pills helping another member of the family, so I used them and found relief."

WORK OF THE YEAR IS SHOWN AT Y. M. C. A. ANNIVERSARY MEETING

An interesting address on Leadership by Rev. W. Russell Bowie, D. D., rector of Grace Episcopal church, New York city, and sacred selections by the Colonial Quartette of Hartford, featured the anniversary service of the Norwich Young Men's Christian Association Sunday evening at the Central Baptist church. An appeal to the people of Norwich to stand by the association in its campaign which is to take place today (Monday) for the purpose of raising $13,000 to carry on the work for another year was made by President James C. Macpherson.

The anniversary service, an annual event in the association's history, was opened at 7:30 o'clock with the singing of the doxology. The invocation was given by Rev. J. Harlow Graham, pastor of Trinity M. E. church, after which the hymn, How Firm a Foundation, was sung by the congregation, the church choir and Colonial Quartette leading. Rev. Charles H. Ricketts read the scripture selection and the anthem was given by the Colonial Quartette. Rev. Mr. Genter offered prayer and the opening remarks were made by President Macpherson.

One-day Financial Campaign.

President Macpherson spoke of the the activities of the Y. M. C. A. and of the annual financial campaign which is to take place today (Monday.) He told of the one day campaign being inaugurated last year and said this plan will be carried out again this year. After speaking of the extended activities of the Norwich Y. M. C. A., so that fully 1,000 boys and men are receiving benefits from the association. Mr. Macpherson appealed for generous contributions to the fund.

We ask your support for another year, he said. We believe the people of the community are going to stand by us and see our campaign through successfully. We ask you to welcome the members of the teams when they call upon you.

General Secretary's Report.

General Secretary Edwin Hill then read his annual report which is given below:

To the Officers, Directors and Members of the Norwich Young Men's Christian Association.
Gentlemen:

Another period, classified as "a year" in the calendar, has passed into the history of the Norwich Young Mens Christian Association, and also into the records of Heaven, where no mistakes are made by the one who writes those records, and where the act of "giving a cup of water" "in His name" is never omitted. In humility, and with profound gratitude we recognize the hand of God in guilding power, and we none the less recognize His co-operation through the many kind friends who have given of their time and money in the interests of the highest boyhood and manhood in Norwich and vicinity. Especially we desire to express our heart's best appreciation to the officers and directors who have given, freely of themselves and their contributions in a spirit that commands our sincere respect.

"Gratified but not satisfied" indicates our feelings in regard to the results of the year just closed; we are genuinely gratified with what has been accomplished, but we are not satisfied, and it were better so, for when one is satisfied he ceases to push forward into greater achievements.

Physical Work.

The management of the Association has realized for many years the great importance of the development of the body, and therefore much stress has been laid on the work of the physical department; in no time in the past has there been given more attention to this phase of the work than during the past year. We have not only conducted the large work in the gymnasiums among the men and boys of the membership, a very conspicuous part of which has been for the busy business and professional men, but in addition we have co-operated we trust helpfully, with other organizations including the Boy Scouts, church groups, and groups of boys from outlying districts; we have also co-operated with the principals of the grammar schools in arranging several athletic meets which have brought together large numbers of boys in healthful and helpful exercises. It has been a pleasure to thus co-operate, and we hope to increase such co-operation in the future. The Osgood Memorial swimming pool continues a great attraction, and among other good results from its use was the teaching of eighty-six boys how to swim in the swimming campaign for boys whether members of the association or not; we do not need to suggest what this may mean in the years to come.

Social Work.

The social life of the building has been developed to a healthy state during the year, and real fellowship has been enjoyed by an ever increasing number in the lobby and in the special social occasions from time to time. The splendid entertainment course afforded unusual pleasure to large audiences who were loud in their praise of the quality of the concerts. We expect to give a larger place to social work in the coming year.

While the building is what we choose to call "the down town home" for many men and boys, in a special sense it is a second home for men away from home, and during the year an average of twenty or more have been pleasantly housed in the dormitory at a very reasonable price, and we feel that in this way we have contributed to the happiness and comfort of a goodly number.

Work for Boys.

We all recognise that whatever service we can render for the development of the boy life about us is service that counts and is sure to produce dividends in character and citizenship long after those who render the service have gone to their reward; therefore the Norwich Y. M. C. A. has given much thought and effort in this important direction, and evidences are not lacking which show the fruitage of the worthy efforts. Aside from the regular work in the physical department for boys, which means much to their social and club life has been organized and stressed during the year. The Academy Hi-Y club has appealed to a fine group of students and has been an agency of real merit in the lives of these young fellows soon to bud into manhood, and soon to take their places in the life of the world. The employed boys brotherhood has enlisted the interest of a large group of older boys who have had placed before them by Christian business men, the possibilities of life, and their outlook has been definitely enlarged. Special work has also been done for young boys corralled in two groups of "Pioneer Clubs" the purpose being "the four square" development of each boy. An interesting and interested group is the street newsboys club; these lively lads have met for helpful purposes once each week during the winter, and it is not difficult to note the benefits they derive from their contacts in the "Y" building. A start has been made in developing boys church groups which we expect to continue and enlarge in the future.

Educational Work.

No legitimate field has been less developed than that in educational lines, and this is one phase of the work that demands more attention than it has yet had. However a well supplied reading room has been constantly used during the year, and a definite beginning was made in Americanization work, when an Italian night was held which called together a large number of people of that nationality; pictures of Columbus and of leading American characters were shown and a timely address was given which was calculated to inculate in the minds of the audience, an interest in and a love for our great America.

Religious Work.

A slogan has been used at times in certain Association circles, that runs thus, "Keep the "C" in Y. M. C. A." which reminds us that it is A Young Mens Christian Association, with emphasis on the third word. We firmly believe that whatever service we render for the benefit of our fellows, physical, social, interlectual or spiritual, it all can be justly called Christian service, yet, there is a sense in which we can minister to the center of the life, namely the soul, and in this domain we feel that we cannot be accused of being neglectful, though of course we realize that we have come far short of one hundred percent efficiency in this important realm. We devoutly thank God for the good woman, Miss M. Louise Sturtevant, who when with us, contributed liberally of her prayers and her money, and when she left us, bestowed to us the splendid endowment for the religious work of the Association. This money has been used in various avenues of spiritual effort, including Sunday afternoon meetings, shop meetings, bible classes, jail meetings, etc. The special efforts such as the Lenten Friday noon services, and the unusually interesting Sunday evening union meetings, in which the ministers and congregations heartily co-operated, are fresh in the minds of many people.

The bringing to Norwich of a number of nationally known preachers whose messages were spiritually quickening has brought to the management of the association many expressions of sincere appreciation, which has brought joy to us in that we were permitted to serve the city in such a manner. We will long remember the impressive climax of this series, the presentation of "The Crucifixion" which crowded the largest Protestant church auditorium in the city, and many were turned away. This rendition reflects great credit upon Frederick W. Lester the organist and leader, and also upon the chorus made up of several of the church choirs and other singers of the city.

The messages on the Friday noons of the Lenten season given by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth of New London, at the local Y. M. C. A. building to a fine company of business men and others proved a sweet and helpful ministry, and doubtless many a man had his spiritual life quickened thereby.

Foreign Relations.

Through the kindness of several loyal friends the Norwich Association has been able to maintain a Y. M. C. A. secretary in far away China, where, in a city of 100,000, many hundreds of young men, especially among the student body, are being touched in a vital way by the association's influence.

We hereby acknowledge with sincere thanks, the splendid services of the Womens Auxiliary of the Association, comprised of a large number who have for years stood ready to assist in many practical ways, the work of the institution; not only have they given real service, but they contribute each year a liberal sum of money for current expenses.

We express thanks for all the ministers have done to help us, and especially indebted to Rev. C. H. Ricketts, who last year and for many past years has conducted our services at the Richmond Radiator plant, where the men listen with rapt attention to his messages.

An unfailing source of helpfulness on the part of the managements of the local newspapers calls for deep gratitude, and we gladly give it at this time: a friendly newspaper is always a boon to the cause it espouses.

During the past year several of our best friends and supporters have been summoned to their eternal home, and our sympathy goes out to those of their households who remain; we shall miss their kindly interest, and yet they will have a warm place in our hearts as we are inspired by the memories of what they were and what they did for us.

Monday, April 20th, 1925, will be a crucial day in the history of the Norwich Y. M. C. A., for on that day we go forth to ask the people who believe in boys and young men, to open their hearts and their purses to the loyal men, many of whom will give the entire day as well as their money in the interests of this institution which stands for the high purpose of building boyhood and manhood. Unless the sacrifice of the givers matches the sacrifice of the workers we cannot succeed, but our loved city has thus far splendidly maintained its worthy institutions and we believe its record will be sustained on Monday.

With heartfelt gratitude to the board of management, for their uniform kindness to me personally, and with thanks to the men on the employed staff for their constant co-operation, this report is respectfully submitted.

The Anniversary Address

The annual offering was then taken while two selections were given by the Colonial Quartette. This was followed by the anniversary address by Rev. W. Russell Bowie, D. D., rector of Grace Episcopal church, New York city, Rev. Dr. Bowie being introduced by President Macpherson.

Rev. Dr. Bowie took as his text "He sent a man before them" from the 105th Psalm. After citing incidents from the Old Testament showing how God worked out His Divine plans by sending a "man before them" speaking particularly of Abraham and Joseph, Rev. Dr. Bowie spoke of the discovery of America. This great continent of the west, where we have built our American civilization, lay undiscovered for centuries, until there came a man—Columbus, he said, God sent a man before them for the great multitudes of the Old World looking for a new world.

Leadership stands for something real, said the speaker. We need a desire for excellence. The desire for excellence is a great thing. I think the Y. M. C. A. leads boys to resolve to make something of their lives. Joseph, the boy sold into slavery by his brethren did not say, "What's the use? I am alone in strange land; nobody cares." No. He set his desire for a great excellence.

We need the willingness to pay the price. Joseph paid. He paid in difficulty and in hardship. We need in our world men and women willing to pay the cost. We need the kind of man willing to tell the truth, to stand by the truth and to face unpopularity if need be. If you read the story of Joseph, towards the end you will find that the thing Joseph was doing was serving the people. We need leaders today who are working for the people. God is going to save this great country of ours, not by magic but through human beings as leaders. God bless the Y. M. C. A., God bless the church and every organization that is forging manhood to serve as leaders.

Following two sacred numbers by the Colonial Quartette, benediction was pronounced by Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., pastor of the Central Baptist church.

MISCHA ELMAN GIVES GREAT VIOLIN RECITAL

Misch Elman, world famous violinist, enthralled an audience of 900 with the magic of his bow at the Palace theatre Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock when he gave a recital under the auspices of the Norwich Hebrew Institute. He was given a most enthusiastic reception and every number was the signal for long continued applause that brought him back to bow his acknowledgments. As he concluded his final number of the programme, the audience was reluctant to have the afternoon come to a close and when they still remained in their seats after he had returned several times to bow in response to the applause, he favored them with an encore number, Orientals (Cui), which he played muted. Previous to this he had given two other encores, the lovely Ave Marie of Shubert, which he played after the Vieuxtemps concerto, and Contredanse (Elman), which was the encore after his group of four numbers.

Amazing technique, a well rounded tone of wondrous richness and fluency, and the artist's interpretive power demonstrated to his hearers that they had heard one of the master violinists of the present day. His entire programme was given from memory.

Josef Bonime was at the piano, furnishing accompaniments that were in close sympathy with the violinist.

The following was the programme:

Sonata, D Major	Nardini
Adagio
Allegro Con Fuoco
Larghetto
Allegretto Grazioso
Concerto, A Minor, No. 5	Vieuxtemps
Poeme	Chausson

Connecticut College

"Harvest" the play presented at the Lyceum theatre on Thursday, April 16, was acclaimed one of the coming plays of the Broadway stage. The play itself is one of the best seen for many a season. Its characters are forceful, lifelike and energetic, its lines are true to life. All this was readily appreciated by those who saw the play. Yet the girls of Connecticut College were even more fortunate than the rest of the audience, since at 4 o'clock in the afternoon they heard the story of Harvest from Miss Kate Horton herself.

Miss Horton, in speaking of this, her first play to be produced said that, contrary to popular opinion, this was the seventh one she had attempted and not the first, as every one believed it to be. She went on to give advice to would-be writers. She claimed that the first thing to be spoken of is encouragement. When she was writing, she noticed in the Saturday Evening Post an article, "A Play Writer Talks Shop" which very much discouraged her. She feared an unknown writer could not succeed. Yet she kept on writing plays. The next thing she spoke of was the need of a play agent acting somewhat like a clearing house. Although play agents are good to have there are some who encourage writers altogether too much for the sake of some remunerative fee. The next and quite obvious subject that Miss Horton spoke on was sincerity in the work. She claimed that even in commercial work like melodrama and "Abie's Irish Rose" the thoughts and feelings are and must be sincere.

Miss Horton claimed that she knew very little of play construction, all that she knew was gained from practical experience. But she did say that people claimed that characterization was her best work. And in choosing characters Miss Horton told her audience always to know the characters before beginning to write and in this way consistency is maintained. She regretted the fact that Harvest was her seventh play and not her first. However, it was the first plot that she had in mind. Harvest was written in a little over ten days but was in her thoughts for almost five years. It was originally titled "Gilding the Lily" but just for one night. In the morning the title was immediately changed to "Harvest."

The first producer read and returned it to her, saying that it lacked drama but the characters were good. They were lifelike. In fact, they were too lifelike. The play would never succeed. The next report was a very enthusiastic one from Liveright, the producer of "The Firebrand." He wanted to attempt it immediately but on the fourth day changed his mind. The next man said it was far too sombre a play ever to succeed. Then finally John Cromwell reported on it. He said that he liked it very much and thought it possible to do later. Theatre Guild, Equity and all others refused to consider the manuscript but Cromwell interested the Shuberts.

Then the opening night in New Haven, the audience were in gales of laughter, the rain in the second act was ludicrous, the people laughed so at the third act that she feared the play was but a farce. The House manager declared it awful. A Shubert man who came to see it said it could not possibly succeed. She herself thought the play hopeless. She feared to look at the papers next morning and when she did so thought the glowing accounts were just box office write-ups. But finally she was convinced that the critics liked Harvest very much. Her play was good and was going to succeed.

YANTIC MILL INSTALLS ELECTRIC POWER GENERATOR

At the Yantic mill of the American Woolen Co., a new electric generator that has been installed will be started this (Monday) morning and in future will take care of the electrical requirements at the plant.

The mill has been using power from the City Gas and Electric department but will cease to be a customer now as it will be economy to manufacture its own electric power. When the mill was owned and operated by Manuel Kaplan several years ago the city ran a special pole line to Yantic to carry the electric current for the mills and that section of the town.

PLAYGROUNDS ASSOCIATION ORGANIZED FOR YEAR

The Norwich playgrounds association elected William J. Fitzgerald as chairman, Jonathan L. Johnson, secretary and Mrs. Alex Pasnik, treasurer at its annual meeting held for organization for the work of the year.

It is planned to add more equipment and increase the scope of the work over what was done last year.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

New York, April 1—Contrasting the movements characterized this week's markets, quotations of stocks, bonds and foreign exchanges moving upward, while the principal commodities with the exception of cotton, lost ground.

Easier money rates provided the groundwork for an advance in securities prices. Resumption of pool activities brought about brisk advances in the price of many industrial stocks, particularly in the motor group. Maxwell B was an outstanding feature, showing a net gain of nearly 25 points on the week. Nash Motors, Mack Trucks and several other automotive issues, as well as a few rubbers, also attained new peak prices, oil, steel, sugar and copper shares were inclined to yield in sympathy with lower commodity prices, although United States Steel common showed independent strength in apparent anticipation of favorable developments at the forthcoming meetings of stockholders and directors.

The wheat market was extremely erratic. May futures showing a net loss of about ten cents a bushel, cotton prices improved on reports on a drought in the Southwest.

Speculative interest in the foreign exchange market was divided between the sharp recovery in French francs following the formation of a new cabinet by Premier Painleve, and the establishment of new high records for a year by the Norwegian, Danish, Spanish and Japanese currencies.

FOUR HOME RUNS FEATURE MARTIN TEAM'S VICTORY OVER THE ACADEMY

The J. E. Martin team, hailing from Taftville proved to be too much for N. F. A. baseball team Saturday, winning 6 11 to 4 victory over the high schoolers. The J. E. Martin nine presented a team composed of players who are more experienced and are accustomed to play teams of semi-professional calibre. The Academy team although playing a hard game proved to be no more than a set-up for them. The batting onslaught of the visitors was something terrible from the very beginning of the game, pounding out twenty-one hits that netted eleven runs and giving the high school team its first taste of defeat this season.

Peppin, pitcher for the visitors, pitched a good game, striking out eight and receiving good support from his teammates at every stage of the game. The slugging of Joubert, W. Gley, and F. Gley was the terror of the Academy pitchers. Each of these men making a home run and a two bagger. By the end of the game the spectators saw the pill hit for four homers. Why the "Babe" himself had nothing on those boys from Taftville.

The Academy team played a fair game against great odds. Greene, who started in the box is still pitching too fast to be effective and will have to take his time hereafter if he wishes to amount to anything.

The N. F. A. team made seven hits off Peppin one being a homer by Joe Welch netting them four runs. The game brought to view the weakness of the local team. Their batting is not what it ought to be and this no doubt will have to be remedied.

Pheno Tombari for whose benefit the game was played witnessed the contest. The game was stopped at the end of the third inning and a large basket of fruit was presented to him by Coach Brigham in behalf of the players. The coach and manager in short speeches thanked him for his bit on the diamond this year. This was followed by a rousing cheer for Tombari by the players.

The local team will settle down to work Monday in preparation for a game with the Pearl High School this Wednesday in which a team hopes to make up for their past defeat.

(Special to the Bulletin)

Providence, R. I., April 18—The Connecticut Aggies lost their opening game of the season here today, when in a well played contest the Nutmeg Agrarians came off the field on the short end of a 5-2 score. The Brown outfit bunched eight hits, including a double and a triple in the third, fourth and fifth innings, and it was at this time that the damage was done. Connecticut made its lone tally in the fifth inning, when Gilbert scored on O'Brien's single.

DANIELS PITCHES BULKELEY TO VICTORY OVER MORRIS HIGH TEAM OF NEW YORK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 19—Playing in mid-season form and with Tillie Daniels twirling an excellent contest, Bulkeley took over the highly touted Morris High nine of New York City in the opening game of the local school nine at Morgan Park, Saturday afternoon. With City Manager William Holt throwing out the first ball and with nearly 2,000 people witnessing the contest, Bulkeley breezed in by a 7 to 1 count ahead of their Gotham rivals.

Bulkeley took advantage of every scoring opportunity that presented itself during the afternoon. Not one of the nine hits garnered off the Morris High pitching ace, Ader, were wasted. Each was checked in for runs. Ader was no puzzle to the heavy hitting Bulkeley nine, and two doubles and two home runs, the latter by the Bulkeley battery—Daniels and Sheflott—featured the fuss. There was good baseball aplenty, with an occasional bad play by either team to mar the smooth going.

Tillie Daniels had a world of stuff this afternoon. He struck out 12 men in all and helped himself to a home run in the fifth inning. Although wild at times, Daniels receiving almost perfect support in the pinches and twirling himself out of these intricate situations was able to hold the enemy at bay at all times. He allowed but four hits, and would have scored a shut out but an error by Falvey in right field spoiled this unblemished record which looked bright until the eighth inning.

Things began humming from the start and Morris High had two men on the bases in the first inning but failed to score. It was Bulkeley's turn at the bat and with Joe Barry hitting one to left, his steal of second and Hutchison's two ply wallop being the ingredients needed for the manufacture of the first run. Others came in singles. Montali counting in the second after hitting safely. In the third Sheflott connected with one of Ader's fast ones for a home run, the Morris High left fielder losing the ball as he turned to catch it. There was no more scoring until the fifth, and Bulkeley counted twice and made it 5 to 0 in their favor. Daniels started the uprising with a tremendous clout into left for a homer. Barry got his second hit of the day, a line drive to left. Barry was extinguished at third on a fielder's choice by Sheflott, but Booth singled and Hutchison who was safe on the Morris High third baseman's error, scored.

Hits by Barry and Sheflott after one out and two steals, followed by one error scored the final two markers for the Bulkeley nine in the 7th. Morris High saved itself fom a shut out by counting once in the eighth when Rosen got a life on a fielder's choice and counted on Gobel's solid poke close to the right field foul line for two bases.

Hutchison's play at third base featured in the defensive line, handling eight assists and one put out making but one error. The visiting short stop robbed Barry of a hit in the second inning, making a fine stop of his hit through second and throwing the runner out at first. Other plays featured the contest, being numerous in almost every innig. The score:

CHARLES H. EBBETS, OWNER OF BROOKLYN CLUB, IS DEAD

New York, April 19—Charles H. Ebbets, president of the Brooklyn National League Baseball club, died here at six o'clock Saturday morning. He was 66 years old.

Heart failure, from which he had been a sufferer for many years, overcame a brave fight by the baseball magnate to continue in the game which he had helped to make nationally popular through his long connection with the Brooklyn Club.

Mr. Ebbets came to New York two weeks ago from the Florida training camp of the Brooklyn team, where he had sought relief, and was at first believed to have been benefitted. He suffered a relapse yesterday, and physicians last night reported that he was growing steadily weaker at his room in the Waldorf Astoria hotel and held forth little hope for him to recover.

Mr. Ebbets was for years one of the most prominent figures in the baseball world. He played a large part in elevating the sport to the position of prominence it now holds, and brought the Brooklyn club out of the ruck of mediocrity and financial failure to an eminence of success and prosperity.

He first broke into the game in 1883, as bookkeeper for the old Brooklyn club. Step by step he rose, filling various offices, until in 1899, he became president of the club. It was he who saved the situation when various influences were at work to take the National League franchise out of Brooklyn.

Ever since Mr. Ebbets rose to the presidency of the club, the affairs of the club were conducted under his own personal management.

Mr. Ebbets was born in Manhattan on October 29, 1859, and was educated in the public schools. He was married in 1877, and is the father of four children, Charles H. Ebbets, Jr., and three married daughters. His first wife secured a divorce from him in New York state in 1921, and a year later he married again.

His hobby was architectural drawing. He made a special study of draughting and he was recognized as an expert draughtsman.

Socony-Danielson Game Postponed

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, April 19—Inclement weather caused the postponement of the baseball game between the Standard Oil nine of this city and the Danielson B. B. club of Danielson, which was scheduled to take place on Morgan field this afternoon. The weather which took a sudden change from warm on Saturday was cold and the rain at times would have been bad for any pitchers' arm if he was obliged to work on a day such as this. When this game will be rescheduled is unknown at present, but the Socony management will no doubt have the Danielson nine appear in this city this season.

CHAPMAN LOSES TO DEEP RIVER HIGH, 2 TO 0

(Special to the Bulletin)

Deep River, April 18—Although Gero, Chapman Tech twirler fanned 15 of the Deep River High players, the local high school nine taking advantage of several scoring opportunities scored 2 runs while the Whaling City nine failed to score even once, and the locals won a pitchers battle from the New London outfit here Saturday. It was the first defeat for the visitors, who came here with a victory over Madison and Old Lyme High schools.

Both twirlers, responding to the warm weather, twirled excellent ball throughout. Gero zipped the ball over the plate with the speed of a bullet, and had his support not failed him no doubt the tide of the battle would have been reversed, he twirled even better ball than the winning pitcher, O'Brien. Several errors with men on bases by the Chapman Tech infield caused the undermining of the visitors and had Gero been accorded better support the teams would have well been battling.

In scoring against Chapman Tech Saturday, Deep River broke a scoreless spell in which the Red and Black had held their opposing teams in three games. In the final two games, with Brown and Gero doing the twirling the strike out victims totaled 31. So it can be seen that the pitching is effective, but the infield work is not functioning properly and allowed the majority of the runs scored. The score:

BOSTON MARATHON DRAWS MANY DISTANCE RUNNERS

Boston, April 19. — Long distance runners of many nationalities, from Canada, and from many sections of the United States, were gathered here tonight on the eve of the running of the 29th annual American marathon race of the Boston Athletic Association tomorrow over a course of 26 miles, 385 yards long, from Hopkinton, Mass., to Boston. The winner of this year's race will carry off the National A. A. U. marathon championship.

A sturdy field of runners was included in the list of 121 who sent in their entries. Heading the roll is Chas. H. De Mar, 37-year-old Melrose veteran, who has won the event four times—and successively for the last three years. Last year De Mar in winning covered the distance in 2 hours, 29 minutes, 40 1-5 seconds, the fastest time in which the Olympic distance has ever been covered in America.

Three former winners, Frank Zuna, Newark plumber; Calinder, Quincy, Mass., and Bill Kennedy, East Portchester, N. Y., are entered, together with such stars as Frank Vendling, Buffalo; Whitey Michelsen, East Portchester, N. Y., "Chuck" Mellor, Chicago; Willie Kyronen, Finnish-American A. C., New York; Wallie Carlson, Boston; Ralph Williams, of Quincy, and Schou Cristiernsen, Chicago.

TWO WORLD'S RECORDS SMASHED IN CULVER CITY

Culver City, Calif., April 19.—Leon Duray made a world's record when he drove his automobile 25 miles in 11 minutes, 10 seconds, to win the first event on the programme of sprints at the speedway here this afternoon. He made an average speed of 134.22 miles an hour. Tommy Milto finished second, Earl Cooper, third.

Another world's record was smashed in the 50 mile sprint, which Harry Hartz won in 22 minutes, 11 seconds, with an average speed of 135.2 miles an hour. The former record was made by Tommy Milton at Beverly Hills, Calif., Sept. 2, 1922.

Peter De Paola was second, Fred Comer third, Bennett Hill fourth.

The second heat of the 25 mile event was won by De Paola in 11 minutes, 6 3-5 seconds, his average speed was 135.001 miles an hour. Hartz was second and Comer third.

The third heat for this distance was won by Pietro Bordino in 11 minutes 14 3-5 seconds, an average speed of 133.59 miles an hour. Hill was second. Jerry Wonderlich third.

Robert McDonough took the fourth heat. William E. Shattuck was second. Frank Elliott third.

MISS WAINWRIGHT NOT TO ATTEMPT CHANNEL SWIM

New York, April 19. — Miss Helen Wainwright, women's national all-around aquatic champion, tonight announced her abandonment of her proposed attempt to swim the English Channel this summer. Miss Gertrude Ederle, her clubmate, will make the trial alone. Miss Wainwright said a muscle strain suffered several months ago in jumping from a trolley compelled her withdrawal. Recently the strain was aggravated as the result of a fall on a slippery pavement, she explained.

EFFECTIVE PITCHING FEATURES FIRST WEEK IN MAJORS

New York, April 19—(By the A. P.)—Effective pitching of a variety rarely seen early in the season, coupled with heavy hitting when only clusters of safeties would win, put Cincinnati and Cleveland in the pace-making positions of the National and American league races during the first week of the 1925 pennant race.

The Reds went to the front with a rush behind three sensational pitching performances by Donohue, Rixey and Luque, the first of whom won two of the four triumphs posted by the senior circuit leaders. Failure of Carl Mays' arm to round to 1924 form cost the team one game in their series with St. Louis, while the entire line-up strengthened its attack here and the close of the week, piling up 12 hits against Pittsburgh

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

The Dog and the Water-Lily

The noon was shady, and soft airs
Swept Ouse's silent tide,
When 'scap'd from literary cares,
I wander'd on his side.

My spaniel, prettiest of the race,
And high in pedigree,
(Two nymphs, adorn'd with every grace,
That spaniel found for me.)

Now wanton'd lost in flags and reeds
Now starting into sight
Pursu'd the swallows o'er the meads
With scarce a slower flight.

It was the time when Ouse display'd
His lilies newly blown;
Their beauties I intent survey'd
And one I wish'd my own.

With cane extended far I sought
To steer it close to land.
But still the prize, though nearly caught,
Escaped my eager hand.

Beau mark'd my unsuccessful pains
With sigh'd considerate face,
And puzzling set his puppy brains
To comprehend the case.

But with a chirrup clear and strong
Dispersing all his dream,
I thence withdrew, and follow'd long
The winding of the stream.

My ramble finish'd I return'd,
Beau trotting far before
The floating wreath again discern'd,
And plunging left the shore.

I saw him with [illegible] crop'd
Impatient swim
My quick approach
[illegible]
The treasure at my

Charm'd with the sight, "The Water-Lily
I cried,
"Shall hear of this thy deed
My dog shall mortify the pride,
Of man's superior breed:

But, chief, myself I will enjoy
Awake at duty's call,
To show a love as prompt as this
To Him who gives me all.

A Culprit

Little pot-[illegible], your nose
And your chin is browned
[illegible] see
The flies have branded [illegible]
vous fellow
And handed the criminal over to me.

Did you crawl [illegible] wonder
And try all my buttercups' under your chin?
And match with [illegible] over and under My poor Johnny-jump-ups to see which should win

Did you [illegible] out of the roses
And cheat my wild [illegible] out of her dew?
And make all my lady-mother [illegible]
their long noses?
And hurry and scurry for [illegible]
you?

Did you chase my gold butterfly from the sweet clover?
And tie my big bumble bee up in his sleep?
To waken with lily-wall[illegible]
over.
Away from his wife and his children to weep?

So need of confession, my little boy Ben!
And here at the end is a moral for you—
Look into the mirror, for boys are like men
And we read in their faces the deeds that they do.

Mrs. T. W. Brown, In Our Dumb Animals.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

Do you know how the grosbeak got its name? The answer to this question lies in the fact that it has a large bill. The word "gros" means "large." So that is why those members of the finch-sparrow tribe of birds which have large bills are called grosbeaks. Our most common grosbeak is no doubt the rose-breasted grosbeak. It is one of the most beautiful members of the family and is a wonderful songster. In fact it is one of the best of all feathered songsters.

The male has a rich suit of black, white and rose-red. He is black above, has white outer tail feathers, a white patch low down on the back and there are two white spots on the wings. The female's dress is not quite so fancy. She is a streaked, brown bird, resembles an overgrown sparrow and has a thick finch-bill and a white eyebrow.

One of the farmer's best friends is the rose-breasted grosbeak. This is because he destroys large numbers of potato beetles and plant lice. These pests are formidable enemies of gardens and farms. Let alone they will destroy the crops on an entire farm sometimes. Potato beetles and plant lice are choice morsels of food for Mr. and Mrs. Grosbeak and in hunting them out and banqueting on them these birds greatly help the farmer in protecting his crops during the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Grosbeak's home is somewhat poorly constructed compared with the elaborate nests made by other members of the bird family. The grosbeak's nest is a frail affair, made of twigs, weeds and rootlets. It is barely strong enough to hold the eggs and young birds. It is quite a crude nest but manages to serve its purpose in spite of the fact that it is so flimsy.

Mr. Grosbeak is known as a model husband. He takes his turn hatching the eggs and in brooding the young birds. In fact you are apt to find him home more often than you will find Mrs. Grosbeak. Sometimes he sings when on the nest though in low tones, so that he will not betray the location of his home to his enemies that may be in the vicinity.

burned instead of our house.

The Breathing System

Dear Uncle Jed: The breathing system consists of the nose, throat, larynx, wind pipe, bronchial tubes and lungs. The larynx is below the throat and is called the "voice box." The wind pipe is a tube below the larynx dividing into two tubes, the bronchial tubes which go to the two lungs. The lungs are two pink, soft sponge sacks on either side of the lower middle of the chest.

The work of these organs is to breathe in oxygen and breathe out carbon dioxide, germs, water and waste matter. The blood takes up this oxygen in the lungs and gives out the carbon dioxide and other wastes.

Respiration means breathing. Inspiration means breathing in. Expiration means breathing out.

To care for the breathing system one should:

First breathe through the nose, second breathe deeply and abdominally, third, keep the shoulders back and down, fourth, keep free from adenoids fifth sit and stand erect, sixth, breathe pure air, seventh, keep the mouth closed.

Indians

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you short facts about the Indians. When Columbus first came to America he saw people which were very different than those in Europe. He called them Indians and hence from that time they have been called by that name.

The Indians were wild savages, they lived in bark huts, small black eyes and coarse black hair. Their skin is reddish brown. They lived mainly by hunting, fishing, and farming. Their farming, however, was of the rudest kind. They had never coins and bows and arrows.

The Indian did the hunting fighting, and scalping while his wife did the work. She made the wigwam, planted and hoed the corn and made clothes for the family. When they moved she carried the furniture on her back. House keeping was simple. She made a fire by rubbing two dry sticks rapidly together, then she roasted the meat in an earthen pot. In the house there was plenty of dust and smoke, but no complaint was made for house cleaning was unknown.

DOMINICA KARGUL, Age 11.

Tobacco and Alcoholics

Dear Uncle Jed: Tobacco is a plant of which the dried cured leaf is used. The plant generally grows from three to four feet. It contains the deadly poison of nicotine. It is used to smoke, chew and for snuff.

Alcohol is made by the growth of yeast in some liquid containing sugar. Yeast is a very thin plant shaped like a football. Warmth causes these yeast plants to grow and change the parts of sugar to alcohol and carbon dioxide. The common drinks which contain alcohol are whiskey, beer, brandy, rum, wine, porter, ale, cider and birch beer.

Alcohol weakens the muscles in the lining of the stomach and so causes indigestion which causes bad breath. It so weakens the system that diseases are easily caught. If one starts to drink he may form a habit which is very hard to break. Alcohol ruins ones kidneys.

Tobacco does children more harm then men, but it harms men too. The law forbids the sale of tobacco to children.

It stunts ones growth and makes the chest small. Chewing also wastes the saliva and is unclean. It affects the whole system, especially the lungs, heart and stomach. Serious sickness, insanity and death are caused by tobacco.

Therefore: Never drink alcoholics, never smoke, chew or use snuff.

I hope all the Wide Awakes will enjoy reading my story.

A Visit to the Children's Hospital

Dear Uncle Jed: Just a few lines to tell you about my first visit to the childrens hospital. It was about Christmas time when our teacher suggested that we all visit the children at the hospital and carry them Christmas gifts. We were overjoyed at the thought of helping to make others happy.

When we arrived we gave our offerings to the nurse who divided them equally among the children. They were very happy with their gifts as we could see by their bright smiles and joyful laughter. As for myself I can say it was the happiest day of my life.

My Baby Brother

Dear Uncle Jed: It has been a long time since I have written to the Wide Awakes. I thought I would write and tell you about my baby brother. His name is Donald Stanley Bitgood. I like him very much. When I come home from school I play with him. He can sit alone. I have four brothers in all. Two go to school, I like them all very much.

A Visit to Concord

Dear Uncle Jed: Last summer my sister and myself went for a visit to Concord and Lexington in Massachusetts. We went on Paul Revere's Ride There we saw the Hancock and Clarcks house.

In this house we saw cradles, dresses, bonnets, and all sorts of things. We then went into Boston and climbed Bunker Hill mounment. We could see all over the city and harbor. It was wounderful.

MARJORIE MELLOR, Age 10.
Danielson.

North America

Dear Uncle Jed: I want to tell you about what we have been studying in geography at school.

We learned the political division of North America are Alaska, Canada, United States, Mexico and Central America. We learned that Alaska belongs to the United States. The New England states are Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. The best harbors of Connecticut are New London, New Haven and Bridgeport.

ELSIE ALDER, Age 9.

My Doll House

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about my doll house. It has a big door, big enough for grown folks to go through. There are two windows in it with lace curtains. My house is nine feet and a half long and six feet and a half wide. I have seven beds and eight dolls. And I have two doll cows I take my dolls out in. One day I did my doll's washing and after it was dry I ironed the clothes.

Saw a Deer

Dear Uncle Jed: One morning when I was coming to school I saw a deer. It was brown and white. One morning about quarter past seven I looked over in one of our fields and I saw a big deer and it had big antlers. It went under one of our apple trees and ate some of the apples. Afterward he went over the walls and went in to the woods. One morning at nine o'clock a little gray deer came out in front of our house. I wouldn't have seen it if the dog hadn't barked. My mother looked out and the deer was out there. I have seen five deer so far this year.

Take Care of Your Teeth

Dear Uncle Jed: Take good care of your teeth. Do not eat too much candy. Almost every child eats candy. I can't say very much about eating candy because I eat it myself. Every person wants to have nice teeth, but who can have nice teeth if they don't take care of them? Care is one of the most important things.

Clean your teeth with a toothbrush. Don't eat too many oranges. That makes your teeth a greenish color.

Don't let your teeth decay. See the dentist twice a year. As I can't think of anything else to write I will close my letter.

ETHEL SEIDMAN, Age 8.
Jewett City.

In the Country

Dear Uncle Jed: If some children from the city should come into the country now they would see a lot more than they would in the city. They would see all different kinds of flowers. They would hear frogs all around and would see birds. All of the tree blossoms are coming out. The maple tree has a red blossom on it and the elm tree has a kind of brownish blossom.

We have seen robins blue birds, wild ducks and wild geese.

CHARLES CAVELDOSKY, Age 11.

Caught Two Rats

Dear Uncle Jed: I caught two rats Saturday and put them in my hat. We found them under a pile of wood. I gave one hat to Jennie with a rat in it and the other to Frank. Jennie didn't hold the hat tight and the rat jumped out and ran away.

Frank held his tight and we went home. Frank said, "Put this rat in a box." I put him in a box and Frank was watching the rat but after a while the rat got out.

My Chickens

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about my chickens. Last year I raised about 13 but half of them died. This year I hope to raise 13. My sister raised six or seven for my uncle last year.

Mrs. Jimmy Calls on Mrs. Brown

Be neighborly. That's what I say. Misunderstanding clears away.

Mrs. Skunk.

Mrs. Skunk, having made her home under Farmer Brown's henhouse, wasted no time in getting thoroughly acquainted with the neighborhood. "One should know all there is to know about one's surroundings," said Mrs. Skunk, talking to herself for lack of any one else to talk to. "It is necessary in case something unexpected happens. I cannot think of anything happening to me, but something might. It always is possible."

So every night Mrs. Skunk explored all about Farmer Brown's barn and dooryard. She went where she pleased, for though Bowser the Hound met her the very first night he was most polite. That is to say, he got out of her way and made no attempt to interfere with her. He growled a bit, but he was too old and knew too much to bother her. He had never forgotten a lesson in his youth not to disturb a member of the Skunk family.

Mrs. Skunk soon knew all about the barn. She had been under it and in it, for she had found a door open one evening. She knew all about the dooryard. She even had poked her head in the little house of Bowser the Hound. There was just one place she didn't know about and wanted to know about and that was Farmer Brown's house. At times there were delicious odors which her nose told her came from that house. But though on more than one night she went all around that house she could find no way in.

Now Mrs. Skunk likes twilight and moonlight best, but it really doesn't make much difference to her whether it be day or night. So if she happens to feel like it she takes a stroll in the middle of the day. It wasn't long before she discovered that it was in daytime that she most often smelled those delicious odors from Farmer Brown's house. Of course, she also found out that it was also in daylight that those two legged creatures were most often about. But she was so independent that she cared nothing for them. So one morning she decided that she would make a call. She would go up to that house and make a call.

Mrs. Brown was very busy that morning. For one thing she was baking cookies. It was warm and she had left the outer door open. She had just peeped in the oven to see how those cookies were baking when she happened to glance toward Black Pussy's saucer on the floor. A rather good looking person dressed in black and white was finishing that milk. Mrs. Brown caught her breath quickly and opened her mouth to scream. Then she wisely did nothing of the kind. She kept perfectly still. She remembered that Farmer Brown often had said that a Skunk will never offend if not offended, and the surest way of not offending is to keep still.

Mrs. Skunk finished the milk in Black Pussy's saucer and then very calmly, quite as if she were used to houses of this kind, began a thorough inspection of that kitchen. Mrs. Brown squatted in front of the oven, hardly daring to breathe, until suddenly she smelled something burning. Then she forgot all but those cookies.

"My goodness!" she exclaimed, throwing open the oven door and hastily pulling out the pan of cookies. Only two or three of them were burned. When she had made sure of this she remembered her caller and hastily looked for her. Mrs. Skunk was standing in the middle of the kitchen sniffing inquiringly toward those cookies. Suddenly Mrs. Brown recalled that always she had rather prided herself on her hospitality. She broke off a piece of cooky and tossed it to Mrs. Skunk. The latter tried it and approved it.

And so it was that when Farmer Brown's Boy came whistling into the house he nearly lost his breath at the sight of his mother entertaining a morning caller.

The next story—The Holes in the Lawn.

A Letter From Ledyard

Dear Uncle Jed: We have three engines. One of them doesn't go. We have an automobile. We're fixing the Metz. We have a truck engine. It won't go.

THEODORE CROUCH, Age 8.
Ledyard.

A Letter From Two Little People

Dear Uncle Jed: I went in the country once and there were some hens and some big cows and a little baby cow, and I saw them milk the cows. There were some horses and I could take some hay and feed the horses with the hay. Once I started to get the hens' eggs but mother called me to bed too soon. The bull they didn't have milk because he was the father cow. He had a log in his cage and he got it up on his head and carried it around the pen.

We went in the woods and found some pussy willows. Once we only found one little bush of them and then we only got one stick of pussy willows. If you put them in water and leave them long enough, they will come out and be green and be bigger.

And we went on a bridge and saw a lot of turtles. I saw two that mother didn't see. They were on a log. She didn't see them because they went down in the mud too quick. Then we had some apples and we threw the apples in the water so the turtles would eat them when they came up out of the water.

After we got back home in New York city we saw them making a new street. We saw them bang the earth down by a motor and we saw the little shovels dig the earth. Of course you must have seen them make a street so I won't put any more of that down.

JOY AND DAVID COOMBS, Ages 4 and 6.
New York City.

My Kitten

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing to tell you about my kitten. She is a very playful little animal. She is almost a year old and a very good hunter. She goes out in the lot and catches field mice and brings them home to play with before she kills them. She feels very proud when she catches them and wants me to see them before she kills them. She likes to sit on the couch in the sun or in my bed. At night I put her in the cellar to sleep. I made a bed out of a box and she sleeps there peaceful until she hears a rat around then you hear some racket. But it is not long before my kitten has it all eaten.

RUTH HUGGARD, Age 8.

The Angel of the Battlefield

Dear Uncle Jed: Do you know who started the Red Cross society in America? It was Clara Barton. She learned how to nurse when she was young. This is how it happened.

One day her brother fell from the top of a barn and was hurt. He wanted Clara to stay with him day and night. This is how she learned to nurse.

Her brother taught her how to ride horseback. He would put her on one horse and he would get on another.

She nursed the sick and wounded soldiers. She went to Europe to get a rest. When she was in Europe a war broke out. She hurried to the battlefields.

She saw many white tents and nurses with red crosses on their sleeves.

When she returned to America she began the Red Cross society here. The soldiers called her the Angel of the Battlefield.

NELSON M. KEENEY, BANK MAN, DIED SUNDAY AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 19—Nelson M. Keeney, 57, bookkeeper in the employ of the Savings Bank of New London, died this morning at his residence, 23 West street, after a lingering illness with heart trouble. Besides his wife Mr. Keeney is survived by two sons. Mr. Keeney had been employed as bookkeeper practically since youth. He was employed for many years by the National Bank of Commerce, latterly as bookkeeper and about ten years ago he resigned at that institution and joined the staff of the Savings Bank of New London. About a year ago he experienced an attack of heart trouble and his condition failed to improve.

The continued case of Michele Coloandini, of Jefferson avenue, charged with being accessory before the fact in causing the death of his wife, Mary Perry Coloandini, 20, as the result of general peritonitis, following a criminal abortion, came up in the police court Saturday morning. Coloandini was held for trial at the May term of the superior court, in bail of $2,000. Mrs. Mary Vendetto, Grand street, charged with manslaughter, in having been the alleged performer of the abortion is also to be tried at the same term of court for she was held in bail of $10,000 at a session of the police court a week ago.

At Saturday's trial there was an array of professional talent summoned as witnesses, among them being Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman, Drs. Thomas F. Murray, Emanual A. Henkle, Carlisle E. Ferrin, Alfred Labensky and C. John Satti.

During the trial Acting Prosecuting Attorney Perry J. Hollandersky and Attorney Morris Lubchansky engaged in several heated arguments relative to the admission of certain testimony; so heated were the remarks of the opposing attorneys that once Judge Victor Prince informed Attorney Lubchansky that if the latter was not satisfied with the manner in which the trial was being conducted the attorney could withdraw from the court and that another attorney would substitute. Attorney Lubchansky replied that he would continue to act as counsel for the accused.

One of the most heated of the arguments of the two attorneys occurred when Attorney Lubchansky insisted that Medical Examiner Kaufman reveal the identity of the physician who informed the witness of the possibility that Mrs. Coloandini was suffering from peritonitis following a n abortion. Acting Prosecuting Attorney Hollandersky maintained that the witness should not be compelled to reveal the source of his information, but the court ruled that the witness must name the physician who supplied the first intimation of the performance of a criminal operation having been performed. Medical Examiner Kaufman then stated that his informant was Dr. Joseph M. Ganney. Dr. Kaufman was on the witness stand fully an hour and a half, during which time he told of his investigation of the case, together with having performed an autopsy following the taking of the body before the day set for the funeral, to Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital and to having been assisted by Dr. Labensky, Dr. Kaufman and Dr. Labensky told of what the autopsy revealed and to the sending of parts of the vital organs to Yale university, where an analysis of them was made by Prof. C. J. Bartlett and to that medical authority having rendered a report substantiating the findings of Dr. Kaufman and Dr. Labensky.

Other witnesses were Sergeants Nelson Smith and John Cavanaugh.

Mrs. Ernest Black, of Groton, Miss Esther Feldman, Federal street, and Dominic Mark, 171 Main street, patients at Home Memorial hospital, were able to return to their respective abodes Saturday.

The funeral of Ernest DiMarco, 8, son of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio DiMarco, 28 Truman street, whose death occurred at Home Memorial hospital several days ago as a result of internal injuries sustained while playing ball, was held Saturday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church and was attended by many mourners. A mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Raymond O'Callahan. Six playmates of the child acted as bearers. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Nurses at Home Memorial hospital conducted a dance at the clubhouse of New London lodge of Elks Saturday night, the affair being enjoyed by a large gathering.

Patients dismissed Saturday at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital were Mrs. Oliver Tubbs, of Niantic; Mrs. Cyril Spargo and infant daughter, of Westerly and Lambert Day, United States Coast Guard.

Monday will bring a large number of cases for the attention of Judge Victor Prince in the police court. Tonight there are 10 men under arrest, most of them being for violation of the automobile laws, while two knocked out by liquor were arrested and one young man is up for theft. The most serious offender in line for discipline is Ralph W. Tinker, who was arrested Saturday night on Ocean avenue by State Police Officer Bennick when Tinker was detected driving his machine while under the influence of liquor and without lights being displayed. Tinker furnished a surety on his bond of $200 for his appearance in court.

Rachael Blaskin has sold to Max Merrims a three story building, store and residences, corner of Reed and Colt streets, to Max Merrims. The price paid was $15,000.

Robert F. Parker, of Waterford, operated his automobile to New London Saturday evening and parked it on Washington street, arriving there at 7 o'clock. When he returned to where he had left his machine two and one half hours later he discovered it missing. The police were notified of the theft and a request was made of the Groton and Centerbrook state police as well as to the authorities of Norwich, New Haven and Hartford to be on the look out for the stolen auto. This morning shortly after 8 o'clock the car was found on Cedar Grove avenue, where it had been abandoned after those who had taken the car had concluded a joy ride.

Charles Pearl was taken into custody Saturday night by Sergeant Samuel Hick charged with theft. He was released on furnishing a surety on his bond of $200 in Bernard Packer, for the appearance of the accused in the police court Monday morning. The arrest of Pearl resulted when Abraham Katz, proprietor of a store at 47 John street, and who resides in another part of the building complained to the police that his bed-room had been entered and that a watch, chain, gold knife and Knights of Pythias charm had been stolen. Pearl resides in the neighborhood where the Kats place is located and when suspicion pointed to Pearl as the thief, he was arrested.

FATHER AND 4 CHILDREN IN HOSPITAL, MOTHER DIES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 19.—Mrs. Bertha Morin, 37, wife of Alfred A. Morin, carpenter of 65 Cole street, is dead from pneumonia, having died at Lawrence hospital Saturday night. Her husband is a patient at the institution and in a critical condition ill with the same disease and their four children, whose ages range from 5 to 11, are ill with whooping cough in the Mitchell ward of the institution, the father and children having been removed to the hospital last night, two hours after the wife and mother passed away.

A few days ago Mrs. Morin contracted a severe cold as did the husband. The couple did not call a physician until Friday, and it then was determined that Mrs. Morin had developed pneumonia. Her condition is most serious and she was transferred to the hospital where she lingered until about 10 o'clock last night the end came. After the wife was removed to the hospital, Morin also had developed a cold, seriously ill, for pneumonia developed in his case also. He was attended by a physician. The children also had developed whooping cough and the father and children are in need of medical treatment, but a physician was not called.

Saturday night when Mrs. Morin passed away the hospital officials telephoned to a neighbor of the family requesting that the husband be acquainted with his wife's death. When the neighbor entered the house she pitiable cases of the father and children was revealed, for the latter were ill while the father was almost dying from the effects of high fever. City Physician George Chester was summoned and after prescribing for the father and children, he summoned two ambulances and caused the patients to be removed to the hospital. Tonight at the hospital it was stated that Morin's condition was critical, but while the children are seriously ill, they will probably recover.

MRS. STEPHEN POREDA COLLAPSES IN A DANCE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 19.—Her desire to enjoy herself by dancing caused the death of Mrs. Helen Poreda, 30 wife of Stephen Poreda, of Winthrop street Saturday night, for the woman was taken ill while gliding over the floor and after being removed to Lawrence hospital, she passed away, death having been caused by heart trouble, with which affliction she did not know she was a sufferer.

Mrs. Poreda went to Moose hall, Main street, about 8 o'clock and with others enjoyed the dancing about two hours. After having danced through one of the numbers, Mrs. Poreda complained of feeling ill and partially collapsed. Efforts to revive her failed and a physician, who was summoned, recognized in the case of the woman organic heart trouble and had her removed to the hospital. The woman's condition was grave when she was admitted to the institution and in spite of heroic efforts made to save her life she expired ten minutes after she was received there.

R. J. BATES ORDAINED— HIS FIANCEE WELCOMED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, April 18—In spite of the rain there was a very good attendance at the Baptist church Sunday evening to witness the ordination to the ministry at his home church of Raymond J. Bates, a native son of Willimantic, now completing his fourth year of study at Newton, Mass., Theological Seminary. The service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. F. F. Foshay, assisted by Rev. Edwin Sundt, of South Willington, Rev. Elbert E. Gates of Hartford, secretary of the Baptist state convention, and Dr. Woodman Bradbury, professor of Homolitics and pastoral duties at Newton Theological, who delivered the ordination sermon. Dr. Bradbury spoke on The Minister as an Interpreter, from Daniel 11-6, "Show me this dream and the interpretation thereof."

He compared our age after the world war to the befuddled Nebuchadnezzar demanding an interpreter to tell us not only what life is but what it means. The reason for this is the increasing business of the universe as we know it now as never before, and the existent problems of life. The sphere of Christian intrpreter, said Dr. Bradbury, is three-fold; he must interpret God to man, men to their own selves and men to each other. In doing each he performs a pre-eminent favor to society.

In introducing Mr. Gates, Rev. Foshay explained that in the life of every minister are two charge accounts, the first delivered at his ordination and the second at the time of his marriage. Rev. E. E. Gates delivered the first charge to Mr. Bates, with congratulations on the splendid examination he passed at the seminary and on his acceptance of the call to the ministry. He said that one must be truthful, not only pastor, but as leader and religious educator. The people who have been truly great are those who have served in their day, their generation. Every day is the time of his opportunity. "Give the world the best you have and the best will come to you."

The service of ordination with the laying on of hands followed. Rev. Edwin E. Sundt recently ordained in the church at Willington spoke briefly in congratulation on "The Honor of Christian Ministry." He said, "It is a real challenge and a great joy. We are happy. It's great."

Mr. Bates' second ministerial charge was delivered by Rev. F. F. Foshay who welcomed to the platform Miss Myrtle Hawkins, who was welcomed by Rev. Mr. Gates into the circle of Ministers' wives in anticipation of her approaching marriage with Mr. Bates. Special music was sung by the choir. The platform was decorated with flowers. The closing benediction was pronounced by Rev. Raymond J. Bates. Mr. Bates is a graduate of Windham High school, Colby college and a member of the senior class of Newton Theological seminary

50 ACRES BURNED OVER ON VERSAILLES HILLSIDE

Fire Warden F. A. Benton of Norwich who happened to be driving by noticed the blaze on the hillside and because he could not get in touch with the fire warden of that town and as the fire was burning dangerously close to a row of houses, he hurried to the scene. NORWICH EAGLES HAVE LARGE CLASS FOR INITIATION INTO ORDER

Sunday afternoon Norwich Aerie, No. 367, Fraternal Order of Eagles, with Worthy President Timothy Fields as presiding officer, had a large class of candidates initiated into the order in the Eagles rooms on Shetucket street. During the meeting brief remarks were made by State Treasurer W. R. Hastedt, who is also a past worthy president and by Victor Payment, P. W. P., and Junior W. P. Edward J. Mullins.

The chairman of Mothers' day exercises, N. Petrone reported that Norwich aerie will have a very appropriate program for this occasion.

After the invitation exercises the entertainment committee presented the Riverview Serenaders who gave a fine vocal and instrumental entertainment, featuring Al Perrin as soloist. The Southern quartette composed of Charles Lewis, first tenor, "Al" Perrin, 2nd tenor; Fred Randall, baritone and Felix DeBarros, bass were worthy of considerable favorable comment.

A light lunch was served consisting of potato salad, cold meats, ice cream, assorted cakes, coffee, cigars.

The committee in charge for the afternoon, E. J. Mullins, chairman; W. R. Hastedt, John Callahan, Samuel Carden, N. Petrone, Victor Payment, Frank Hunter, John Leirich, R. A. Krohn, had the full support of the membership in making this event one of the most successful held by the aerie in some time.

For Ladies' night, Tuesday, April 28, the committee have engaged the Riverview Serenaders who promise a good entertainment for the ladies with cards and refreshments.

Y. M. C. A. HOLDS MEETING AT NORWICH JAIL

Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock representatives of the Norwich Young Men's Association conducted another religious service at the local jail. The meeting opened with the singing of hymns, after which General Secretary Edwin Hill read the scriptures and offered prayer. Two vocal soles by Hugh Kinder were greatly enjoyed by all present. Edmund A. Prentice gave the talk of the morning, and in a very earnest manner told the men what God had done for them and for all men; we could not live at all but for the kind Heavenly Father who gives us the air, the sun and the showers which makes it possible to subsist in this world. We hear men say at times that they have had luck; there is really no such think as luck, for God has ordered things and his plans are made for every man, though oftimes man violates God's laws and plans; you men, said the speaker would not be confined here today but for the fact that you have broken the laws of men and of God. I have spoken very plainly to you men, but it is because we want you to come back to your proper place in life; God through Jesus Christ is waiting to save you, and I hope you will let Him do so. If any of you men honestly desire to live better lives and sincerely desire that we should pray for you indicate it and we will remember wou at the Throne of Grace; some dozen or more asked prayers.

The inmates gave evidence of their appreciation of this innovation provided by the Y. M. C. A. in their behalf.

CANTATA WELL RENDERED AT CHRIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

The large congregation at Christ Episcopal church Sunday evening enjoyed a delightful musical programme, when the cantata, "Penitence, Pardon and Peace," by J. H. Maunder, was given by the combined choirs of Christ Episcopal church and the Church of the Good Shepherd, Universalist. The cantata was given under the direction of Arthur E. Hall, organist and director of the choir of Christ Episcopal church.

The cantata, which was to have been given on the evening of Good Friday was an expression of the Easter spirit and was given in three parts as it's title would. Credit is due to all those who sang, the choral and solo parts being given in a manner which showed careful study. The singers were in fine voice and their interpretation of the more difficult numbers was most favorably received. The work of Mr. Hall at the organ was most creditable and assisted in a large measure in bringing out the full beauty of the cantata.

SERVICE IN ENGLISH AT GERMAN LUTHERAN CHURH

Sunday evening at the First Evangelical Lutheran church on Franklin street, the monthly service in English was held with a good sized congregation. The pastor, Rev. Herman Hunzinger, preached upon the significance of the crucifixion.

In part he said:

"Good Friday with its bloody cross—on which the son of God has sacrificed himself for the sins of the world is behind us. We have emerged out of the dark clouds of that great distress of mind and heart, which was nevertheless a wholesome discipline for all of us—and the cry of bitter pain, Christ is dead, our dearest friend is dead, has changed into the cry of great joy; He is risen—Why seek ye the living among the dead? We are approaching now the grave in Joseph's garden—and as we move on, the first rays of light appear in the east and suddenly we stand in the dawn of Easter morn. Looking backward we perceive on the hill of Cotvary, the three crosses standing dark and bare against the morning sky. We bow our heads in grief and tears are filling our eyes as we recall the fierce and cruel battle, that was raging there, a battle which has no parallel whether in the history of the spirits or of the visible world. Satan had waged this battle with all the forves of evil concentrated against one, one helpless dying man nailed at the cross in the center—whose blood was streaming out of many wounds. Was this fight of Satan against one helpless man—worth while after all? Indeed it was. It was of the greatest importance for him. But he should win. His kingdom on earth and in the unseen world of evil was at stake, for this man Jesus had an innocent soul, a soul in which all the powers of God were alive, a soul that was praying for those who wanted to murder Him, and even yet was praying in the last terrible agony of death. O what a triumph it would be for Satan if he could break down the divine powers of this soul. It would mean a smashing and final blow for God and humanity. So the battle went on more fiercely from hour to hour. So violent were the clashes between the forces of the devil and the prince of life there hanging on the cross, that even the common course of nature was disturbed. The excitement of the spiritual world reacted on the sun and earth. From the sixth hour—that means noontime—there was darkness all over the land until the ninth hour (3 o'clock in the afternoon) and the earth did quake and the rocks were rent and the tombs were opened—and many bodies of the saints that had fallen asleep were raised. There the greatest moment in that struggle had come, when all the sins ever committed by men, were lifted from our race and like an immeasurable and immense burden were thrown at that God man on the cross—and at the same time—he was forsaken by his father—give up and say: No this is too much for me, I cannot endure it. And then descend from the cross, chase his enemies like rabbits and make Him the ruler of the world by his divine power and glory? Oh what a wonderful worldly kingdom that would have been. This Jesus of Nazareth would have been greater—and by all means better than Alexander and Caesar and Napoleon. What God would have done with him at the end of his life we don't know, but most certainly we do know, what God would have done with you and me and all of us, at the end of our lives. By Christ's unwillingness to suffer and to die for our sins, the immense burden would have been thrown back at us and pressed us down into the depths of eternal death for ever. What happened at the cross at that moment which counted for eternity when Christ was left alone by God? He opened his pale lips just for one word of loud lament: My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me? Then he remains quiet—and in faithful submission unto the good will of his father his innocent soul endureth all the terrors of sin and death. Oh my friend, by this faithful submission unto God, Christ Jesus has beaten the devil and overcome hell and death, and at last when his soul returned out of the depths of hell and damnation His father met him again involved and kept His soul with his almighty love until resurrection day.

On our way to the open grave we are looking—back once more at the three crosses on Calvary. Presently the Easter sun is rising. Behold the cross in the center receives the full blessing of the light, for the one who died on it has brought forth an eternal atonement for his brethren. God has given him the victory over sin and death and hell. The cross on one side remains in deep darkness. No ray of the Easter sun will ever strike it, for on that cross an unrepentant sinner died with a curse on his lips against the meek and loving lamb of God, who was ready to give up its life to save the sinners. There is no Easter hope for the defying and unrepentant heart of those who reject the blood of Christ. But the full light of Eastern gladness is reflected from the cross of Jesus on that other cross on which a poor sinner died with that wonderful prayer: "O Lord, remember me, when Thou arrive in Thine kingdom," and that glorious promise of his saviour: "Verily I say unto thee, Today shalt thou be with me in Paradise."

YOUNG MEN OF DEAD SOULS APPEALED TO BY MGR. MAY

Preaching at the 7.30 low mass Sunday morning from a text chosen from the gospel for the Sunday, John 20, 19-31, "He breathed on them; and He said to them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost; whose sins ye shall forgive, they are forgiven them"—the divine authority in the Catholic church for the sacrament of confession—Rt. Rev. Mgr. May, the rector of St. Patrick's church, addressed himself especially to young men.

The preacher depicted conditions surrounding the miracle of the restoration of life to the only son of the Widow of Nain. Other mothers are overwhelmed with sorrow at the death of their sons; but while the death of the body is the source of anguish, it cannot be compared to that grief which any mother must feel who realizes that her beloved son has experienced the death of the soul. This death can come only through sin.

As the loving mother wept, stricken with sorrow when life had been taken from her son in that far time at Nain, until her grief touched the heart of the compassionate Saviour, so mothers of today grieve, to see their tenderly mutured sons going to spiritual death. And so the heart of Mother Church, too, is pierced with anguish at the sight; tears stream down her cheeks, also, at the spectacle of the carelessness and indifference of some among her sons who through evil living are risking that greatest of all calamities, the death of the soul.

To any such the preacher appealed, bersing them to heed, not alone the tears and prayers of their earthly mother, but also those of the church which is their solicitous spiritual mother. Repentance, grace, the desire to return to favor with God, these are the gifts she implores for them. Once the pitying Saviour hears, speaks the word which stirs the soul dead in sin, there is always the refuge of the tribunal of penance—the duly authorized priest of God to whom the sinner can go freely, acknowledge his guilt, profess his sorrow, declare his purpose of amendment, and feel that he is forgiven—can arise to a new life, again live in friendship with God. No longer need his own mother, and Mother Church, inconsolable, weep and pray. For there can be no questioning of the emphatic words of Jesus Christ the Son of God, who commissioned His apostles, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost; whose sins you shall forgive, they are forgiven them; whose sins you shall retain, they are retained."

In administering holy communion to the large number of penitents, who included the members of the Rosary society, Mgr. May had the assistance of Rev. Myles P. Galvin.

BOY SCOUTS MADE HIKE TO THE DEVIL'S DEN

Members of Troop 1, Boy Scouts of America, of the United Congregational Church, hiked to the Devil's Den in the town of Franklin Saturday and visited various other places of interest en route. The first stop was made at The Towers, Franklin, where pictures were taker by the scouts. Upon arriving at the Devil's Den the many caves were visited and explored and from there the scouts journeyed to Bailey's Ravine, where they were invited by Mr. Bailey to visit his house, many of the curiosities and antiques about the house being shown them. On returning home the scouts noticed a number of forest fires burning about the surrounding hills and comment was exchanged on the old milestones on the Willimantic road.

ALFRED AIKEN CANDIDATE FOR YALE CORPORATION

Alfred L. Aiken, formerly of Norwich, has been nominated as one of the candidates to fill the position made vacant on the Yale corporation, through the termination of Chief Justice Taft's term thereon.

Mr. Aiken is of old New England stock. He is a grandson of the late Governor William A. Buckingham, Connecticut's War Governor, and son of General William A. Aiken of Norwich; a graduate of the Norwich Free Academy in the class of 1887, and Yale college in the class of 1891.

Mr. Aiken is well-known through all New England as first governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, and as chairman of the first and second Liberty Loan committee for the New England district. He was one of those responsible for originating the organization under which the federal reserve banks are now operating. After leaving the federal reserve bank, he was until recently president of the National Shawmut Bank of Boston.

Despite his business activities, he has always found time to devote to public interest, serving on many charitable boards, and actively interested in all welfare work in Worcester, Massachusetts, where he has been living, particularly in the city planning scheme for proper housing.

He has had an unusual training for such a position as he is now a candidate for through being a trustee of Wellesley College and also of Clark University. In fact, his interests are many,—amongst these the Boston Symphony Orchestra, of which he has been a trustee, and the active work which he has done in a similar position for the Worcester Art Museum.

As a Yale graduate, he has given largely and freely of his time to the interests of his Alma Mater. He has been President of the Yale Alumni Association of both Boston and Worcester, and at the present time is a member of the executive committee of the Alumni Advisory Board.

It is certainly of interest to note that Thomas Buckingham, one of the founders of Yale College at Saybrook, Connecticut, and its first Pastor, was a direct ancestor of his. Thus by family line, business training and cultural affairs, Mr. Aiken seems eminently fitted to fill with great credit the position he has been nominated for.

Since every Yale graduate is entitled to a vote, Yale men living in this vicinity are now receiving blank ballots for the election.

Sunday School Lesson Incident Dec. 31:
Luke XII:16-21
Luke II:8-20

Oh worried heart, cast out thy care and fear
And in the glorious lily's radiant flower see,
Read thou the record of thy Father's Love
Which watches o'er us each and every passing hour.

The lilies toil not neither do they spin,
Yet Solomon, on his most gorgeous day,
Could never claim such royal robes of state,
Nor was he ever clothed in such array,
If God then feeds the ravens in the field
Which neither sow nor yet in houses store,
Will He neglect the child He calls His own,
Or yet forsake the one He loves the more?

He knows the things for which we stand in need,
Because the way of man He too hath trod—
He bids us labor without anxious care
And first to seek the Kingdom God.

"When Daffodils Begin to Peer"

When daffodils begin to peer,
With height the dicky, over the dale,
Why, then comes in the sweet o' the year;
For the red blood reigns in the winter's pale.
The white white sheet bleaching on the hedge,
With height; the sweet birds, O how they sing!
Doth set my pugging tooth on edge;
For a quart of ale is a dish for a king.
The lark, that tirra-lirra chants,
With height! with heigh; the thrush and the jay,
Are summer songs for me and my aunts.

GOVERNMENT CLOSES CASE AGAINST SENATOR WHEELER

Rested Its Case Abruptly After Testimony by George B. Hayes, a New York Lawyer—Witness Testified That Senator Wheeler in March, 1923, Asked Him to Appear in His Place in Prosecuting the Oil Prospecting Permits Being Sought by Gordon Campbell, Montana Oil Operator—Senator Wheeler Has Been Indicted For Appearing Illegally Before a Government Department After His Election to the Senate.

Great Falls, Mont., April 20.—(By the A. P.)—After introducing its mystery witness, a New York lawyer, the government abruptly rested its case in the prosecution of Senator Burton K. Wheeler in federal court here late today.

The Montana senator is charged in a federal indictment with appearing illegally before a government department after his election to the senate.

The mystery witness, George B. Hayes, testified that Senator Wheeler approached him in March, 1923, shortly before sailing for Europe, and asked him to appear in his place before the interior department in prosecuting the oil prospecting permits being sought by Gordon Campbell, Montana oil operator.

Hayes asserted Wheeler offered to split the retainer fee with him and created the impression that it was a fat one.

Hayes had barely begun to tell his story through answers to the questions of Dis. Att'y John L. Slattery when Senator Thomas J. Walsh, chief of defense counsel, entered an objection. Senator Walsh contended that the nature of the testimony showed that the government was attempting to prove existence of an agreement not mentioned in the indictment and that such testimony was not admissible. Federal Judge Frank S. Dietrich overruled the objection and Hayes was allowed to proceed.

Hayes declared he was approached early in March, 1923, by Edwin B. Booth, then solicitor for the department of the interior, and was asked to meet with Wheeler. A conference was arranged and a few days later, he testified he met the Montana senator in the lobby of the Waldorf Astoria hotel in New York.

"Wheeler told me he was leaving for Europe and that at least one matter of unusual importance affecting his oilfield was due to come up before the interior department shortly," said Hayes. He asked if I would handle it and said I could discuss the matter freely with Booth. I think it was characterized as the Lincoln oil well or the Lincoln property. I said that I did not particularly desire to take the matter up."

Hayes said Wheeler mentioned his retainer fee and agreed to split it for whatever services Hayes would render. On cross examination, Hayes said he did not recall that the amount of the retainer had been mentioned, but that Wheeler left the impression that it was a large one.

As Hayes unfolded his story, Senator Wheeler leaned back in his chair and sat with eyes closed. He yawned ostentatiously. On cross examination the seasoned senator smiled broadly when the voices of the witness and Senator Walsh arose to an excited pitch.

"I told Senator Wheeler," continued Hayes, "that I thought it would be foolish to retain me; that it would be better to get some one who knew something about the nature of the oil men, in some way or the other he told me he could be of great assistance when he came back from Europe. He said he was a senator and I understood that he meant a state senator. Then he said he was a United States senator and I replied that I did not think I wanted to go into the matter at all. I was rather decided about it, but he asked me to see Booth again and said any agreement Booth would make with me or with me, would have his sanction."

After twenty minutes of questioning by Mr. Slattery Hayes was turned over to the defense.

He stated on cross examination that he did not come to Great Falls under subpoena, but in obedience to a promise he had made the department of justice to appear as witness voluntarily.

Hayes said he did not meet Wheeler after the New York meeting until he appeared before the Brookhart senate committee which has been investigating the department of justice. The witness reiterated his previous testimony that Wheeler had offered a "fifty-fifty" fee split and that, while he did not recall the exact sum, he thought he mentioned "millions".

After cross examination was completed, the government made a final attempt to get into the evidence documents relating to the Lincoln permit, in which Senator Wheeler is alleged to have acted before the interior department in behalf of Campbell, but was ruled out.

Senator Wheeler merely smiled and shook his head when questioned by newspapermen after court had adjourned.

"I haven't anything to say about it," he said. "Wait until I get on the stand."

The five men surrounded the home of Frank Dickerson, at Montauk, where liquor valued at $250,000 subsequently was found, and were loading some of it aboard their truck when ten men opened fire upon them, Delmadge said. His and Tom Smith dropped with bullets in their bodies. As they crawled away, they were joined by their three companions only to face the liquor guardians led by a man called "Captain Walker," Delmadge said. Forced to their knees the five pleaded for mercy while Delmadge was stripped of his shield, revolver and hat. Then they were permitted to escape in an old automobile. Later all but O'Keefe were arrested.

Delmadge was one of sixteen witnesses subpoenaed by United States District Attorney Greene of the Long Island district and District Attorney Eldredth of Suffolk county. The hearing was adjourned until April 28 to enable officers to produce other witnesses.

Miss Helen Smith, sister of Frank and Thomas, who was among those subpoenaed denied that she had any knowledge of bootlegging activities on Long Island. She declined to answer questions concerning how she had bought an automobile recently and told of a mysterious telephone call to her asking about the condition of her brother. She testified that she believed it was "Captain Walker" who had called her.

Lawrence Pleasants, of Sag Harbor, told the district attorneys that he was not at the fight, asserting that he was in New York at the time. A man named "Pleasants" had been mentioned by Delmadge as being one of the defenders of the liquor on Dickerson's farm. Arthur Brewngardt, employed by Dickerson, testified that the alleged hijackers had threatened to burn the house if they did not obtain the liquor they were seeking.

Dickerson, who is under arrest on a charge of illegal possession of liquor, has been subpoenaed for April 28.

NEW FRENCH CABINET IN PARLIAMENT TODAY

Paris, April 20.—(By the A. P.)—The new French cabinet will make its bow before parliament tomorrow. Paul Painleve is at the head of the ministry, but Aristide Briand, ex-foreign minister, and Joseph Caillaux, head of the finance department, figure in such important roles, that the cabinet is rarely referred to in Paris as a plain Painleve ministry, but rather as a composite government.

In the chamber the premier will read the ministerial declaration, which was approved unanimously this evening by the first council of ministers presided over by President Doumergue. Simultaneously, M. Steeg, minister of justice and vice president of the cabinet, will perform a similar duty in the senate.

The declaration is a concise document, as French ministerial declarations go. It deals briefly with the problem of security and it is vague on financial policy, M. Caillaux, not having yet had time to make a proper survey of the mass of figures confronting him. It disposed of the religious question quickly, indicating the government's desire to relieve the present tension and avoid further friction with the church.

The indications are that the government will receive a comfortable majority in both houses. The customary vote of confidence may be reached in the chamber late this evening, or it may even be deferred until Wednesday. The senate, after hearing M. Steeg, will probably adjourn until the chamber has defined its attitude toward the new government.

Interpellations will be presented by M. Cachin, the communist leader, M. Goy, radical, and M. Bertrand, and M. Taittinger, of the center and right parties. M. Cachin's interpellation is likely to cause the usual communist disturbances. M. Goy is considered friendly, but the demand which will be made by Paty Bertrand in behalf of the war veterans that the Premier explain M. Caillaux's presence in the cabinet seems highly inflammable.

U. S. MARINES HAVE BEEN LANDED AT CEIBA, HONDURAS

Washington, April 20.—A detachment of 165 officers and men from the United States cruser Denver was landed today at Ceiba, Honduras, to protect foreign lives and property.

The landing was made by order of Captain W. S. Jeffers, commanding the Denver, at the request of George P. Waller, American consul at Ceiba, and local authorities of the port who joined with the consul in asking protection of the navy forces.

The revolutionary movement in Honduras, reported to be headed again by General Gregorio Ferrera, defeated candidate for the presidency in that country, and leader of several revolutionary jaunts in the past, already had bene marked by fighting in the vicinity of Ceiba and disorders along the Salvadoran border.

Local disorders in Ceiba also have been reported. But advices so far received from American agents in Honduras have failed to mention the capture of Ocotepueo and the advance of rebels toward Comayagua, near Tegucigalpa, capital of Honduras, as reported today from Nicaraguan sources.

Intelligence reports received by the Washington government within the last 24 hours, however, said that General Ferrera was believed to be in Guatemala. In the event these reports prove correct, officials here who are familiar with General Ferrera's tactics said they believed he was in Guatemala waiting only until he was assured that the revolution had been successfully started and expanded to proportions where his personal command was required. When that moment arrives, if it does, officials said the general unquestionably would reenter Honduras and move energetically to overthrow the Tegucigalpa government.

EXONERATED FROM BLAME IN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

New Haven, April 20—Harry V. Whipple, New Haven banker, was exonerated from blame in connection with an automobile accident in which six years old Mary E. Caine of this city was fatally injured, in a finding handed down by Coroner Eli Mix. The coroner set forth that on the afternoon of April 8, last, the girl attempted to cross Edwards street in the direction of the Edwards street school house and ran against the fender of the automobile operate dby Mr. Whipple.

The girl died three hours later in the hospital, death having been due to a fractured skull. The coroner set forth that Mr. Whipple had slowed down when he saw some school children nearby. A passing truck engaged his attention temporarily, according to the finding, and at the same time his vision was obstructed by two parked automobiles, which hid the little girl from view until she ran out into the street. Mr. Whipple brought his machine to a stop within a few feet after the accident.

CONVENTION OF LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

Richmond, Va., April 20—Bureaucracy in government and the adding of bureaus and commissions to governmental machinery were criticised in an address tonight by Huston Thompson, member of the federal trade commission, before the national league of women voters' convention.

Despite approval of the principle of less government in business by statesmen, officials and business men, he said, bureaus and commissions are steadily being created but he saw no escape from this delemma so long as price-fixing associations were allowed to destroy competition or centralization of economic power in business combinations was permitted.

The convention today adopted a program of work for 1925-26 dealing with child labor, living, women in industry and elected Mrs. Casper Whitney, of New York, first president; Miss Adele Clark, Virginia, second vice president, and Miss Katherine Ludington, Lyme, Conn., treasurer.

Coolidge Addressed D. A. R. Convention

Warned Against Government Intrusion Through Legislation Into Private Affairs of the People.

Washington, April 20.—President Coolidge, in an address of welcome here tonight before the annual convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution, expressed the view that the only way to avoid the "constant interposition of the government into practically all the affairs of the people," is for them "to adopt a correct course of action, to provide the proper standards of conduct by their own motion."

Commending members of the organization for their efforts "to raise the civic ideal, to make better citizens to resist evil influences, to cast out corruption—in short, to lift up the average of American life to the full level of its highest aspirations," the president continued:

"It is my belief that in the pursuit of these purposes and the taking of these actions you are putting the ideals of the revolutionary period into practical effect. It is important to note that the efforts which you are making, the duties which you are performing, are not being sought through the interposition of organized government. They are the voluntary acts of our citizens taken through their own initiative. In adopting this course of action you are in the best sense of the term, administering to the ideal of self-government.

"We have heard in the past, and are likely to hear in the future, very much discussion about the intrusion of the government through legislation into the business and private affairs of the people. Insofar as this is a reflection of an ideal, requiring and demanding a higher standard of conduct, we ought to rejoice at it and support it. But when we see that it is not wholly successful, we ought to remember that it is at best but a temporary makeshift, an effort to make things better, and that we cannot expect through these methods to attain perfection.

"There is only one way in modern civilization with its broad privileges of the franchise, with its representative legislative bodies, to avoid the constant interposition of the government into practically all the affairs of the people, and that is for the people to adopt a correct course of action, to provide the proper standards of conduct by their own motion. If they do not want government through public action, they must provide it through private action. That is the true ideal of self-government. The attainment of that ideal lies some distance in the future, but it is an ideal toward which we should constantly strive.

"If the people wish to be in the full enjoyment of their liberties, if they wish to be unhampered by government restrictions they can secure that privilege. But they cannot secure it by abolishing government. They can only secure it by adopting a thorough system of individual self-government. Government is an absolute necessity to human progress and human happiness. If we do not wish to have it composed from without, we must ourselves impose it from within."

The Americanization work of the Daughters of the American Revolution among emigrants was praised by Mr. Coolidge, who declared that the United States' policy of restriction seemed necessary 'in view of the certainty that unprecedented numbers would flow to us from Europe; more than we could be sure of assimilating; more than European countries could well spare."

"Had there been no limitations," he added, "the number of newcomers among us in the last four years would probably have been several million greater. If we had been called upon to receive and place such a number, it may well be doubted whether they would have found their condition here much better than it was in Europe. Certainly our problem of helping adjust them to the new conditions and the hard competition of such a situation, would have been far more difficult.

"It is manifestly impossible to know how many immigrants would have come in the last four years if no restrictions had been imposed. But competent official authorities have estimated that 2,000,000 would have come in each of these four years, or over three times as many as did actually come. We may well doubt whether that would have been to the advantage of either them or the country.

"The welfare of all the people will be promoted by a truly national life. In these last few years we have all realized as never before the need to bring about the spiritual unification of this great people. A hundred and ten million people, living together, may or may not constitute in the full sense a nation of a hundred and ten million. The war brought appreciation of the truth. We achieved our independence a century and a half ago. We confirmed our political union sixty years ago. We have all the time been struggling toward spiritual and moral unity.

"To gain and perfect it, we need just such interests and activities as these to which the Daughters of the American Revolution are so sincerely devoted. We need not only to draw the newcomers into our social structures, but we need also to make them contribute to its strength and beauty. We may gain much from them. In the diversification of our culture, the broadening of our interests, the development of our literature, and arts, the formation of a rounded, symmetrical national character, they can help us vastly. We shall best serve both them and ourselves if we shall fully recognize this mutuality of interest."

Peasant Of Early Revolutionary Days

Battle of Old North Bridge Fought on April 19, 1775, Was Reenacted on Its 150th Anniversary.

Concord, Mass., April 20—Down a snow-covered glassy slope a valiant little band of Minute Men and militia clad in the Colonial buff and blue marched today to the tune of "The White Cockade", played by its fifers. On the banks of the Concord River a still smaller company of British grenadiers stood guarding the Old North Bridge. At the approach of the Colonials, the Red Coats retreated across the bridge, their fifers playing "Yankee Doodle" and some of them began to rip up the planks with their bayonets. Shouts of defiance were followed by a British volley and two Minute men fell. The Colonials aimed their fifes at the ducks and returned the fire.

For a few moments muskets blazed on both sides. Then the British regulars turned and fled and the farmer soldiers took possession of the bridge.

Thus the fight at the Old North Bridge on April 19, 1775, was reproduced in the presence of thousands who had come to this historic town in spite of snow and the cold northeast wind to help celebrate the 150th anniversary of the beginning of the American Revolution.

Thousands who had gained points of vantage along the route of the anniversary parade were unwilling to surrender them in order to walk the half-mile to the battleground but the big field near the bridge was filled with spectators when a cannon shot from the hill across the road signalled the beginning of the pageant.

Adjoining this field is the old manse where the village preacher gave comfort to the wounded Minute Men—a dwelling made famous in later years by Nathaniel Hawthorne.

The battle over, Red Coats and Colonials, both members of the 101 Engineers, Massachusetts National guard, fraternized and took their places in the brilliant military parade. Regular army and National guard troops, marine and sailor detachments, with veterans of the Civil and Spanish Wars, members of the American Legion, the Ancient and Honorable Artillery company of Boston, the Worcester Continentals and history companies of Minute Men from Lexington, Acton, whose soldiers were the first to fall in the Concord fight, and other Middlesex towns, delegations from patriotic and fraternal societies and Boy Scouts followed.

Symbolizing the healing of the scars caused by the Revolution, the British Military and Naval Veterans association had its place in the long line. Bringing up the rear were elaborately decorated floats depicting revolutionary and colonial themes.

Major General Clarence R. Edwards, who commanded the Yankee Division in France, was chief marshal of the parade. The guests of the town, who rode in closed automobiles, included Dwight F. Davis, assistant secretary of war, members of the sesquicentennial commission appointed by President Coolidge, governers of many states, Governor Fuller of Massachusetts with his staff, and other state officials.

Lexington shared with Concord in the glory of the day. If Concord had its thousands, Lexington had its tens of thousands. This was due partly to its nearness to Boston, partly to the fact that the sun dispersed the clouds in the afternoon when the chief events were held there and partly to the presence in Lexington for several hours of Vice President Dawes and General Pershing.

These two distinguished guests traveled in automobiles from Boston over the route followed by the vice president's ancestor, William Dawes, Jr., who warned the inhabitants along that road of the approach of the British troops while Paul Revere was galloping over another route.

At Lexington Green, where the first shots of the Revolution were fired, they greeted impersonators of Revere and Dawes who had come from Boston on horseback. They viewed the historic spots of the town and spent some time in a reviewing stand erected for Lexington's military parade before leaving for Concord to attend literary exercises in the Concord armory in the late afternoon.

When Vice President Dawes was introduced the entire audience arose and cheered and applauded him for several minutes. He spoke briefly.

"One thought that I carry away from this occasion," he said, "is that the government is not dead. The spirit of Americanism is everywhere, the constitution is fixed in the hearts of people. Sometimes it is assailed wherever the American flag goes up party lines, sectional lines and racial lines are all forgotten. The flag of our country, long may it wave."

"FOOL" LAWS CLUTTERING UP THE STATUTE BOOKS

New Haven, April 20—Colonel Arthur Woods, former police commissioner for New York City, speaking at the sixteenth annual Yale Divinity school convocation here tonight, devoted a large portion of his address to prohibition and law enforcement and commented on what he characterized as the great number of "fool" laws that clutter up the statute books.

"A law is not a law," Colonel Woods said, "when it is merely a printed statement in the statute boks. It must be a rule that works, and if it doesn't work it cannot really be counted as the will of the majority of the people.

"All in all, we must get a better perspective on the prohibition business. We must remember how easily laws are made and how weak is the flesh of those who make them. We must remember also who elected the lawmakers."

Speaking on the work before the minister today, Colonel Woods said that the ministers "cannot work with the careless optimism that characterized Pollyanna. They must face facts and act on them no matter how much these facts upset preconceived notions of what the world should be."

REAL WARFARE IN QUEST OF RICHES THROUGH LIQUOR

Story of a Night Battle Between Alleged Bootleggers and Hijackers Related at Investigation Into Prohibition Enforcement Conditions on Long Island—Vanquished Men Knelt Before Their Captors and Begged For Their Lives.

Riverhead, N. Y., April 20—A dramatic recital of a night battle between alleged bootleggers and hi-jackers with liquor valued at $250,000 as the prize, and how five men, two of them wounded, knelt before their captors after the fight and begged for their lives, was told at the opening of an investigation into prohibition enforcement conditions on Long Island at the Suffolk count courthouse.

The investigation, in part, has grown out of published reports that Suffolk county is a "bootleggers paradise" and one of the main gateways thpough which liquor is taken to New York. Federal and state authorities are making the investigation.

William Delmadge, former state police rookie, still suffering from a bullet wound he received in the battle between the alleged bootlegger-hijackers, at Montauk April 11, testified concerning the liquor-seeking expedition of which he was a member. He admitted that he had gone along to protect the trucks by his presence in uniform. He had been offered $100, he said, to sit beside the driver of the rum truck, but he denied that he knew the liquor was to be stolen.

Delmadge testified that he had joined the party at the invitation of Jerry O'Keefe, a former state trooper, who is now being sought on a warrant for attempted extortion. Tom Smith, who also was wounded, Frank, his brother, and William Shaber the other members of the party, with Delmadge, are now facing charges of attempted extortion. They all agreed that O'Keefe was the leader of the expedition.

SHIPPING BOARD UPHELD IN COLUMBIA SUPREME COURT

Washington, April 20—The shipping board was upheld in the District of Columbia supreme court in the sale to the Dollar Interests of the five vessels in the California-Orient service at present operated out of San Francisco by the Pacific Mail Steamship company.

After a day of arguments devoted to legal aspects of the sale as authorized by majority vote of the board, Justice Hits announced that he would dissolve the temporary injunction obtained by the Pacific Mail staying the transaction. He did not announce the reasons for the decision but these are expected to be made public when he signs the order Wednesday terminating the injunction.

The Pacific Mail at once prepared to appeal the case to the court of appeals and indicated that papers in this proceeding would be restraint against completing the transaction. If the court of appeals sustains the decision of Justice Hits, a further appeal by the Pacific Mail to the United States supreme court is possible, but such a step was regarded tonight as somewhat improbable.

In considering the case, the court of appeals will go only into legal phases surrounding the sale and not into the merits. The latter course was urged on Justice Hits by counsel for the Pacific Mail, who asked that the government's motion to dismiss the suit be considered with the rule of the court asking why the injunction should not be made permanent. The court decided, however, to consider first only the motion to dismiss.

This motion, as filed by Chauncey G. Parker and O. P. M. Brown, governmental counsel, contended that the court was without jurisdiction to review acts within the discretionary authority of the shipping board, that the Pacific Mail was not an interested party to the proceedings and that the suit was in reality directed against the United States.

SOFIA IS SURROUNDED BY SOLDIERS AND POLICE

Sofia, Bulgaria, April 20.—(By the A. P.)—Sofia remains surrounded by a strong cordon of soldiers and police, and efforts to track down the ringleaders of the conspiracy, involving the killing of one hundred and sixty persons in the Sveti Kral cathedral Thursday in an attempt to overthrow the government, are being vigorously carried on.

With the death of Captain Minkoff, a former officer in the engineers corps and a sub-chief of the Sofia communis central executive committee, perhaps the leader of the plot has perished. But Captain Yankoff and several confederates are still at large. The police came upon Minkoff today, and when he resisted, shot and killed him.

The plot had long been premeditated, it was said. Accomplices in the shape of a young student and a sacristan were secured by bribery. It was the student, the police say, who climbed to the roof of the cathedral a quarter of an hour before the services at the funeral of the murdered General Georgieff, and lit the time fuse of the bomb, which caused such destruction among the government officials, high military officers, and women and children gathered below.

Other accomplices were waiting near the cathedral ready to carry out the pre-arranged plans, which included further assassinations and outrages.

The trio had been missing since Saturday when the grand jury returned the indictments charging they were responsible for Miss Oberholtzer's death through failure to give her medical attention after she had swallowed poison at a Hammond, Ind., hotel following alleged attacks by Stephenson.

N. Y. EAST CONFERENCE OF THE M. E. CHURCH

New York, April 20—The eighteenth amendment is in the constitution to stay and the Volstead act has slight chance of being repealed, the Rev. Otho F. Barthlow, Mount Vernon, N. Y., chairman of the board of temperance, prohibition and public morals, said in his report today to the New York east conference of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Observation since the last presidential election shows no "wet" candidate will ever be elected president, the report said.

The report continued to say the board believed some strong political organization in New York and Connecticut is protecting the bootleg forces for votes and finance, that notwithstanding this there has been a decided gain in prohibition law enforce since the last conference of the church.

The report included a protest last fall of three alleged violations of corrupt practices acts and declares the election of the congressmen has resulted in drastic action against several alleged "wet" dry agents, who were not named, but who were said to have been discharged.

The ministers report attacked the New York legislature for its failure to pass an enabling act at its recent session. It mentioned "the wet governor of the state of New York," but at the conclusion of the report, on motion by the Rev. Dr. David G. Downey, secretary of the Methodist Book Concern, New York, all reference to the "wet governor" was deleted.

Emory Buckner's appointment as United States district attorney to succeed William Hayward was characterized as "most acceptable" and his recent padlock proceedings against fourteen cabarets in New York were called a "gesture with teeth in it."

The report further approved the election of S. M. Davenport to congress and recommended that dry agents be placed under the civil service commission. Another provision of the report, which was adopted by the conference, was a measure advocating that all soft drink stands in the country be placed under government control, as a guard against bootlegging activities.

The entire world is facing a crisis in morals, the report declared.

"Sensuous dances, inordinate love for games of chance and licentious performances in a multitude of theaters are external symptoms of a breakdown in morals, which has been too conspicuous throughout the world in the past decade," the report charges.

RODEO PERFORMANCE IN CONGESTED NEW YORK

New York, April 20—Columbus Circle, one of New York's most congested traffic spots, was the scene of an unannounced rodeo today when five calves, fresh from the country and headed for the slaughter house, escaped from a motor truck and went on a rampage.

Frightened stenographers shrieked and dashed to places of safety; trolley bells clanged and motor horns set up a raucous clamor while traffic cops tried to catch the animals.

Dodging in and out of long lines of taxi cabs and motor cars, the bluecoats reinforced by volunteer cowboys finally captured four of the calves by football tactics. The fifth, scaling the grass in Central Park, [illegible] across the circle. A policeman [illegible] him and all five were bundled into the truck to resume their journey to the slaughter house.

EARNINGS OF $250,000 LOST IN SIX WEEKS OF STRIKE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, April 20—The belated wintry blast which swept Willimantic Monday failed to cool the spirit of the striking operatives of the American Thread Company and they turned out in full numbers for the opening mass meeting of the week at the Gem Theatre. The strike enters upon its seventh week and an aggregate sum of $250,000 has been lost in earnings during that period.

Alexander Marks of Boston was the only speaker, as State Senator John Powers of Cumberland, R. I., a great champion with the local strikers, failed to put in an appearance. Mr. Marks' talk based on the establishment and fundamental functionings of the American Federation of Labor and of its purported existence for the improvement of labor conditions. He read from several press reports of addresses by President William Green of the federation, laying emphasis on a talk given by President Green in New York last Saturday in which he said that the right of the worker to organize for his own benefit was as essential as for the employer to do so. Miss Amy L. Hooker, president of the local council was in charge of the meeting.

Her announcements of meeting of departments and committees for the day were supplemented by remarks by Miss Mary Kelleher, national organizer. In pointing out the steadfastness of the strikers to date Miss Kelleher stated that last week one room of the mills opened with five of the operatives back on the job. Monday morning only one of the five reported for work. Miss Kelleher thanked the strikers for the excellent picket line which they had maintained and admonished them not to relinquish their efforts regarding this duty, as this was the strongest weapon which the strikers had. Frank Gorman of Providence, R. I., is expected to speak here Tuesday and Wednesday mornings.

EAGER, enthusiastic woman after eager, enthusiastic woman welcomed our representative when they learned he had ready their precious "savon de toilette"—Lux Toilet Form

The Framingham women want more . . .

They weren't content with the single cake to try . . . they take 2 or 7 or 10 . . . and then come back for more

They'd waited and waited for it—the women for whom we made this new, different toilet soap!

They'd written and written us—

"Do make us a soap as fine, as exquisite as French soaps! We want a soap to use every day that we will love like imported soaps. We know you can make it—you made our marvelous Lux."

Then Lux Toilet Form was introduced to Framingham!

Our own representatives took it there first to see what women thought of it.

That first day. . . . !

The women in Framingham weren't content with the single cake we offered them to try!

"I'm giving it to my friends" one woman prefaced her fifth eager order.

"My wife wants to have plenty on hand"—that man tucked 18 cakes under his arm.

One important store took 100 cakes for a trial order—they sold every one that day! Now they order by telephone to get it fast enough. Another sent a hurry call for 500. Still another for 700. "Can you deliver to us by motor—quick?"

Those eighty stores in Framingham to which we took Lux Toilet Form—in eighty different ways they told us the same thing! It's wonderful—but then it's what women wanted—"un vrai savon de toilette"—Lux Toilet Form!

Satiny, fine-textured, smooth—Lux Toilet Form is made by the method France uses for her finest toilet soaps. This makes Lux Toilet Form firm, solid, lasting. That is why Lux Toilet Form wears and wears so long!

Fragrant, magic lather from this new delicious soap!

You know how French soaps make you feel—luxurious, satiny-all-over—that's why you used to pay extravagant prices for them! Intangible—but oh, so real—the satiny, caressed, delicious feeling Lux Toilet Form gives your skin. Somehow, you feel charming—more exquisite!

Slip it out of the dear lavender and white wrapper—here it is, the exquisite "savon de toilette" you asked for—Lux Toilet Form! Firm, lasting—all the family can delight in it for both toilet and bath. Your druggist has Lux Toilet Form, your department store and your grocer. Ask for Lux Toilet Form today. Ten cents. DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

It isn't supposed to snow very much at this time of year—if at all—but the weather man took a try at staging a winter scene, Monday morning, and did a fairly good job. Those who were up as early as 6:30 found snow driving in from the northeast on the wings of a half gale that must have originated where icebergs are rampant. The snowstorm did not last very long, but the temperature acted as though it were February. As late at 8 a. m., sleet was driving in and even later in the morning the frigid rain was freezing to fences and on the sides of buildings. It was no day for tender youth to be afield singing of spring—not unless youth was fur-clad and ultra-enthusiastic.

The storm will rate as one of the coldest for this period of the spring season in years. It was actually bitter. It meant speeding up heater fires in many homes and again pressing into service fires that had not been in use during the present month.

This particular northeast storm was unusual in some respects. When it was getting under full headway, just before dusk Monday evening, lightning began to flash in the southwest and thunder to roll out ominously. Few recall experiencing hereabouts a heavy and cold northeast rain storm while lightning was getting in its work in another quarter of the heavens.

After all the reversion of the season the winter caused little if any damage—unless to retard the growth of early crops. It was mighty unreasonable and uncomfortable, but it is a thing of the past now and like all such things, it will be soon forgotten.

The proposal that the borough limits be extended so as to bring within the taxing domain of the borough a great deal of property that has been built up outside in more years is likely to meet with strong opposition—chiefly because the move does not appear to offer any right for such an extension of boundaries. Proponents of the plan argue that the new property would receive the benefits of the borough, getting water, fire service and other privileges that come, brought in, and return there for it would pay taxes. This proposal has been argued back and forth, but it does. There are those outside the borough who would be willing to pay the smooth tax assessed each year for the protection and advantage of such public utilities as have been recommended. On the other hand there are those who prefer to remain outside the borough and get along as they are.

Sooner or later the borough lines likely will be extended. It appears in the nature of things that this should be a fact general conditions are such just at present that a movement for the change would be certain to meet with strong opposition, sufficient probably to defeat the plan.

All the velvet is not on one side in the plan to extend the borough lines. The borough would collect additional taxes but, on the other hand, it would be called upon to extend public service arrangements that would call for heavy investment on its part, possibly sufficient to offset the tax revenue to be obtained from bringing in the additional properties that makes a subject for discussion.

Development of the passenger bus line business goes on apace in this section of southern New England. Among the projected lines is one from Worcester to Putnam, with, it is said, the intention of extending this service through to New London, if objection that may arise from transportation companies can be overcome.

"Sky rockets galore" That seems to be the verdict of the period. There are now lines out of Providence to Danielson, to Moosup and to Putnam, mentioning only those that are concerned with traffic in this corner of the county. All are all doing business. One needs ever thanks of taking a train at many hereabouts these days to get to the Rhode Island capital. One selects a bus and rides over rapidly, comfortably and safely. This is not propaganda for bus lines. It is mere mention of the fact here is a transportation proposition that is winning a place for itself in modern life. It is a confirmation of the old state coach service, in many cases over the same routes that the horses plodded over a century ago with the followers of the pioneers in this region as passengers.

Old Killingly pond, near East Killingly, is down about ten feet from its normal level at this time of year, though it was gaining Monday, reports from that section had it, following the heavy rain of Sunday night. This body of water, part of the reservoir system up there, has been below full pond for months, evidence of the water shortage this section has experienced during the past year.

The plant of Davis and Brown at East Killingly is operating only three days a week and the plant of the Aseptic Products company in the same community is also on an uncertain basis of operation, further evidence that business in the textile and kindred lines is not just what it ought to be this particular season.

St. James' Parochial school opened Monday morning after the Easter recess. Of special interest is the fact that the parish is now concerning itself with raising a fund for a new building. At the intersection of Woodstock avenue and Lamoth street, a Ford truck driven by Max Levine came out of the latter street at a fast speed. Neither was thrown out, but a piece of the broken windshield struck Mrs. Eke in the neck and severed the jugular vein.

A passing truck of the Putnam Light and Power Co. conveyed Mrs. Eke to the office of Dr. F. A. Morrell. She was unconscious and Dr. Morrell called the ambulance and had her removed to the Day Kimball hospital. FOR THOMAS CONRAD FOR THOMAS CONRAD

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Westerly, R. I. April 20—Thomas Conrad, of Dorchester, Mass., who assaulted W. A. Sandbach, of New Haven, Conn., after the latter had given him a ride in his automobile four miles west of here March 20, was sent to State prison for 20 years, in Washington county superior court, today.

GIVE PRUNES FIRST CHOICE for breakfast?

You'll understand why, once you realize just what the requirements of a breakfast-fruit are.

Eggs, cereals, meats, and practically all foods served for breakfast, are highly concentrated—rich in nutriment, but lacking the bulk and body needed to keep them moving through the alimentary canal.

This need must be met by the breakfast fruit. And Prunes have all the natural body and tender fruit tissue—plus the mild, delicate flavor that enables you to eat them in generous enough quantity to make breakfast a properly-balanced meal.

And Be Sure to Get Good Prunes!

Serve Prunes often—for their healthfulness, for their fine flavor and because they are such a truly economical fruit. And be sure that you get the best Prunes! Insist upon sweet, thin-skinned SUNSWEET PRUNES from the famous orchards of California—selected, packed and sold by the growers themselves.

There are two ways to buy them: Sealed in our new, sanitary 2 lb. carton—or from the regular 25 lb. SUNSWEET box. We particularly recommend SUNSWEET PRUNES in cartons. Order from your grocer—today!

A QUICK WAY TO COOK PRUNES

Wash SUNSWEET PRUNES, cover with hot water and allow to soak one hour. Bring to the boiling point in the same water in which they were soaked, cover and cook until tender. Add sugar ten minutes before removing from stove. Allow one tablespoon to one cup of Prunes, measured before soaking or cooking. If a little syrup is desired, remove Prunes to serving dish when tender, and boil the liquid until it is of the desired consistency. A little orange peel, lemon juice or stick cinnamon improves the flavor for some tastes.

WARRENVILLE

A most delightful entertainment was the verdict of the large audience attending the musicale given by Misses Dorcas and Ruth Bartlett of Putnam and of the Swarthmore Chautauqua circuit, in Knowlton Memorial Hall at Warrenville, Saturday evening.

To natural charm of presence and sincerity of character these young ladies add very unusual talent and a remarkable adaptability to each other, whether it be in song by one while the other accompanies with piano, or the Irish harp, or banjo or ukele; or in vocal duets with single or double accompaniment, or in musical monologe with alternate accompaniment, their co-operation in technique and in spirit is very engaging and soon wins the audience, frequently with enthusiastic applause. Their selections were up to date, also.

It was announced that the next entertainment under the auspices of the Ashford Welfare Association will be a popular lecture by Rev. James Gordon Gilkey of Springfield, Mass., on some social topic to be announced. This announcement was greeted with hearty applause as Dr. Gilkey's Sunday morning sermons are often broadcast, and it is stated that his radio audience now exceeds 40,000 including many in Warrenville and vicinity. His address at Warrenville will be followed by a social programme, especially for the young people.

This week Wednesday evening, April 22, there is to be an open meeting of the local Grange, at Knowlton Memorial hall, beginning at 7:15 for special discussion of plans for the definite development of certain agricultural advantages for the Ashford community. The discussion will be led by Professor B. W. Ellis and I. G. Davis of Connecticut Agricultural College. The meeting is public.

DECLINE TO ACCEPT THE CLARK ART COLLECTION

New York, April 20.—The board of trustees of the Metropolitan Museum of Art this afternoon, by unanimous vote, declined to accept the request of an art collection valued at approximately $3,000,000 left by the late William A. Clark, of Montana.

The trustees in their resolution stated that they were constrained to decline acceptance of the said property under the terms of Mr. Clark's will. They said, however, that they would gladly accept many of the art objects if the conditions of their acceptance art collection was not accepted by the Metropolitan Museum if would go to the Corcoran Gallery in Washington.

The trustees explained that their reason for declining the gift was that it would require facilities which the museum lacks. The former United States senator in his will stipulated that the collection must be accepted as a unit and suitably housed toget-

DEAN INGE DELIVERED THE LYMAN BEECHER LECTURE

New Haven, April 20.—Introduced by President James R. Angell, of Yale, as the greatest ecclesiastical scholar of Great Britain, the Very Rev. William Ralph Inge, of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, this afternoon delivered the first of his series of Lyman Beecher lectures on preaching at the sixteenth annual convocation of the Yale divinity school.

The lecture was given before an audience that included both the members of the Divinity school and a large number of prominent clergymen who had made long trips in many cases to hear Dean Inge on the occasion of his first American appearance in 17 years. Those who attended expecting that the English scholar would touch on the tendencies of modern preaching were not disappointed for the dean severely criticised what he termed the desire on the part of many clergymen for applause.

Except for this part of the lecture and several references to current problems concerning which he declared that we cannot find in the New Testament any detailed guidance for the problems of modern civilization, we can only find general principles which we have to apply as best we can." Dean Inge confined himself to a scholarly array of material taken from the Gospel to show the growth of the art of preaching.

NORWICH TOWN

At the Sunday morning worship at the First Methodist Episcopal church, the pastor, Rev. James B. Aldrich, preached from Revelations 5:9. And they sang a new song saying — Thou are worthy to take the books and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue and people and nation.

Because of the severe rain storm, the evening preaching service was combined with the Young People's Christian Endeavor service, when Rev. Mr Aldrich gave a brief talk. Miss Theodora Brown was the leader and the topic was, My Denomination, Its History and Principles, with Scripture references in Acts and Timothy.

Rev. Edwin G. Crowdis, pastor of Taftville Congregational church, preached Sunday morning at the First Congregational church in exchange with the pastor, Rev. Gurdon P. Bailey. The text of Rev. Mr. Crowdis' sermon was Hosea 6:3. Then shall we know, if we follow on to know the Lord. His going forth is prepared as the morning, and He shall come unto us as the rain, as the latter and former rain unto the earth. Special significance was given the first part of the verse.

During the Sunday school period, which followed morning worship, the C. I. C.'s Miss Louise Hopping's class of young women, were in charge of the opening exercises, which included dramatization of incidents" in Miss Alice Huegins' office in China. Miss Huegins is principal of a girls' boarding and training school at Tunghsien. The Young People's Christian Endeavor service at 6 o'clock, had for its topic "Our Denomination." This was in charge of the information committee, George F. Hyde, chairman.

The mid-week prayer service of the Congregational church is to be omitted Thursday evening, on account of the closing lecture by Dr. M. A. Honabe in Trinity Methodist church, Norwich.

Mrs. Charles F. Tufts, who has been spending a few weeks with relatives in New Haven, returned the latter part of the week, and is now located at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sherry of Otrobando avenue.

Pile Sufferers

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know why ointments do not give you quick and lasting relief?

Why cutting and operations fail?

Do you know the cause of piles is internal?

That there is a stagnation of blood in the lower bowels?

Do you know that there is a harmless internal tablet remedy discovered by Dr. Leonhardt and known as HEMROID, now sold by Lee & Osgood and druggists generally, that is guaranteed to relieve the internal cause, by freeing blood circulation in the lower bowel. NORWICH Y. M. C. A. CAMPAIGN TEAMS RAISED FUND OF $11,500 YESTERDAY

REV. MYRON E. GENTER
Who Congratulated Workers.

Five teams in a whirlwind campaign Monday raised a total of $11,500 for the annual budget of the Norwich Y. M. C. A., as shown by the team reports given Monday evening at the association building. The amount raised Monday is nearer $12,000 as there are a number of pledges secured during the evening that were not reported to Campaign Leader James L. Case and it is expected that the entire amount of $13,000 asked for will be reported in either today (Tuesday) or tomorrow. While the campaign officially came to an end with the team reports Monday evening a number of workers will remain on the job for the next couple of days until the full amount is raised.

Bright and early Monday morning the team workers started out from the association building for the day's activities. This was immediately after the breakfast served at the association hall by a committee of women in charge of Mrs. Edwin Hill, wife of General Secretary Edwin Hill. The team workers met at noon for luncheon served under the direction of a committee of women from the United Congregational church with Mrs. William H. Dawley as chairman. The final gathering was at 6:30 o'clock at which time supper was served by the women of Park Congregational church, Mrs. S. F. Smiley, chairman of the committee.

At the breakfast gathering there was a stirring address on campaign work by Harry Hadley Smith, of New Haven, state secretary of the Y. M. C. A. Secretary Smith gave a red hot talk on the successful carrying out of a financial campaign. He said in his talk that first of all the workers must believe in the cause they are aiding. Secondly they must have a definite goal and lastly they must have the willingness to sacrice to attain their goal.

General Chairman Shepard E. Palmer presided at the supper gathering, and Rev. Myron E. Genter, the recently appointed district superintendent of the Norwich District of the M. E. church, offered the blessing. During the course of the supper there was spirited singing of popular songs under the leadership of James L. Case, the campaign leader. Just before the team reports were given Rev. Mr. Genter addressed the gathering briefly stating how pleased he was to become a resident of Norwich. He said he was delighted to meet such a fine body of men as the campaign team workers and congratulated the Y. M. C. A. on its excellent record of the past year. The various team reports were then given.

The campaign leaders, who worked far into the evening, checking up the various team reports, expressed their appreciation to the large number of people who made contributions and pledges to the fund.

Speaking of the campaign Monday evening General Secretary Hill said the entire day was an enthusiastic one and that all the team workers made a splendid showing. The men will still be out for a couple of days calling on Norwich people whom they found it impossible to see Monday and the indications are that the full amount will be raised before the middle of the week.

CHAPMAN WILL PRESENT APPEAL FOR PARDON

Gerald Chapman will go before the state board of pardons on June 4, if permitted, 17 days before the date set for his execution, and request a commutation of sentence, it was announced Saturday by Judge Frederick J. Groehl and Nathan O. Freedman of his counsel. Following an interview with Chapman at the state prison, the lawyers were in telephonic communication with Harry W. Reynolds, clerk of the board of pardons, as a result of which a petition in the condemned man's behalf will be filed with the board this week.

A request for a pardon before the supreme cout has decided upon an appeal is an unusual procedure, but it is made in this instance, according to Judge Groehl, because there will be no other meeting of the board of pardons until next December. Work on the appeal of the supreme court will proceed in the meantime, but it has been determined that the supreme court will not be able to take up the Chapman case until long after the date set for Chapman's hanging for the murder of Policeman James Skelly at New Britain, Oct. 12 last.

The board of pardons is composed of Governor Trumbull, Judge Howard J. Curtis of the supreme court, David S. Day of Bridgeport, Sheriff Frank H. Tuckington of Morris, S. B. Overlock of Pomfret and Rollin U. Tyler of Haddam.

WHEELER BILL ADVOCATES REFUSE TO ACCEPT DEFEAT

Hardford, April 20—Any attempt to delay action on the Wheeler prohibition enforcement bill when it reaches the house of representatives from the senate Wednesday, will be opposed by House Leader Benjamin W. Alling. He said today that, since the senate, by an overwhelming vote, had defeated the bill, it could not become a law, and the sooner the house disposed of it the better, as several other major issues are pending. As long as the senate adheres to its action in rejecting the bill, no action of the house can save it.

It is understood that efforts were made by the proponents of the bill, over the week-end, to marahal enough strength to force a reconsideration tomorrow of the senate's rejection of the bill, but that they found it impossible to raise a majority. Some of the leading sponsors of the Wheeler bill are said to have predicted that they expect to capture the house for it and then to request a conference with the senate in an effort to bring about reconsideration by the senate.

MEMBER OF SCHOOL BOARD GUILTY LIQUOR LAW VIOLATION

Hamden Conn., April 20—In one of the longest trials ever held in Hamden, Samuel A. Flight, for ten years a member of the Hamden school board, today was guilty of the illicit manufacture of liquor on land he owns in Hamden. He was fined $200 and costs. His attorney filed notice of an appeal and bonds were fixed at $500.

The state offered 25 witnesses and numerous exhibits in an attempt to connect Flight with a distilling plant found on the rear of his premises. Flight claimed that part of the building was rented to another man who said he wished to use it as a garage and that he, Flight, received no benefit from the plant except the monthly rental.

SAMUEL GOLDWYN TO WED FRANCES HOWARD

New York, April 20.—Samuel Goldwyn, film producer, in ten days is to marry Frances Howard, the actress who played the part of the flapper in "The Best People," and who has appeared in "The Swan," and with Richard Dix in "Too Many Kisses." This was learned today after the marriage license was obtained in Jersey City. The couple first met at a dinner given by Conde Nast four weeks ago.

"It all has happened so quickly," Miss Howard said. "We decided to get married the first evening we had been together."

FIRE IN N. Y. C. SHOPS IN EAST BUFFALO

Buffalo, N. Y., April 20—The paint shop in the New York Central car shops at East Buffalo was burned tonight with an estimated loss of $50,000. Gallant work of the railroad fire department in promptly closing fire doors and manning hose prevented a general conflagration.

The burning of the paint shop was spectacular and attracted thousands of motorists. Police reserves of the city were ordered out. All fire apparatus on the east side of Buffalo was summoned to the fire.

Hose laid across the tracks delayed traffic on the New York Central and the Erie.

Two thermometers weighing a little over three ounces when placed on a metal tape line used in precise surveying, may shorten the tape enough to affect the results.

Important to all Women Readers of This Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.

C. L. MELLOR WINS BOSTON MARATHON BEATING OUT DeMAR, WHO IS SECOND

Boston, April 20—Charles L "Chuck" Mellor, 21 year old Chicago mechanic, fulfilled a long-cherished ambition today when he won the American marathon, annual feature event of the Boston Athletic association. Running against a bitter northeast wind that blew diagonally across the course, in a temperature that hovered only a few degrees above the freezing point, Mellor covered the long Olympic distance, 26 miles, 385 yards, from Hapinton to Boston, in two hours, 33 minutes and three-fifths of a second. His time was only three minutes and 30 2-5 seconds lower than the record set for the distance last year by Clarence H. DeMar. The victory carried with it the National Amateur Athletic Union Marathon championship.

DeMar, 37 year old Melrose, Mass., superstar and marathon veteran, who four times has captured the Boston marathon, finished second, just 36 2-5 seconds behind Mellor, who wore the colors of the Illinois A. C., third was Frank Zuna, Newark plumber and former winner. Fourth was Albert [illegible], East Porchester, N. Y., veteran runner.

Three of the first dozen runners to finish were members of the Finnish-American A. C., New York, two came [illegible] and two more came from East Porchester, N. Y.

The first dozen to finish with their [illegible] were:

1—Charles P. Mellor, Illinois A. C., Chicago, 2 hours, 33 mins., 2-5 sec.

2—Clarence H. DeMar, Melrose, 2 hours, 33 mins., 37 sec.

3—Frank Zuna, Newark, N. J., 2 hours, 35 mins.

4—Whitney Michelson, Cygnet A. C., Portchester, N. Y., 2 hours, 37 mins., 2 sec.

5—Carl Koski, Finnish-American A. C., New York, 2 hours, 39 mins., 26 sec.

6—Willie Kyronen, Finnish-American A. C., New York, 2 hours, 40 mins., 24 sec.

7—Victor McAulay, Schubenacadie Hants county, N. S., 2 hours, 42 mins., 14 sec.

8—Nester Erickson, Finnish-American, A. C., New York, 2 hours 43 mins., 6 sec.

9—Bill Kennedy, Cygnet, A. C., Portchester, N. Y., 2 hours, 43 mins., 46 sec.

10—Frank E. Wendling, Buffalo, N. Y., 2 hours, 43 mins., 49 sec.

11—Silas McLellan, Noel, Hants county, N. S., 2 hours, 49 mins., 57 secs.

12—Carl Linder, Boston A. A., 2 hours, 50 mins., 33 sec.

13—J. Foxcroft, Carleton; 14, George Duncan, Dorchester; 16, Thomas P. Quinlan, Medford; 16, Horatio E. Stanton, Westerly, R. I.; 17, Hugo Kauppinen, Kaleva, A. C., New York; 18, Ralph E. Mamma, Ohio State university; 19, George H. Johnston, New York; 20, William Rossett, Milrose, A. A., New York; 21, Ralph Smith, Dorchester; 22, Christopher Bolekos, Osterville, Mass., A. A.

For Mellor the victory came as a reward for long continued effort. The Chicagoan raced in the marathon in 1917—and came in fifth. He tried again in 1922, and finished second, behind Frank Zuna. He raced once more in 1924 and again finished second following DeMar to the tape.

His triumph this year was the climax of an unusual race. Although 121 were entered, cold weather forced many out before the start. The field of 95 who started with the gun from Tebeau's farm in Hopkinton faced a bitter, bleak wind that shipped snow flurries into the faces of the runners.

In the first four miles, Schou Christensen, Chicago "dark horse" who failed to finish, had passed out to the front. DeMar, McAulay and Mellor pressed him closely. Then came Michelsen, Wendling, Thomas P. Henigen (who also failed to finish), and Kyronen.

At nine miles the leaders were ahead of the record by 5 seconds. Christensen was still in front and behind trailed De Mar, McAuley and Wendling. Mellor was farther back. McAuley gradually worked to the front and at Wellesley, 12 miles from the start, was out ahead. Three miles farther, at Newton Lower Falls, six men were bunched with McAuley, first, De Mar second, Michelsen third, Mellor fourth, Wendling fifth and Kyronen sixth. As they passed this station, only twenty feet separated the leader from the sixth man. In the opinion of observers a similar grouping at this stage of the race was unprecedented.

At this time Mellor all but dropped out. A sudden weakness would, however, be spook off and climbed up to the front less than a mile farther on. Michelsen had then moved into second place with De Mar third but a few feet in the rear. McAuley dropped back to fourth. So they were grouped as they started the long climb over the Newton hills.

Mellor clung to his lead as the record was passed with De Mar close behind and followed by Michelsen, Zuna Kyronen and Koski. Just past the twentieth mile Christensen dropped out. Within three miles of the finish De Mar attempted to challenge Mellor for the lead but, unable to make it, was content to drop back and finish second—rather than risk the chance of not finishing at all.

All of the runners finished in strong form. But nearly all complained of the numbing cold which, they said, half paralyzed their limbs. Mellor said that the cold did not affect him seriously to [illegible] arms and hands.

"I just ran the best race I could," he said afterwards, "and when De Mar did not pass me near the end I was sure I had won."

Mellor took no nourishment during the race. He allowed a breakfast of coffee, raisins, toast and tea, to carry him the marathon's six odd miles. And he finished strong in excellent condition save for a pair of small blisters.

The runners finished in remarkably good condition, according to [illegible] who examined them before and after the race. Mellor lost nine pounds during the course of the race and De Mar but one half pound on the average, the men lost only one half pounds each, he said, and explained that the extreme cold had forced perspiration to a minimum. Preparations made for the low loss of weight. Mellor especially showed [illegible] in the final examination.

INDIANS NOSE OUT TIGERS IN 15 INNINGS

Detroit, Mich., April 20—Cleveland won a 15 inning baseball game here, 5 to 4, largely through a home run by Burns in the third inning, driving in Stephenson ahead of him, and the good pitching of Karr, who relieved Uhle in the seventh. Detroit failed to hit effectively, although Manager Cobb rushed all his reserve forces into the game making his own first appearance of the season in the seventh inning when he batted for Holloway.

Johnson, also pitched great ball, but lost control in the fifteenth when he walked Speaker to start the inning. J. Sewell sacrificed and Myatt struck out. Stephenson was walked purposely to bring up Knode. Johnson failed to get the ball over to either Knode or Fewster, forcing the winning run across the plate. Karr forced Knode.

Yale Bowling Captain

New Haven, April 20—C. A. Moore, of Louisville, Ky., was elected captain of next year's Yale bowling team this afternoon. He has been manager of the team this year and secretary of the intercollegiate bowling league.

LOCAL BOY PROVING SENSATION OF NEWARK INTERNATIONAL BALL CLUB

Joe Faber, local boy who was sold by the Baltimore club to Newark in the International League, is proving the sensation of the Bears according to press reports of the first few games. During the training season Faber showed that he had plenty of ability in the infield but Manager Onslow was very doubtful as to his stick work. However in the opening game in which Newark won, 8 to 6 from Syracuse, Faber was the big factor in getting his team off to a good start.

In this game, Faber with two singles and a home run accounted for four of the Bears' runs, a feat that immediately labeled him as a dangerous hitter. This opening performance was by no means a flash in the pan for he has continued his hitting right along and Newark is now fighting up among the leaders.

In the field Faber is recognized as one of the best shortstops in the International League, not barring the high-priced Boley of the Baltimore Orioles. If anything Faber's work at short is even better than the famed Boley's. If Jack Dunn had been able to dispose of Boley at the fabulous price that was asked, Faber would be filling the shortfield berth for the Orioles this season. All that has held Faber back has been his inability to hit consistently but he seems to have found his batting eye and is now well up among the .400 class. If his stick-work continues to improve it would not be surprising to see some big league team snap up Faber for next season if not later this year.

A Newark paper has the following to say about Faber's work in the first game:

"Joe Faber, stocky little shortstop of the Newark Bears, is making good on all the nice things that have been said about him. Joe was recognized as a classy fielder the first day he donned a Newark uniform at the spring training camp, but there was some doubt that he would hit consistently. He showed he was an ambitious, conscientious youngster, however, and the veteran players with the Newark club predicted he would develop into a reliable hitter. Yesterday in the first game of the season his stick work featured the 8 to 6 triumph scored by the Bears over the Syracuse Stars.

"In the opening frame with Clark and Onslow perched on the sacks as the result of a pass and a single, Faber drove in two runs with a single to right. Previous to that the Bears' manager had scored Whitman, the latter getting on with a single, the first of the season.

Again in the fourth frame Faber came to the plate. This time, Frank Sigafoos was on third base, having blasted a triple to right, and Faber sent him scampering home and followed himself, making a circuit drive to deep right. The following frame saw Faber at the plate again and he came through with another hit, a single, but nobody was on base. Driving four of his team's eight runs is a performance that is not to be slighted."

The Holes in the Lawn

Hold judgment till you know you know
The reason that a thing is so.
—Jimmy Skunk.

Mrs. Skunk was most polite during her call on Mrs. Brown in the latter's kitchen. When at last she walked out she left a hostess with most mixed feelings. You would have known could you have heard her sigh as Mrs. Skunk's big plumey tail disappeared outside. At the same time she was greatly pleased at what had happened. Mrs. Skunk had proved herself a real lady and Mrs. Brown recognized the fact.

"Confound those skunks!" exclaimed Farmer Brown ruefully

"Well, I never!" she exclaimed. "That Skunk made herself at home here for all the world as if she thought I was glad to have her. I'll say this much, she certainly was well-mannered."

"Haven't I told you over and over again that if you treat a Skunk right the Skunk will treat you right?" asked Farmer Brown's Boy. "Jimmy Skunk and I are friends, and now I guess you and Mrs. Skunk are friends. She is living under the hen house and I have an idea you'll see her often."

Farmer Brown's Boy was right. Mrs. Skunk formed the habit of making morning calls at the kitchen door every day, and though never again did she find the kitchen door left open she always found a good breakfast awaiting her in a dish beside the doorstep, and often Mrs. Brown stood and talked to her while she ate.

Now in front of Farmer Brown's house was a lawn in which he took much pride. He kept the grass closely cut through the summer so that it was smooth and velvety. One morning he noticed some little mounds of earth scattered over it. With a frown on his face he went to look at them. Each little mound of earth was from a small hole three or four inches deep. Some one had been digging on that lawn in the night and Farmer Brown knew who that some one was. At least he was quite sure he did.

That night the moon shone brightly and Farmer Brown and his boy watched. By and by they saw Jimmy Skunk come out on the lawn and with his nose to the ground slowly walk about this way and that. Presently he stopped and began to dig. When he stopped digging he appeared to be busy about something for a moment or two and then went on to do the same thing over again. A few minutes later Mrs. Skunk appeared and began doing the same thing.

"Confound those Skunks!" exclaimed Farmer Brown ruefully. "They are digging the whole lawn up. I wish I knew what they are getting. I hate to have the appearance of that lawn ruined, but there is the chance that they may actually be doing more good than harm. Just see how calmly and methodically they go about it. It is evident enough that they are not digging for nothing, for every time they stop digging they seem to have found something."

The next morning part of that lawn was pitted all over with little holes, the work of Jimmy and Mrs. Skunk the night before. It looked worse than it really was, for Farmer Brown's Boy had only to take a rake and push the earth back into those little holes and the grass would soon spread over them. But for the time being that part of the lawn was a sorry looking place. Yes, sir, it certainly was a sorry looking place.
